SUMMARY.

There is reason to believe that the most dangerous stage of the German punitive expedition against Roumania has passed.

Some correspondents, however, declare that the crisis has not yet permanently passed.

The Roumanians are still holding the frontier positions. Bitter fighting has developed in places.

The Roumanians are driving back the enemy in the passes, and have taken 500 prisoners.

The enemy was driven beyond the frontier at the Predeal Pass.

An advance towards the Scara Pass was also stopped.

A Hungarian report says that large bodies of Russian troops have appeared on the Roumanian front.

A German communique states: We have had successful fights at the entrance to the Roumanian passes.

Mr. Bonar Law stated in the House of Commons that the situation in Roumania had been anxiously considered by the Allies.

Everything possible was being done, he said, but it was not desirable to make any further statement at present.

The "Morning Post's" Petrograd correspondent says: During this month or early in November we shall reach the climax on the Russian front.

Turkish troops have appeared in the Struma sector, east of Salonica.

The Allies continue to act very firmly in Greece, and are forcing the Greeks adequately to police Athens.

King Constantine was conciliatory during an audience which he gave to Sir Francis Elliott, the British Ambassador.

The King fully explained the concentration of Greek troops at Larissa.

He said he was disposed to withdraw his forces with the view of inducing the Allies to abrogate their latest measures.

M. Venizelos has informed the Entente Ministers that he can no longer co-operate with King Constantine.

Rain is again falling on the Western front. British raiders entered trenches at Loos and south of Arras.

Sir Douglas Haig reports: In the area between Thiepval and Le Sars we have gradually won a series of strong positions.

Lieut.-col. Maurice says the British are now fighting for a jumping-off place, from which they may attack Bapaume.

They have organised their gains at Sailly and Saillisel.

The Germans state that unimportant gains have been obtained by the English north of Eaucourt l'Abbaye and Gueudecourt.

They also admit gains by the French at Sailly and Saillisel, and between Biaches and Maisonette.

The German Embassy in Washington admits that the submersible Bremen has been lost.

"The Australian divisions in France are far below strength, and drafts are not arriving in sufficient numbers," the cable read.

"The cable message," said Mr. Hughes, "is a crushing refutation of the statements that men are not needed."

Mr. Hughes in an appeal says: "Let us prove ourselves worthy kinsmen of the Anzacs by voting 'Yes' to send them reinforcements."

A special "Gazette" was issued last night proclaiming Saturday, October 28, a public holiday throughout New South Wales.

Mr. Watkins said the Australian troops in the trenches were imbued with the one idea, that they were there to win the war.

Several members of the party considered conscription was absolutely necessary to maintain the fighting strength of the forces.

The president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce states that the merchants are united on the question of compulsory service.

The attitude of the chambers is, he remarks, that they are supporting the Federal Government by every means in their power.

The Suburban and Country Golf Association has issued an appeal to members of sporting clubs urging them to vote "Yes."

Archbishops Riley (Anglican) and Clune (R.C.), on active service, have cabled their advocacy of compulsory service.

Seven men were fined at Moree for interrupting a conscription meeting which was being addressed by the Postmaster-General.

Reinforcements, consisting of two officers and 26 air mechanics, are to be despatched monthly for the Australian Flying Corps.

The work of the Exemption Courts proceeded smoothly yesterday, a large number of claims being dealt with.

The principal ground on which exemption was granted was that of the applicants being only sons.

The hearing of jury causes at the Supreme Court concluded yesterday, all the cases in the list having been disposed of.

A coroner's inquiry was held at Lockhart into the circumstances of the fires at the wheat stacks on the 14th inst.

Several witnesses expressed the view that the fires were not caused accidentally.

The scheme devised in Melbourne to "pool" the butter supplies has been adopted by all the producing States.

The Government has decided not to subsidise the fees paid by hospital patients.

An industrial and models exhibition is to be held in the old Sydney goods shed, adjoining the Railway Institute.

The Governor-General spent yesterday at Liverpool Camp. His Excellency said the standard of discipline had greatly improved.

A proposal was placed before the Y.M.C.A. convention yesterday to raise £30,000 as a permanent national endowment.

The establishment of an efficiently organised college for the training of officers was also proposed.

The Lord Mayor tendered a civic reception to Mr. J. J. Virgo in the Town Hall yesterday.

Mr. Virgo said he failed to understand how a call like that which now came could remain unanswered.

The residents of the Tweed River district were presented a battle-plane to the British Government.

Michael Herbert Kennedy, the third man arrested in connection with the Tottenham tragedy, was acquitted.

An improved turnover was recorded for industrial scrip on the Stock Exchange yesterday, but values were still irregular.

The Mining market was rather brisk, and, though values eased in the morning, they hardened somewhat in the afternoon.

Mount Lyell May Deep shares recovered owing to £10,000 having been secured on debentures, with the right to take up their value in shares.

TYPICAL OF AN "AUSTRAL" SAC SUIT TO MEASURE.

In any company of well-dressed men will be found those who are more noticeable on this account than others—men who are singled out at a glance because of the conspicuously good style which is characteristic of their dressing.

This character in a man's clothes does not readily lend itself to definition, although it is quite tangible and definite—expressing as it does a high standard of the Tailors' Craft and the Cutters' Art and Skill.

And just such a character as this it is that typifies an "AUSTRAL" SAC SUIT TO ORDER, by whoever worn—and in whatever company.

Customers who live at a distance may judge from patterns, selected with discriminating taste, and sent post free to any address on request.

"AUSTRAL" SAC SUITS TO ORDER, 3 guineas, 70/, 75/, 4 guineas, 95/, 5 guineas, 115/, 6 guineas, 137/, 7 guineas.

A SPRING CLEANING

In the SPRINGTIME the Young Man's thought lightly turn to LOVE, and the GOOD HOUSEWIFE to SPRING CLEANING—an anarchical but necessary process. It is without doubt a TIME of UNREST, and PATERFAMILIAS, if he be a wise man, will make DISCRETION the better part of VALOUR, and cover retreat to the TOOLSHED or CLUB with the SOFT WORDS that turneth away WRATH; for it is a TIME of WAR—a War against DIRT and its DANGERS, the Wily SPIDER and his cunningly-contrived ENTANGLEMENTS.

"Vae victis!" Woe to the conquered.

The main line of ATTACK, however, is on the FLOOR COVERINGS, and HIGH DEBATE will then be held as to the advisableness of REPLACING any which are too obviously WORN-OUT and UNHYGIENIC. The Lady will probably recall as DECISIVE that there is nothing makes a Man a HOME BIRD so much as an ATTRACTIVE HOUSE, easily furnished with DAINTY CARPETS.

In the PUBLIC interest, we think it only RIGHT and FIT, in this connection, to announce that EVERY SHADE and GRADE of FLOOR COVERING may be found in the COMMODIOUS CARPET SECTION of our MAMMOTH STORE, and having consideration to OLD MONTAIGNE'S dictum that "the Housewifely Virtue which is most required is the ECONOMICAL one," we may point the MORAL of our Story by drawing ATTENTION to the IMMENSE ADVANTAGE that is known to accrue through

AXMINSTER CARPET.

SOLD BY THE YARD.

A celebrated Art Fashion writer says:—"An Axminster Carpet indicates a high degree of refinement in furnishing, and its enduring quality gives it a strong recommendation." This praise is certainly deserved, for in no other fabric for floor covering approximating to the price can the same delicately soft, rich, bloomy effect be attained.

The excellence of the Axminster Carpets we offer, both from the point of artistic merit and from that of extreme durability, is beyond question.

With borders to match, 6/9, 7/6, 8/9 per yard.

STAIR CARPET.

This is the old-fashioned name for a style of Carpet which modern usage has largely elaborated. Stair Carpet is made in various fabrics, and applied to many purposes besides that of carpeting stairs. For instance, Bed Surrounds, Billiard Table Surrounds, and Runners to lay down in Halls, are made of the Carpets enumerated in the following list, which are so largely used for Corridors and similar places.

AXMINSTER, on account of its deep pile, makes a luxurious Stair or Hall Carpet. Included in our immense stock are beautiful Eastern designs in rich Crimson grounds, which, when laid, impart an air of warmth and cosiness to the ensemble. There are also conventional designs in shades of Brown, Fawn, Grey, and other colours, suitable for the requirements of modern furnishing. We invite inspection.

ANNOUNCEMENT FOR THE CRITERION.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4.

It was with feelings of thanksgiving and delight that we learned that it was probable that the magnificent play by Brieux entitled "Les Avaries" would be staged in Sydney under the title, "Damaged Goods." Please God it may.
—The Christ Church S. Laurence Monthly Paper for October.

"The Greatest Contribution ever made by the Stage to the Cause of Humanity."

J. C. WILLIAMSON, LTD., announce

(by permission of the Chief Secretary, Mr. George Black, M.L.A., who strongly urges its production)

The Famous Propagandist Play,

DAMAGED GOODS,
DAMAGED GOODS,

By EUGENE BRIEUX,
Member of the French Academy.

APPROVED BY RELIGION, SCIENCE, AND GOVERNMENT.

The Published Play is now on Sale Nightly at Her Majesty's, and the Criterion, Price 1/6. Also on sale at all Booksellers.

The play ought to be staged as a serious contribution to public education.—Mr. Matthews, M.H.R., Chairman of the Federal Committee of Inquiry into Venereal Diseases.

I consider that the Australian public are under a deep debt of gratitude to the J. C. Williamson Company for their courageous and patriotic action in placing Brieux's play, "Damaged Goods," on the stage.—Dr. Arthur, M.L.A., Chairman of the Select Committee for Inquiry into the Prevalence of Venereal Diseases.

At the last executive meeting of the Women's National Movement we passed a resolution in favour of having the play "Damaged Goods" produced in Sydney.—Mrs. David, President of the Women's National Movement.

"Damaged Goods" is, in my opinion, a distinct contribution towards correcting the results that must ever come from ignorance and false sentiment.—Rev. Robt. B. S. Hammond, Pres. N.S.W. Temperance Alliance.

PALMER CORD TYRES
ARE BRITISH MADE,
ARE BRITISH MADE,

—they do not compete with foreign makes—because they are made to sustain a reputation—not to meet a price. They are built upon a foundation of rubber impregnated cords—there is no canvas in them—therefore, they are less liable to puncture when used on badly-kept country roads. If you want the most economical tyre you will use Palmer Cords.

A NEW CAR depreciates from one-third to one-half the first year. A good, guaranteed, rebuilt Car, bought at the right price, is a profitable investment that, after years of service, only shows a low rate of depreciation. We have Rebuilt and Soiled Cars that have had very little use, going for half or less than half their original cost, and are good for years of use. We have sold hundreds of cars, and can refer you to satisfied clients throughout the country.

We are not dealers in Cars in the ordinary sense, as we do not buy second-hand Cars.

We have some of the best of new European and American Cars on hand for sale, and could arrange to take your small Car as part payment.

Should you write or call in we would be pleased to supply you with price lists of all these Cars. Some we can sell on terms.

IMPORTERS OF MOTOR CARS.

Quite a proportion of Sydney Motorists have an unconquerable preference for a high-grade British or Continental Car. None of the best makes are procurable at present, most of the factories are making Lorries or Munitions.

We are Agents for the STAR and B.S.A. Cars, also the high grade French CLEMENT BAYARD, but we cannot get one of these makes at present for love or money.

We suggest to our customers that they should pick up a good Second-hand Car, to use until after the war. Depreciation will be a small item, and will be amply compensated for by the lower prices sure to prevail for European Cars after the war, not to speak of the many improvements in details and design.

We have quite a nice range of Second-hands STAR, 5-seater, £175; Italian Spa, 5-seater, just overhauled, £225; STARS, single-seater, £200 and £225; Cadillac, only done 11,000 miles, thoroughly overhauled, £270; Eight-cylinder Hollier, a really good 5-seater, just like new, £325. Write us about your wants, and we will send fuller particulars. Call if you can. Terms can probably be arranged for any Second-hand Car if desired.

"ALL OVER THE COUNTRY."

Traralgon, 2nd August, 1916.

Dear Sirs,—I feel it my duty to write you and also to send you some interesting photos relating to experiences with your "Buick" cars.

I must say that after extensive use under all conditions—a great deal of hire work and very heavy roads I have found them to give the utmost satisfaction. My work takes me through the wild rugged and boggy hills and roads from end to end of Gippsland, and I have been many times scooping up the mud with the running boards for miles at a stretch after weeks of rain and snow, but the "Buick" has always pulled through without a hitch.

It is an old saying down this way that if the "Buicks" cannot go—well then stay at home."

It is a most economical car to run. We have had petrol tests over long stretches of country, and have obtained with loads on up to 26 miles per gallon.

After having used "Buicks" for years, and having had exceptional opportunity of testing their merit, I can without hesitation state that this is the car for Colonial conditions, and it gives me very great pleasure to place on record the satisfaction I have gained from such cars.

(Signed) B. R. DUNBAR.

BUICKS BETTER THAN EVER.

The two new 1917 models are par excellence—better finished—better cars—more room—lighter in weight—less petrol used—longer tyre mileage—more power.

There's no truth in the report (put about by certain individuals) that Buicks intend dropping the six-cylinder car—in fact, we are led to believe there will be no alteration for 1918.

In 1916 Buicks were good.

Since—they have improved further still.

Two very good reasons why 476 orders have been received to date since the commencement of the six-cylinder model.

THE "MORRIS-COWLEY" LIGHT CAR. ENGLISH DESIGN.

There are many reasons why your choice of a car should favour the "MORRIS-COWLEY," chief of these being its low first cost and small cost of maintenance, both in petrol and tyres.

Its other advantages could be better explained by an actual demonstration. Will you call?

Some of its features are:—

ENGINE, 11.9 (69 x 100), 4-cylinder, water cooled, cylinder and top half of crank case in one piece, detachable aluminium bottom half, detachable cylinder head, valves of large diameter, and all on one side, adjustable tappets, three white metal bearings to crank-shaft, flywheel enclosed.

IGNITION: By high-tension variable type magneto, which is situated in an accessible position on the off side of the engine, and driven by a cross shaft, which is operated by a skew gear from timing wheel. A Bowden wire control fixed to the steering column operating the advance and retard.

CARBURETTOR is the well-known horizontal type "Zenith," bolted direct on to the cylinder, and controlled by a conveniently-placed foot accelerator pedal only.

CONTROL: Change speed lever and hand-brake are placed in the centre of chassis, and operated by left hand. This arrangement has the advantage of allowing entry to front seats by the use of a door on either side of the body.

WHEELS: Detachable, hollow pressed steel, size 700 x 80, five in number, fitted with 700 x 80 plain "Dunlop" tyres all round, including bolt valves.

THE SCHEBLER CARBURETTOR.
MADE IN AMERICA BY
WHEELER AND SCHEBLER.

The only mileage that interests the carburettor-wise motorist is the mileage HE can get. The only test that counts with him is the EVERY-DAY test ON HIS OWN CAR.

To set up isolated instances of big mileage as examples of what every motorist should expect can promote nothing but general dissatisfaction in the rank and file of car owners USING THE SAME MAKE OF CARBURETTOR.

Cars differ—drivers differ—conditions differ so greatly as to render it impossible to establish any fixed mileage standard.

SCHEBLER Carburettors have established an international reputation on their ability to show UNIFORMLY GOOD MILEAGE—year in and year out—winter and summer, on any good car, driven by any ordinary driver.

(CHRONICLED BY SIR HENRY LUCY.)

WESTMINSTER, Sept. 9.

Suggestion has been made that now, when the issue of the war daily becomes increasingly clear, the President of the United States will assume a determined attitude towards Germany in respect of breaches of international law on the high seas. It is not a generous conclusion, and is based upon misapprehension of facts. What President Wilson, contemplating a second candidature, has to fear is not Germany in Europe, but Germans domiciled in America. They are so numerous that organised opposition inspired by feelings of personal revenge for the President's flouting of the Fatherland would have, perhaps, crucial effect upon his chances at the poll. Up to the present time it has been the Irish vote a President seeking re-election has had to take into account. It is well known that in times past such consideration led to important modification of the policy of the United States towards Great Britain.

I recall a remarkable case brought under my notice in a letter from Mr. Phelps, some time American Minister at this Court. When he retired from the high position in which he had hob-nobbed with Princes, and been on terms of closest intimacy with European statesmen, he, in accordance with the simple Republican manner, went back to his home in New England, and took up the dropped threads of his modest business at the Bar. He would have been Chief Justice of the United States but for a circumstance that vividly illustrates the universality and potency of the Irish question. A year earlier than a vacancy occurred on the Bench some Irishmen indicted for a criminal offence were on trial. Mr. Phelps looked in at Court, and was invited by the Judge to take a seat on the bench. He happened to arrive just before the jury returned a verdict of guilty, and was on the bench when the Judge passed sentence. This innocent, unpremeditated, almost involuntary act gave deep offence to the Irish in America, and a President looking forward to a second term dared not appoint the most capable available jurist to the high position of Chief Justice.

Among war taxes one founded on the soundest principle, and imposing the least measure of burden upon individuals, is the impost upon excess profits. It seems incontestably reasonable that where traders or trading companies have doubled or trebled their income by profits arising directly out of war expenditure they should return some proportion to the Treasury. How stupendous some war games are may be illustrated in the report of a North of England iron and steel company for the past 12 months, a copy of which has reached me. The balance of profit shown in the accounts made up to the 30th June, 1915, was a trifle over £200,000. That covered a period of 10 months of the war. In the year ended 30th June last, throughout which the war had been in full swing, and the demand for munitions illimitable, the profits exceed £485,000. Out of such exceptional prosperity, arising directly out of the war, shareholders can well afford to pay toll towards its expenses.

The amount of taxation already realised in excess profits has far exceeded the estimate of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and will in the next Budget display a remarkable yield. Up to the end of August of an increase of nearly £45,000,000 paid into the Treasury in excess of last year it represented nearly one-half. Emboldened by this fruitfulness, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, revising his estimates of the revenue receipts for the financial year ending 31st March next, has put down this new tax for 86 millions; 15 millions more than Customs, 21 millions more than Excise, and 56 millions more than estate duties, which include the Chancellor's favourite of the flock—death duties. There are men living at the present day who remember a time when the proceeds of this tax, had they been available in equal amount, would of themselves have covered national expenditure as provided for in the Budget of the year.

Episodes in the Great War furnish subjects for the pencil of other artists than those who serve on the staffs of the English illustrated papers. America, France, Italy, and Spain have regular series of war pictures. Belgium, no home just now for its sons, has sent over to this country one of the most gifted, his cartoons drawn in London finding even wider circulation and greater influence than when his studio was located in Brussels. As far as I have seen these foreign papers I have come across no variation from hostile attitude towards the Central Powers and their Allies. A recent number of L'Asino, published in Rome, has a cartoon at once humorous and well-reasoned. The winged figure of Peace, addressing a group of soldiers representing England and her allies, points to a group of four men trudging past in chains, and says, "The first condition of Peace will be this." The leader of the chained captives is the German Emperor. Next comes the Emperor of Austria, thirdly the crowned Bulgarian adventurer, a decrepit little figure of Turkey bringing up the rear. The drawing lacks something of the artistic perfection that marks "Punch" cartoons. But the expression on the countenances of the criminals walking off to their place of punishment, and the hopeless despondency of their figures, are delightfully humorous.

The mystery that envelops Mr. Asquith's dealing with the question of the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland will, as far as the public are concerned, probably remain unsolved till the publication of letters and diaries written by Cabinet Ministers during the past month. What is known to the present generation is that, returning from a visit to Ireland following close upon the outbreak of rebellion in Dublin, the Premier emphatically announced his conviction that the system of Castle Government had finally broken down. He, naturally as it appeared, followed up this confession by accepting the resignation of Lord Wimborne without naming a successor. The episode closed with the appointment of Mr. Duke to be Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, there being no Lord Lieutenant in existence, a sympathetic touch of Irish humour that did credit to the receptivity of the Premier after less than a week's residence in the country. Some days later Parliament was perplexed and the country amazed, by announcement that Lord Wimborne had been reappointed to the Lord Lieutenancy. With exception of the disappearance from the scene of Mr. Birrell, and the stepping on to it of Mr. Duke, things were, once more, as they had been at the castle.

It is a remarkable thing, forgotten or little known, that the first English statesman to propose the abolition of the Lord Lieutenancy was Disraeli. Nor was the step taken at the period of his political career when, upon consideration, he thought assumption of Radicalism the most promising avenue for an able young man entering a political career. The proposal appears in a memorandum he submitted to Lord Derby at a time when, having renounced Radicalism, he was, to the active distrust and supreme disgust of magnates of the Tory party, specially taken under the wing of its otherwise trusted and indispensable chief. His scheme proposed a thorough reform of the system of Home Government. Apart from the item of the abolition of the Lord Lieutenancy, it has interest to-day by reason of the fundamental stipulation that the Cabinet should not exceed the number of ten. Lord Derby was not prepared to accept the revolutionary proposal of his brilliant young colleague. Nothing more was heard of it, not even when Disraeli, in the course of time, was himself called upon to form a Ministry, and had at hand the opportunity of embodying in actuality a dream of his middle-aged youth.

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

On Holiday.

RYDE (Isle of Wight), Aug. 24.

I chose Ryde for the couple of weeks' holiday I could allow myself, and I chose the Isle of Wight because in Ryde you see so much shipping, and the occupation of those who go down to the sea in ships. From my window I watch the ever-moving pageant of passing ships. The navy and the mercantile marine rub shoulders in these waters, the entrance to Portsmouth and Southampton. The whole of the sea traffic uses this passage—the eastward of the island—rather East than South Sea—and they command the coast stretching from Little Hampton towards Worthing. Ever and anon a large white steamer glides in, light, high out of water, with the Red Cross emblazoned on her hull, showing that her cargo is of pain-stricken men. These hospital ships may come in at any hour of the night; they pass swiftly through the prescribed course to Southampton, from whence the wounded are distributed to various hospitals. The light cases often come to Ryde, and are detailed to the many centres in the island. The streets are full of convalescents. Australian soldiers come here in no great numbers, and some of them are very lonely. They are well supplied with papers from their own colonies. I saw some fine-looking cavalry men, whom I imagine are here on leave. They are immensely admired, so fine, so tall, so springy of gait.

At night I love watching the naval searchlights, which exceed in power and in beauty anything we see on land. The great flashes of light sweep up and down the water, while from Portsmouth and Southsea and Southampton the sky is raked by great shafts of light with fluttering gleams of golden clouds flitting far from the central shaft. How those detached beams are managed I have no idea. It's a mysterious power.

Dress: Seaside Fashions.

It seems the custom to dress very simply at seaside resorts, and Ryde is no exception; but she aims at decorum. You see few young women with bared heads and legs. It's not quite that style of person who fancies Ryde, or the more exclusive places like Shanklin, Seaview, or Ventnor. The truth is that there are a great number of residents in these places—many retired naval and military families. While the wives of naval officers like coming here, and rent being absurdly low, they can live in embowered gardens and pretty old-world houses at a very moderate price. Gardens are sheer joy; all sorts of hot-house plants blossom freely out of doors, and at the moment the riot of blossom and foliage runs high. They have hedges of fuchsias here, while roses and ramblers, geraniums, begonias, rival each other in wealth of bloom. Thus you meet each morning in Union-street well, but simply, dressed ladies and nice children doing their shopping. The dressing, as a rule, is linen skirts and pretty blouses, worn under a silken sports coat, three-quarter length, with a loosely-tied sash of itself. Broad shady hats, very simply trimmed, complete the toilette. The newest sports coats are of silk yarn, and smocked near the waist. In fact, smocking is the rage of the hour. It is used wherever fulness has to be confined within a certain space. And as you know, it is never used with better advantage than in soft silk or satin.

I saw at Shanklin, which I visited since my arrival here, a gown which seemed admirable for its purpose. The wearer was a middle-aged woman, handsome and attractive. Her dress was of dull purple linen, with a bretelle bodice, worn over a blouse of thinner material matching in colour. Her coat was shot black and purple, knitted silk, with the usual sash, and a purple hat with wreath of deep green leaves and a large patterned purple lace veil. She looked indeed well, and the costume quite simple, and suitable for a morning's stay on a sea front. You often see white costumes, but always with the silken sports coat, sometimes matching in colour, very often in shades of pink, rose, purple, blue, and at times pale yellow. I wonder these lovely shades of yellow are not more often seen. Nothing is prettier than a yellow sports coat over a white gown, with a tender shade as a blouse over some pretty lace camisole.

At Shanklin I was struck with the fine waves that were rolling in—regular surf bathing—and I watched with admiration the way the smart young flappers were swimming a good way out against such rough sea. It is a splendid exercise. A young niece of mine has visibly broadened in shoulders since she came down and swam regularly every day. It is quite the rage to have children taught by a professional swimmer, and from what I saw of his older pupils who come each year I think it is money well spent. And especially in these days, when travelling at sea is fraught with so many dangers. I know how proficient in this exercise Australian girls are, and what fine opportunities your magnificent white beaches give for bathing and swimming. I remember even yet, in the late afternoon of my life, the bathing at the Semaphore on the Peninsula in South Australia, and how as a girl I gallantly battled with great surf and foaming ocean rollers at Port Elliot, one of the greatest thrills I ever had in bathing. You sun-grown people have much to be thankful for, and it is showing its effect in the magnificent men you have sent over to fight. The Australians, New Zealanders, and Canadians are the admiration of everyone. The sun and ample space have much to say for it.

Coming Fashion.

I know you will want to hear about our coming fashions, though no one wants this lovely season to go by too soon. It has been a positive luxury to wear pretty summer gowns, the flowered voiles, the silks, ninons, and the lovely mixture of black and white that still obtains so freely. I saw a gown of black Chantilly lace made up with a deep tunic over fine white organdi muslin, lightly flounced. It was quite delightful, so refined in tone and texture. With this, of course, was a black broad-brimmed lace hat, with shaded pink to crimson roses, and plenty of leaves. Always put with black and white a touch of rose red, even though you have paler tones in pink. Nothing looks as well. Velasquez, in the 16th century, found this out, and never failed to put it in his portraits.

I have seen an ingenious trimming, which may be useful when you are considering the making of lighter mourning. It was used on a widow's gown of silk crepon. The necessary crape was made up into leaves the shape of a bay leaf, and mounted on a silk-covered stem. They were long sprays, with the leaves about two inches long, made of crape, the edges just turned in, and slip-stitched with fine silk; the stem of thick piping cord covered with either silk or the material of the dress. They were extremely pretty, and, to me, new. You can follow the idea in sprays of black velvet leaves on satin stems, which would look well on lace or net gowns. A widow's hat with the dress I mention was trimmed with a big crape and silk rose in front, with two sprays of those leaves. They should be made of single crape, not the many dreadful things you often see sold for the purpose. The top of the hat was draped with one of the long French mourning veils, with woven border, which fell nearly to the hem of the gown. Owing to the prevalence of mourning in France, these veils are difficult to procure. A good one, of fine silk voile, costs 12s 6d. They are considered the right thing for widows to wear with their hats. You never see a widow's bonnet nowadays; the girl-widow wears a plain black hat with a broad brim, and a veil falling to the waist; plain, well-cut, but simple black gowns, not ultra short, full in the skirt, made of any black material; black glace silk, is much used this summer.

My young widowed hostess yesterday wore a black glace gown slightly open at the throat, with some soft tulle ruffling; round her neck was a fine gold chain, from which hung a miniature of her husband, killed last year at Neuve Chapelle. It was rather an Early Victorian style of dress, and suited the tall, slender girl well.

CONSCRIPTION.

FOR AUSTRALIA OR THE ENEMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The base of socialism is majority rule. There cannot be genuine equality within the State if majority rule does not prevail. It is the expression of "the will of the people." Yet to-day we find some socialists, to serve their personal ends, and to avoid any risk to their personal skins, running counter to their own doctrine.

Every socialist who is denouncing conscription—for the ample (to him) reasons just given—must be aware that the majority of the people favour it. There is ample evidence of that. To begin with, every soldier at the front believes in every man left behind being afforded the chance of doing his duty by his country and his own self-respect. (Neither counts for much with the blatant individuals who "demonstrate" against all men sharing fairly in the burdens as well as the benefits of Australian citizenship, although such participation is the very essence of socialism.) It is plain enough to all who read and move about that four-fifths of the people of the Commonwealth are of the same opinion as the soldiers. Not every man in the unions for which anti-conscriptionists affect to speak agrees with the stand taken. Most of them are as loyal as could be wished; but the many are held in bondage by the glib and abusive tongues of the few. They dare not protest because they cannot "talk back."

In the present international situation there is only one way of regarding those who oppose the putting forth of all our energies to defeat our enemy—who is also the world's enemy, the enemy of true progress, true socialism, and civilisation. They must be classed as disloyal. "He that is not for us is against us." They are disloyal to Australia, to the Empire, to socialism, and to humanity. Had the British everywhere—I am using the term British in its widest sense, including the people of the oversea dominions as well as of the motherland—adopted the same attitude as the persons to whom I am now referring, doing nothing for volunteering, and at the same time opposing conscription, Australia and all other outlying parts of the British Empire would have been under the German flag two years ago. Australians would immediately have become conscripts (in German service), not merely for the period of the war, but available for active service at any time. They would have found their wages reduced to the German level, and "preference for Germans" a stronger rule than "preference to unionists."

Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa stand to lose more by the success of Germany and Austria and their allies than any other part of the Empire. Canada would have one more fighting chance owing to absorption by the United States, though the freedom of the latter, with Britain down, would be for a brief period. (It would soon be discovered that what has maintained the Monroe Doctrine is not the huge chaotic population of the States, but the might of the British Navy.) The people of the British Isles would have to suffer the presence of troops of the Central Powers for a time, but would eventually be released upon payment of a huge indemnity, and would be free, though with diminished power and glory. Here we should be practically aliens in our own country, with another flag above us, and the iron laws of Prussianism ever eating into our souls.

The triumph of the Central Powers means the triumph and permanent maintenance of militarism in its worst form. Those who will not lift a hand to defeat our enemies must perforce be considered as working for them. That is the position in which anti-conscriptionists place themselves, and no amount of blast and blither on the stump will free them from it. Let "majority rule" prevail, and Australia will not be disgraced.

In conclusion, I would say to the anti-conscriptionist: In this crisis the question for every man is—"Are you for Australia or the enemy?" Obviously, you are for the enemy if you will do nothing to keep Australia out of his clutches. No mental dodging or mouthing of specious argument will relieve you of the stigma. And nothing will protect your memory from the curses of your children and your children's children should the worst befall—as it certainly would if all Australian British, New Zealand British, Canadian British, and Old Land British were equally false to their inheritance.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—"If only one-third the requirements are enlisting each man will have to do three men's work." This is an extract from the press report of Mr. Joseph Cook's speech at the great Town Hall meeting, and I ask leave to make a few remarks regarding same, based on personal experience. The chief aspect of warfare which is most prominently before the public, and of which they generally think of in connection with the trenches, is that of the great bombardments, the bayonet charges, the grim defences, and, in short, the actual struggle of a raging battle. One hears little of the long, weary fatigue parties. Nevertheless any men returned from Gallipoli can tell how, after being relieved in the early dawn, they would stagger out of the firing line, only to be told that 30 men were wanted at once for a fatigue party, perhaps for digging, perhaps for bringing up some commissariat, but in any event most certainly for solid, hard work, that might well tax men even fresh from a sound night's sleep under normal conditions. As I am in doubt whether it is permissible to give figures, I shall not do so, but it will suffice to say that weary and worn-out men had to be used over and over again purely and simply because every battalion was desperately below its strength. Every man who was at Anzac has seen men dragged from a sleep of pure exhaustion, and then seen them come up from the beach tottering under their loads. The sergeants pitied them, but as they one and all said, "What can I do." Withal it must be borne in mind the conditions of mental and physical strain under which work is carried on under the best conditions at the front. They looked to the sea for the coming of those who could have saved them, but who did not come, and so they worked until they fell by the wayside, and the sick lists for Australia increased daily. When I was in hospital in Egypt, a comrade wrote me from Malta: "I am not bombed or bayoneted; I am just a broken-down, overworked navvy, with a high temperature." One man was trying to do three men's work. If there is a necessity for longer hours and harder and more sustained individual labour, surely that necessity and that shortage should exist in Australia, and not at the front. It is only natural for returned soldiers to grow bitter on this question, but if, instead of using epithets, they calmly told of the necessity of men and more men from their own experience, I feel that the sincerity of their appeal should influence all who deserve to be outside an internment camp to vote "Yes" on October 28. Surely "necessity" is all that anyone needs to be convinced of. It is because of the grim and pitiful knowledge of that necessity in the past that I write this, and the Prime Minister has told us from definite information, of the necessity in the future. Never again let one man at the front be asked to do three men's work.

THE APPEAL TO WOMEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—At the anti-conscription meeting held at the Town Hall on Friday night Mrs. Dwyer is reported to have called on the women present "in the name of womanhood to vote solidly 'No' on October 28," and to have assured them "that Great Britain would not allow a single Australian to perish for lack of support." Mrs. Dwyer apparently recognises that the 40,000 Australian troops among "the two million British troops waiting on Salisbury Plains" will not suffice to reinforce the Australian divisions in the field till the end of the war. From the practical point of view she fails to realise the very important fact that every available British soldier is needed to support and replace his fellow countrymen already in the firing line, and that the adoption of her proposal—if acceptable—would result in a weakening of the British army just in proportion to the number of reinforcements which would have to be drawn from it to make good the wastage in the Australian divisions. But is it acceptable?

It seems to me that if ever the women of Australia have been called upon to do a dishonourable and despicable thing Mrs. Dwyer, if she is correctly reported, is calling upon them to do it now. They are asked to refuse their consent to the raising and despatch of necessary reinforcements, to refuse to stand by the men who have nobly volunteered to do the nation's work, and by the women who have lightheartedly sent them forth to do it, and this—on the plea that English soldiers will willingly do and die in order that Australian men and Australian women may go the event tenor of their ways, free, prosperous, and without care. Let women consider the moral aspect of this proposal, and let them consider that the very troops whose vicarious sacrifice they are asked to accept are in part composed of "conscript soldiers" whom Mrs. Dwyer pleases to call "men in chains."

What she says to us Australian women then is this: "Don't let your country do her duty. Don't make the supreme sacrifice that the women of France and England have made. Rather than take your full share of sacrifice, and rather than allow your men to take their full share of fighting in this great struggle for liberty and existence, not merely as individuals, but as citizens of a free State organised for war, let Englishwomen face misery, and Englishmen face death.

It is hard to believe that Australian women care so little for the honour of Australia and for their own good names that they will not reject with the scorn it deserves so base an alternative to the Government proposals that, as true democrats, they will not refuse to enjoy all the privileges and benefits of citizenship, and to transfer to other shoulders, far more heavy laden, the burdens and duties that are theirs by right.

It is hard to believe that it is even necessary to call on the women of Australia in the name of womanhood to vote solidly "Yes" on October 28th. I am, etc.,

A MOTHER'S VIEW.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As my three sons are engaged in this great struggle for civilisation, I feel I am entitled to say a word or two on the subject of compulsory service. All arguments against it must pale into insignificance beside the fact that our boys at the front are crying for help. The following extract from a letter received three days ago from my [illegible] son in France, Captain B. Teasdale Smith, [illegible] some evidence of the feeling of our soldiers there on the above question. Speaking of his brother, Dale, already wounded in three places at Gallipoli, and now also fighting in France, he says:—"I was going into the trenches as his battalion came out. It (the 2nd Battalion) suffered so heavily that I feared to inquire for him, but, thank God, there he was safe and sound and smiling. The Australians have a tough job, and it is not finished yet. If one could see a glimmer of the end it would not be so bad. The women ought to shun every man who has not joined the colours. The idea of the labour unions working against conscription is awful. Here we are, suffering and dying, fighting on the double for want of men. I blame the women a lot. If they cut the loafers who haven't enlisted they would be shamed into going. We want conscription, and want it badly. We never get a holiday from month's end to month's end, as we have to carry the burden of the shortage."

In another letter received this morning he speaks of his battalion again relieving that to which his brother is attached.

You see, Sir, that in this particular sector these two battalions, the 2nd and 14th, are, in spite of great and continual casualties, compelled to relieve each other constantly for want of reinforcements. No doubt this sad condition holds throughout the entire ground covered by the Australians. Seeing this crying need for reinforcements, all arguments against compulsory service go to the winds.

FORCE v REASON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As a pioneer of the Labour movement and unionism in this State for half a century, with a clean and loyal record, would you grant me space to record my disagreement with those who are trying to lead. My experience in the movement shows that its advance has been by reason and justice—not force and abuse. One of its leading planks is the referendum. As an experienced veteran, I warn the rank and file against the tactics of those who are leading the anti-conscriptionists. Their duty, if they are in earnest against conscription, as I am, would be recruiting and devising ways and means to down German conscription of the worst character. Have they done so? Instead, they have adopted Hun tactics of stop work, with abuse of men whose whole lives have been spent in the movement because they have the courage of their opinions. They have no consideration for the movement that has cost so much to build up. I have suffered for the cause, am a poorer man today than when I entered it, and as long as I live will help to build, not destroy, a movement that has been the beacon light of humanity. Will my fellow-unionists stand by force and abuse or justice and reason? I feel sure that they will rise to the occasion, and stand by what has built the movement—reason and common sense.

WOMEN'S VOTES AND SOLDIERS' CLAIMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you allow an old, uneducated working woman space in your widely-read paper? But I cannot rest without trying to do something to help in this terrible crisis of our beloved Empire, and especially for my adopted country, Australia, where I have spent over 40 years of my life of 63. What I wish is to appeal to our girls and single women of voting age to throw aside every thought of pleasure and amusement for the next three weeks, and give their minds entirely to this most serious question of voting for or against conscription. I want them to realise their responsibility, and, above all, to remember their duty to our dear soldiers who will have, and are, sacrificing themselves for us at the front. It seems a paradox that my main object in writing this is to appeal to the girls to do their duty on the 28th, and help to send reinforcements, so that our dear men may have rest, and encouragement for their hard and bitter struggle. I feel sure the young peoples' hearts are with our soldiers all right, but youth does not stop to think seriously as a rule, especially the workers, who after a hard day's work, are too tired to bother themselves with public questions, and are led away with such arguments as they hear at work. Such as Australia has done her share, or Australia has made a name for herself, why should she do any more? Or all the young men are being sent away to be killed, and there will be no husbands left for them, or that while the men are away the Government will import cheap labour to take their places, and when they come back they will have to work for the same if they get work at all. Oh, I wish the girls could be made to see the pity and contemptibleness of such mean, selfish arguments at such a time, when helping to win the war should be the uppermost thought in every mind to-day. Having had to work hard all my life for a living, I have given Labour my vote ever since there has been a Labour party, and now, when I see how the unions are acting, it makes me sad and angry. But I am sure that there are hundreds of good, honest men amongst them, who will not prove traitors to their country, and will vote for conscription. I cannot understand how any honest-minded person can see it in any other light than that we are in duty bound, and out of respect and gratitude to the soldiers of ours, and the allied nations, and if Australia fails to pass conscription so surely will she earn the contempt of all the world, which is watching her, and most humiliating of all, be the laughing stock of Germany. Again, I would say to the girls, read all the war news, and especially the boys' letters from the front, saying they get four hours out of 24 to rest, and begging for help to give them a chance to hold out. Think out the question seriously and honestly, and I am not afraid of your decision. I am, etc.,

A WOMAN TO MR. ESTELL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—At a meeting at St. Peters, Mr. Estell said that if he thought the winning of the war depended on conscription he would not oppose it? Is Mr. Estell in a better position than Mr. Hughes to judge of the necessity for conscription, or of the military situation? Mr. Hughes has been in the councils of the Empire. He comes back from the seat of war and speaks as one having authority. Shall we women not accept Mr. Hughes's reiterated assertions of the absolute necessity for reinforcements which, alas, are not coming forward voluntarily? Mr. Estell also undertook to assure his hearers that there was no risk of our defeat. We hope you are right, Mr. Estell, but we want more than a mere staving off of defeat—we want reparation for the past, and security for the future. As a young nation we have put our hand to the plough—let us not turn back.

Mr. Estell also suggested that Hindoos (not Russians this time) might be employed to take the place of those of our young men who are suffering from inertia. India has done and is doing her share willingly and generously. Is there not something unpleasant to the feminine mind in the thought of men—white men, foisting their responsibility on to others?

At this meeting Mrs. Kate Dwyer also spoke against conscription. As a woman graduate of the Sydney University, it is a matter of great regret to me that the only woman who has the high honour of a place in the Senate should fail so signally to represent the vast body of University women who have been working so wholeheartedly for the Empire, and who, I feel justified in saying, will eagerly vote "Yes" on the 28th.

THE HOSPITALS.

The Chief Secretary (Mr. Black) stated last night that the Government had decided not to subsidise the fees paid by hospital patients. The subsidising of donations cost £50,000 per annum, and to give £ for £ for the fees received at the various institutions would involve an additional expenditure of £60,000,

CURRENT LITERATURE.

ITALY AND THE WESTERN FRONT.

One of the most subtle devices of the enemy, which had been unconsciously assisted by many who should have known better, is to endeavour to sow disaffection in the ranks of the Allies by hinting that one or the other is not doing its share. A is selfishly shirking her obligations; B's hostility to Germany is lukewarm; C is so disgusted at the behaviour of her allies that she is not unwilling to contemplate a separate peace. Italy has suffered to a peculiar degree from calumny of this kind, so much so that a few months ago, in order once for all to dispose of these slanders, she asked Britain to send someone who could tell the British exactly what Italy was doing. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was the representative chosen. "A Visit to Three Fronts" reports the result of his investigations. The three fronts are those of Flanders, France, and Italy. His impressions of the first two are really incidental to those of his main errand, although they are not the less interesting on that account.

The author reached Italy at rather an inauspicious moment. It was immediately after the set-back in the Trentino; the Austrian offensive had hardly been checked, yet even in the hour of defeat the spirit of the Italians was unbroken. Everywhere he went and in every branch of the service Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was struck with the excellence of their moral and the thoroughness of their training. What he saw convinced him that in anything approaching equal conditions these troops would give a fine account of themselves—a prophecy that was confirmed much sooner than he expected. For the handicaps under which Italy is fighting are not generally appreciated. The question is often asked why the Italians have not made more impression on the enemy. The answer is simple: it is to be found in the strategical position of Italy. With the Alps barring the north there are only two places in the whole of the Austro-Italian frontier where serious operations are possible. One is the Trentino salient, where "Austria can always threaten and invade Italy. She lies in the mountains, with the plains beneath her. She can always invade the plain, but the Italians cannot invade the mountains, since the passes would only lead to other mountains beyond. Therefore their only possible policy is to hold the Austrians back. This they have most successfully done." There remains the other front, the opening by the sea, a plain bounded by a river with hills beyond. The Italians cleared the plain, crossed the river, and when this book was written were held up by the heavily fortified slopes. They have made great progress since, but even when the author saw them in a moment of repulse their services to the Allies had been great. "Remember what they have done for the common cause, and be grateful for it," he says. "They have in a year occupied some 40 Austrian divisions, and relieved our Russian Allies to that very appreciable extent. They have killed or wounded a quarter of a million, taken 40,000, and drawn to themselves a large portion of the artillery. As to the future, it is very easy to prophesy. They will continue to absorb large enemy forces. Neither side can advance far as matters stand. But if the Russians advance, and Austria has to draw her men to the East, there will be a tiger spring for Trieste. 'Trieste or death!' I saw chalked upon the walls all over North Italy. That is the Italian objective." So far the author's forecast has been fulfilled to the very letter.

On his way to Italy Sir Arthur Conan Doyle visited the Western front at various points. What impressed him most on the British line was the Ypres salient, which he saw at night. "Down on the flats in a huge semicircle lights are rising and falling. They are very brilliant, going up for a few seconds and then dying down. There are the dull thuds of explosions and an occasional rat-tat-tat. I have seen nothing like it, but the nearest comparison would be an enormous ten-mile railway station in full swing at night, with signals winking, lamps waving, engines hissing, and carriages bumping. It is a terrible place down yonder, a place that will live as long as military history is written, for it is the Ypres salient, a huge curve, outlined by the lights, needing only a little more to be an encirclement. Something caught the loop as it closed, and that something was the British soldier. Never shall I forget the impression of ceaseless, malignant activity which was borne in upon me by the white, winking lights, the red sudden glare, and the horrible thudding noises in that place of death beneath me."

For the French the author can hardly find words to express his admiration—and his pity. Pity, because his countrymen have no conception of what it means to have their land occupied by invaders. "It is a terrible thing, this German bar, a thing unthinkable to Britons. To stand on the edge of Yorkshire and look into Lancashire, feeling that it is in other hands, that our fellow-countrymen are suffering there and waiting, waiting for help, and that we cannot after two years come a yard nearer to them—would it not break our hearts? Can we wonder that there is no smile on the grim faces of the French." Admiration, because in spite of all her sorrows, France is inflexible in resolution and confident of victory. And assuredly she will win. "Germany set out to bleed France white. Well, she has odne so. France is full of widows and orphans from end to end. Perhaps, in proportion to her population she has suffered the most of all. But in carrying out her hellish mission Germany has bled herself white also. Her heavy sword has done its work, but the keen French rapier has not lost its skill. France will stand at last, weak and tottering, with her huge enemy dead at her feet." (Hodder and Stoughton.)

GINGER MICK.

After guiding the errant footsteps of the Sentimental Bloke until he ran safely and staidly in double harness, Mr. C. J. Dennis has attuned his lyre to the exploits of the cobber who supported him at the matrimonial altar. In the earlier song-cycle Ginger Mick's appearances were few and fleeting, but Mr. Dennis contrived to invest him with a very vivid personality, so that the hero of "The Moods of Ginger Mick" requires little or no introduction. He is "a leery cove," a hard-bitten individual with a jaw of steel and a somewhat chequered past, as the denizens of Spadger's Lane can bear witness, and as his biographer admits:—

> Now, Mick was never in it as a real perfeshnul crook,
> But sometimes cops 'as slabs of luck, so sometimes > he was took.

When the epic opens Mick was pursuing the humble vocation of a "Rabbit Oh!" man; the outbreak of war left him cold; he was even a determined anti-militarist. The Sentimental Bloke, who was marketing the produce of his farm, describes an episode. Ginger Mick

> "Sprags a soljer bloke 'oo's passin' by
> "An' says 'e'd like to dot 'im in the eye.
> "Your sort," ses Mick, "don't know yer silly mind!
> They lead yeh like a sheep; it's time yeh woke.
> The 'eads is makin' piles ou. uv your kind!"
> "Aw, git yer 'ead read!" says the soljer bloke.
> 'Strewth, 'e was willin' was that khaki chap.
> I 'ad my work cut out to stop a scrap."

This encounter left Mick thoughtful; the tale of Belgium's sorrows made him think more. The Sentimental Bloke piles it on. His recital moves Ginger Mick, who has a Rosie of his own.

> "Ses Mick, 'The dirty cows, they WANTS a crack.'"

So the news that Ginger Mick has enlisted surprises no one, although Spadger's-lane mourns his absence, and even the "cops" are sad. Henceforth we hear from him principally in letters to the Sentimental Bloke. War enlarges Ginger Mick's horizon. He used to be class conscious (though he would not have described his point of view in these terms); he learns that under their skins the "toffs" and the "leery boys" are much the same, that a toothbrush and "fancy name" are no bar to fellowship, and that the army he served in was the truest leveller and the truest democracy. Quite apart from these abstract considerations, Ginger Mick has much of the old Adam in his heart, and loves fighting for its own sake. "The call to arms" was to him, as the Sentimental Bloke observes, the clarion "call of stouch."

> "So Ginger Mick, 'as mizzled to the war,
> Joy in 'is 'eart and wild dreams in 'is brain.
> Gawd 'elp the foe that 'e goes gunnin' for
> If tales is true they tell in Spadger's Lane."

Ginger Mick has his trials in Egypt and Gallipoli, but the sorest trial is trench warfare. In a letter from hospital he unbosoms himself to his mentor, the Sentimental Bloke:—

> "Ar! gimme fights wiv foemen I can see
> To uppercut and wallop on the jor,
> Life in a borrer ain't no good to me,
> 'Struth! this ain't war!
> Gimme a ding dong go for 'arf a round
> An' you can 'ave this crawlin' underground.
> Gimme a ragin', 'owlin', tearin', scrap
> This 'idin', sneakin' racket makes a chap
> Feel second-hand.
> Stuck in me dug-out 'ere down in a 'ole,
> I'm feelin' like I've growed a rabbit's soul."

Ginger Mick's complaints about the tactics of modern war were soon to be over. On his return to the fighting line a Turkish bullet bowled him done. The Sentimental Bloke bears the news, and soliloquises:—

> "A gallant gentleman! Well, I dunno;
> I 'ardly think that Mick ud like that name;
> But this 'ere Trent's a toff, and ort to know
> The breedin' of the stock from which 'e came,
> Gallant and game Mick might 'a been, but then—
> Lord! Fancy 'im among the gentlemen!"

After consideration, the Sentimental Bloke writes the simple and final epitaph on the soldier:—

> "'E was a man, that's good enough for me."

That is also good enough for everyone, the highest tribute to the dead.

There is no necessity to compare this book with its predecessor. The two were written in different epochs, in different conditions, and, may be, with different purposes. The niceties of literary style and of pure esthetics are of small account these days. They can be left for more leisured times. Meanwhile one welcomes the inspired recruiting officer, and it has been a happy thought of the publishers of "Ginger Mick" to issue this book as well as the verses of Mr. W. H. Ogilvie, recently noticed in these columns, in a "pocket edition for the trenches." (Angus and Robertson.)

SOME ESSAYS.

"Silver and Grey" is the title of a collection of essays by Mr. E. V. Lucas, whose reputation as an occasional essayist requires no advertisement. He touches nothing that he does not adorn and invests even the most commonplace themes with novelty and charm. Here he is to be seen in his best vein; about half the essays are inspired more or less directly by the war, while the rest consist of characteristic causerie about men and books. Thus he chats agreeably about the funniest story he ever heard, about the making of gramophone records, about slang, American, English, and Australian (the two last-named, by the way, he considers to be vastly inferior to the first in point of vigour and imagination), and a dozen other things.

The war-essays are particularly interesting. Not long after the battle of the Marne Mr. Lucas was given an opportunity of going over the country between Paris and the front. In happier days this had all been familiar ground; now he could hardly recognise it. Where populous villages had stood was now but a desolate collection of monoliths which, on closer inspection, turned out to be the fire-defying chimneys of houses burned by the Germans. In place of the busy stir of a French farm land in autumn was a strange, sombre quiet; only old men and women were left to do the work, and "acceptance of disaster" was the new rural spirit. "September 6-12 left an ineradicable melancholy, so swift was the onrush, so terrible the rage, so irreparable and gratuitous the injury." There were no fields of waving grain; there were fields where little tricolors floated above the last resting-place of French soldiers, acres of graves at all sorts of odd angles, dug just as the bodies that they were to contain had fallen, marked with rude crosses, and occasionally a kepi or some other trophy. Friend and foe had been treated alike; the only difference was that the German graves bore no tricolour. Nearer the front the atmosphere was less sombre. At Vitry-sur-Marne, for instance, the population could solace itself from the horrors of war by fishing—which, be it understood, is a pastime which has not necessarily anything at all to do with catching fish. Everyone at Vitry fished; no sooner were the soldiers released from the trenches than they hurried to the river, threw in their lines and sat in philosophical contemplation of their floats. No one, to Mr. Lucas's certain knowledge, had ever caught a fish; no one, indeed, had even seen one. Probably if anyone had been unsportsman-like enough to catch one he would have been reprobated as a gross materialist. Better the subtle pleasures of hope than the crude joys of realisation.

One would quote finally a very beautiful and tender fragment, "The Mother." Her son had fallen fighting at the head of his regiment. She prayed that she might see him once again—just for five minutes. An angel answered her prayer. Would she see him, the angel asked, as a baby at her breast, or in the pride of his strength as a soldier; or in his last gallant hour? It was for her to choose; her choice would be granted. Said the mother, "I would have him for five minutes as he was one day when he ran in from the garden to ask forgiveness for being naughty. He was so small and unhappy; and he was very hot, and the tears were making streaks down his face through the garden dirt. And he flew to my arms with such force that he hurt me." (Methuen.)

AN AMERICAN TOMMY.

Mr. J. N. Hall is an American who, when war broke out, was enjoying a walking tour in Wales. The appeal for men struck a responsive chord in his breast, for he came of fighting stock, and it was not long before he found himself at the recruiting office. There was at first a slight hitch in his enlistment, which was surmounted by his describing himself as an Englishman. His experiences as a soldier in the British forces at home and abroad are told in "Kitchener's Mob." This is an interesting book, because although many have written of the training and achievements of the new armies, Mr. Hall looks at them through American eyes, and his point of view is often novel. He was at the beginning not greatly impressed by the raw material of the new army. The unit to which he belonged consisted principally of weedy, undeveloped townsmen, who had never done a day's work in the open air in the whole of their lives. It would be a different business, he thought, to turn these into tough fighting men. Yet very soon he had to admit that he was wrong. Regular hours, excellent food, and hard exercise worked wonders in an incredibly short space of time, and with the improvement in physique came also that intangible something that changes a mob into a military machine with a moral and an esprit de corps of its own. That something is discipline, the meaning and value of which the author learned to appreciate. At first some of its demands had struck him as rather foolish. He could never understand the impassable gulf that separated officers and men when so often there was nothing to choose between them with regard to ability or social position, or anything else. But gradually he came to see that there was reason in everything, even in such apparently trivial observances as the salute.

In due course the regiment embarked for Flanders. On its introduction to the front line of the trenches it was "stiffened" by a battalion of regulars—a wise precaution, as the author admits. To troops who have never been under fire, their first experience is peculiarly harassing in this war, where rifle and shrapnel bullets are the least of the evils, and gas, high explosive shells, and bombs turn the front into a veritable inferno. When the "blanks" saw the old hands taking these things calmly, quite as a matter of course, they settled down, and soon became veterans themselves. They took part in the fight at Loos, and suffered heavily in that pyrrhic battle; and the first lesson they learned, and never forgot, was to respect the fighting qualities of the enemy. "We came from England," says the author, "full of absurd newspaper tales about the German soldier's inferiority. We had read that he was a wretched marksman; he would not stand up to the bayonet; whenever opportunity offered he crept over and gave himself up; he was poorly fed and clothed, and was so weary of the war that his officers had to drive him at the muzzles of their revolvers. We thought him almost beneath contempt. But we were convinced in a night that we had greatly under-estimated his abilities as a marksman." As for his all-round inferiority as a fighting man, one disillusioned Tommy summed up the situation by asking bitterly why, if the German soldier was such a miserable creature, were the Allies still fighting in allied territory, and not along the Rhine. The German soldier has many odious faults, but he is not a poltroon, and those who continue to expatiate on his cowardice forget that in doing so they are, by implication, paying the Allies a very poor compliment. SIR JOHN HENNIKER HEATON.

In "The Life and Letters of Sir John Henniker Heaton," Mrs. Adrian Porter has written an exhaustive biography of a man doubly associated with Australia. Not only did he spend a number of years in this country, but his efforts to cheapen postal and cable communications benefited Australasia more than any other part of the British Empire. His career was not marked by any great external interest. During the 'Seventies and early 'Eighties he was engaged in municipal and journalistic work in New South Wales, and unsuccessfully contested a country electorate. In 1883 he returned to England, where he lost little time in being returned for the very Conservative constituency of Canterbury, which he represented continuously until he retired from public life a few years ago. He was in Carlsbad when the war broke out; though he was allowed to leave Austria, his health was broken, and his death at Geneva soon after was accelerated, it is said, by distress at the news of the successful German advance through Belgium and France.

In politics his name will be remembered for the energy which he displayed in lowering the cost of letters and cables within the Empire. This, he believed, apart from all other considerations, to be a very important factor in cementing Imperial relations. When he entered Parliament the post office was a terra incognita to private members; no one knew what went on in its musty recesses, and not one very much cared. Mr. Henniker Heaton, as he then was, saw his opportunity and made the subject his own. In the House he was soon regarded as the authority on all matters relating to the post-office, and the bete noire of successive Postmasters-General. By sheer perseverance and singleness of purpose, he eventually extended the sphere of influence of the humble penny stamp until it would carry a letter anywhere within the Empire. This achieved, he turned his attention to cable rates, which he had already been instrumental in reducing. He considered that these could bear a further and substantial reduction, and had his labours not been cut short, he would, no doubt, in the fullness of time, have achieved this object also. (John Lane; Dymock's.)

NEW NOVELS.

"God's Puppets," by Mr. William Allen White, contains some unusual and rather arresting stories. Their setting is an American town of the middle west; their action covers a period of a generation in which it changes from a quiet provincial centre into a roaring city. The characters also are presented in their development from youth to age. The most ambitious of the stories is "And He a Pharisee," a contrast in types. On the one hand there is the banker, rich, respected, and intolerant of those who do not enjoy his prosperity or the good esteem in which he is held; on the other, there is the reformed gambler, who has learned to despise money and is content to cultivate his sunny garden; the sequel shows that the pillar of society is rotten, that his assumption of civic virtue covers a mean, pinchbeck, and dishonest soul, while it is the gambler who possesses true magnanimity. The contrast is a hackneyed one, but the author handles it in an original fashion. Many of these stories trace the effects of time upon a temperament predisposed in any given direction, and the penalty which sooner or later awaits not only the positive evildoer, but all who have wantonly failed to realise the best in themselves. There is no very grave fault in Laila Nixon, but she is vain and greedy of men's admiration, and by indulging this trait unintentionally ruins three lives. The millionaire who betrays a girl in his headstrong youth pays a bitter price; success turns to dust and ashes in his mouth; he is more and more haunted by the memory of what he has done, and eventually his tortured spirit breaks under the strain. Here, again, the theory of retribution is not novel, but Mr. White's treatment of his theme is forceful. In a different vein is the pathetic picture of the old Congress man who clings steadfastly to the ancient order of things, and when the electors turn him down despairs of the future of his country. He belongs to a disappearing type, and with all his troubles and prejudices there is something fine about him. He will starve for his antiquated creed; he will even steal for it, but no money can induce him to depart a hair's breadth from the strict letter of his political principles, even though in this lies his sole hope of a livelihood in his declining years. (Macmillan and Co.)

"An Australian Wooing," by Miss Sophie Ormond, is that rare phenomenon, an Australian novel about trade. The plot centres round the discovery of a process for turning seaweed into a vegetable fibre that is useful for a thousand and one commercial purposes. In this fiction has borrowed from fact, for, if one remembers aright, not many years ago a company was formed locally to exploit certain deposits of weed on the South Australian coast. However, the material which the hero eventually succeeds in placing on the market possesses all sorts of unique qualities, not the least valuable of which is that in combination with picric acid from yacca gum (another Australian product), it forms a super-explosive, the secret of which is gratefully accepted by the British War Office from its patriotic inventor. There is an agreeable love interest, and the author incidentally gives some rather ironic pictures of certain circles of Australian "smart society," where, it appears, some leaders of fashion do not disdain to give a helping hand to humble but wealthy social aspirants if the consideration is adequate. (Garden City Press).

AUSTRALIAN FLYING CORPS.

Approval has been given for the despatch of monthly reinforcements, consisting of two officers and 20 air mechanics, for the Australian Flying Corps, A.I.F. These reinforcements will be raised in all military districts, and will concentrate in Victoria. Commandants of districts in which suitable men offer for service will communicate with the Chief of the General Staff, with a view to their acceptance and early transfer to Victoria after final leave.

The seventh send-off to railway volunteers was held at Hornsby recently, when Privates Ellis, Wall, Parker, Ryan, Foster, M'Donagh, Turnell, Grant, Poll, and Ryan, all of the loco. department of Hornsby, were presented with wristlet watches and pocket-wallets. Driver D. Elliott made the presentations on behalf of the railway employees, and Councillor James made presentations to several citizen volunteers.

RAILWAY EXHIBITION.

The old Sydney Goods Shed, adjoining the Railway Institute, will be the scene of a huge industrial and models exhibition, which is to extend from December 11 to 16. This is being organised by the council of the institute, and is for the purpose of displaying the growth in the manufacture of various commodities; and as an exhibition of the growth of the railways from the primitive to the latest completed article.

SEPTEMBER REVIEWS.

"LOOK TO THE END."

Writing in the "Fortnightly Review" for September, Dr. E. J. Dillon reminds us that Germany still has many strings to her bow, and the Allies should be wary lest a Parthian arrow find a vulnerable spot in the coalition. Powerful hammer strokes dealt at the German army in the west are the only efficacious means of ending the war. The pith of the German Emperor's troops confronts us there, and we have broken ground most promisingly. As to the besieged populations of the Central Empires, they are manifestly losing heart by reason of the hardships they are undergoing and the hopelessness of speedy surcease of suffering. He quotes one of the principal press organs of Wurtemberg:—"Every day that goes by aggravates the burden of responsibility of those who plunged us in this war. . . . Half the world is leagued against us, and the other half is forging weapons for the first. Nor can the fact be blinked that the fire of enthusiasm burns throughout the country only as a flickering flame." Dr. Dillon tells us that the superb qualities which our recent advances have evoked must be displayed for a considerable time yet, in the face of more formidable difficulties, and at the price of heavier sacrifices. Cheap optimism is wholly uncalled for. The victory is within our reach on condition that we persevere to the end, and remember that the end is not yet. But time is on our side.

In an article in the "Contemporary," Dr. Dillon points out the difficulties that the Allies have to contend against in the East, and he refers at length to the situation in Greece. He leaves us in no doubt that Constantine represents the German Emperor. It is a healthy sign, he says, that among the troops at Salonica with whom the Bulgars will have to measure swords are some thousands of Russians. The presence of these warriors is a hopeful indication that the Bulgar, whose game is seen through, has played his last trump and lost. And in view of the frantic efforts now being made by the Austro-German forces to subdue Roumania, there is consolation in Dr. Dillon's words that armed intervention was for M. Bratiano a subject outside the field of practical politics "so long as he entertained reasonable doubts as to the upshot of the war."

THE FUTURE OF BELGIUM.

An anonymous writer in the "Fortnightly" discusses the future of Belgium. Despite the confident words of German politicians and publicists, he says Belgium's future will not lie in their hands, but will be assured by the Allies, whose first duty it will be to see that she shall never again be made the sport and plaything of German ambition. The direct consequence of that decision will be that Belgium must emerge from the war a stronger State than she was when the Teutonic hordes violated her frontier on August 4, 1914. She must be made stronger at the expense of Germany. There are, though it may be news to many people, several districts within the western borders of Germany which are inhabited by non-Teutonic races, who prefer to speak French and Walloon to the language of Goethe. Tragic proof of this was given when the German troops began their massacres in August, 1914, on German soil, because they heard villagers in the Malmedy district speaking Walloon, and concluded that they must have reached Belgian territory. Still less generally known is the fact that Belgium had sixty or seventy thousand people in the Aubel-Gemmenich region who knew no other tongue than German. When the necessity of strengthening Belgium at the expense of Germany is admitted, as it must be, the restoration of the severed portion of the old Belgian Duchy and province of Luxembourg will appear the most natural and advantageous solution of the problem. It will be not only a small reward for her sufferings; but will enable her to play a more useful part in preserving the peace of Europe—for it will deprive Germany of an advanced position for invading France.

JAPAN'S PART.

In an article in the "Nineteenth Century" Mr. Robert Machray describes the part that Japan has been playing in the war. Not only does Russia owe her a great debt, but our own debt—that of the British Empire—is by no means inconsiderable. She is taking her share of the colossal conflict, filling a role, which she has accepted, in a manner worthy of her position, dignity, and self-respect. Not only has Japan munitioned Russia in a magnificent manner—a process which is still going on with accelerating momentum—but she has provided munitions even for Britain. She has sent rifles for Kitchener's armies, and also provided guns for the British Navy. She has furnished rifles to all the other Allies, except Italy. Japan's help to Russia includes clothing, boots, and practically everything in the way of equipment. She has also subscribed to the loans issued by the Allies. Mr. Machray also reminds us of the part played by the Japanese navy in the Far East, of the seizure by that navy of the Marshall Islands, the Ladrones, and the Carolines (Japan is at present administering the Caroline and Marshall islands, with the exception of Namu), and the protection of the coasts of Australia, New Zealand, and British Columbia at a time when German cruisers were in the Pacific. The convoying of Australian and New Zealand troops to Suez is also referred to, and Mr. Machray adds:—"It has not yet transpired how much the Japanese navy did in hunting down the Emden or in bringing von Spee's ships to book in the battle of the Falkland Islands, but one day no doubt we shall learn to what extent it co-operated with the British in these affairs."

WAR CRIMES.

"War crimes: their Prevention and Punishment," is the subject of an article in the "Nineteenth Century," by Dr. Hugh H. L. Bellot. Despite the German doctrine that military necessity is paramount to all other considerations, he says, and, despite the fact that the Germans have ridden roughshod over the established usages of war and the principles of international law, no great moral ideal has ever wholly vanished from the earth. The principle upon which international law rests, that of justice, is eternal. The British Government, in conjunction with our Allies, should convey to the Central Empires in unmistakable terms that they will treat as "war criminals," not only the authors and instigators of outrages upon humanity, but also the actual perpetrators of all violations of the laws and usages of war, whether acting under orders or not. It would, Dr. Bellot thinks, act as a wholesome restraint. The acceptance by the Central Powers of a Court specially constituted for the trial of war crimes committed during the war should be made an essential preliminary to any peace settlement. The right to commit atrocities in the name of military necessity must not go unchallenged. The offenders must be brought to justice, not in a spirit of revenge, but in order that those "stipulations of international law" and those "sentiments of humanity and civilisation" to which Germany's representative at the Hague Conference of 1907, paid such eloquent lip-service, may be vindicated and maintained.

LATE MR. JOSEPH ROWLEY.

The funeral took place on Thursday of Mr. Joseph Rowley, of the Mines Department. The service was conducted by the Rev. C. J. M'Coy, and the chief mourners were Mr. Eric N. Rowley (son), and Messrs. R. W. W. M'Coy, Rupert S. M'Coy, A. A. M'Coy, E. E. M'Coy, C. W. M'Coy, O. L. M'Coy, and H. T. Grove (brothers-in-law). Among those present at the graveside were Messrs. R. H. Cambage (Acting Under-Secretary for Mines), Robert Vicars, W. M. Nixon, W. Birkenhead, O. L. Wild, H. L. Arnott, E. H. Alcock, J. G. North, R. Barbour, W. E. Forsyth, Burcher, and many representatives of the Mines, Lands, and Works departments, and also of the Bonnie Doon Golf Club, and his friends at Beecroft, where he resided.

The deceased was a popular sportsman in the circles of rowing, cricket, billiards, and golf, in the last of which he played a prominent part for the past 15 years. He was 56 years of age, and leaves a widow and one son, Mr. Eric N. Rowley, solicitor, of Sydney.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

London renewed its theatrical activities after the summer holidays with the production on August 24 of "High Jinks" at the Adelphi. This piece, advertised as "by arrangement with J. C. Williamson, Ltd., Australia," turned out surprisingly successful, considering that, instead of following the long-tested advice to "let well alone," the musical play was freshly "adapted" by Frederick Lonsdale, four London composers added new numbers, and four additional "poets" were turned on to the lyrics! The "Pall Mall Gazette" quotes the eight names involved, and plaintively wants to know who were the original author and composer. Fortunately, the plot is described at some length, thus enabling the curious to ascertain the departures from the original version. There aren't any! The farcical idea of the scent, with its accompanying dance-theme, the middle-aged doctor (Field Fisher), in love with a Spaniard's wife (Marie Eaton), the stout American timber-merchant (W. H. Rawlins), who meets his wife unexpectedly after 23 years with her youthful companion (Dorothy Brunton), whom she passes off as his daughter—all these things remain as they were in America and Australia. There is even the festive Colonel (played here by Mr. Frith), "and a jolly dinner-table 'rag' almost at the finish." So that Mr. Lonsdale and his eight co-adjutors must have been serviceable chiefly in persuading the London playgoer that he was enjoying a home product, and as he was doing nothing of the sort the whole system—which has wrecked many a fine French piece—stands doubly condemned. The London cast enabled W. H. Berry "to bounce and beam his way through the part of the middle-aged doctor;" Peter Gawthorne appeared as the young inventor (taken here by C. H. Workman); Tom Walls the part of Colonel Slaughter; W. H. Rawlins resumed his Australian role as the American timber merchant; Masie Day was in the low comedy role as his wife; and Miss Nellie Taylor made a hit as her supposed daughter. Mr. J. A. E. Malone produced the musical comedy, and Miss Minnie Everett of this city, directed the dances. All the press notices are almost hysterically favourable, one great daily remarking that the scent-tune "is going to send London simply crazy. It is an alarmingly insidious tune, with a frolicsome lilt, that would set an anchorite dancing. It was all about something that keeps tingle-ingle-ingling in your ear, oh so queer," and seemed to set the entire world a-dancing."

Florence Rockwell, a new leading lady for the J. C. Williamson Comedy Company, who will presumably replace Madge Fabian, arrived here by the Sonoma during the week. The newcomer, who was born in New York City, has had a distinguished stage career there. Indeed, it was her acquaintance with Mr. Fred Niblo, and the enthusiasm with which he spoke of his long stay on this side, which influenced her in a hurriedly-made decision to accept her present engagement. Miss Rockwell had left her summer home, near Stamford, Connecticut, intending to return after a few days' shopping in town, met Mr. Hugh Ward, and started on her long journey for this city without returning! Her first appearance in Australia will be at the Sydney Criterion, in "Common Clay," a drama by Cleaves Kincead. This piece has rather a curious history. It was originally performed in Boston by the Harvard students as their prize play, and attracted so much attention that it was staged at the Ettinge Theatre, New York, where it had a long run. It was at the New York Stock Exchange that Miss Rockwell first came into public notice, for her father placed her on the table to recite to the members as a tiny child. At 13 she was widely known as a Shakespearian prodigy. Carefully trained by the late Rose Ettinge, she starred as Juliet, Ophelia, and Desdemona, supported by a grown-up company of well-known stock artists, for two years throughout the United States. Her repertoire also included "Virginius," in which the celebrated American actor, James O'Neill, was the star. Miss Rockwell's debut on Broadway was in 1902, at Fifth Avenue Theatre, with Stuart Robson, in a comedy on "Oliver Goldsmith," and from that date she took rank as a grown-up leading lady. Many of her successes have been at the New Amsterdam Theatre (New York), where she created Necia in "The Barrier," and where she supported the late Richard Mansfield as Portia, the Queen in "Don Carlos," Hester Prynne in "The Scarlet Letter," and Lady Ann in "Richard III." Two years ago the new actress, who is young and handsome, with fine dark eyes, played lead in the all-star cast of "Fine Feathers," at the Republic Theatre (N.Y.), and, like other American actresses of note, she has played leading roles for the "movies."

Mr. Cecil Sherwood, the young tenor whose farewell concert took place at the Sydney Town Hall on March, 1914, subsequently left for Milan, where after a time he secured a scholarship at the Verdi Conservatorio of that famous city. Under date August 13 he now writes to his friends here that he has left the Conservatorio in order to study privately under Maestro Pieraccini. Mr. Sherwood's appearance at an English Red Cross concert brought him ultimately in contact with a well-known impressario named Dormenille, who heard him in scenes from "Rigoletto," and offered to arrange his debut. However, this matter will probably be deferred until the Carnival season at the end of the year, when the young tenor will be introduced to Signor Mingardi, the manager of La Scala, at present absent in Buenos Ayres. Meanwhile Mr. Sherwood is studying hard, and finds life in the musical atmosphere of Italy helpful, though he remarks incidentally that good teachers of singing are very hard to find. The capture of Gorizia was celebrated in Milan with great enthusiasm, cheering crowds, speeches by politicians in the centre of the city, and the playing of national anthems, being the order of the day. The Italian picture theatres show stirring war-scenes illustrating more especially the prodigious labours of the Italian artillerymen who place their guns high up on the snow-clad Alpine heights, although it sometimes requires a hundred soldiers to pull up a single cannon.

Mr. Winter Hall, an esteemed actor from Christchurch, who joined the Australian stage in 1907 as Mr. Burchell in the late Herbert Flemming's production of "Olivia," is leaving for America by the Sonoma on Wednesday. His career here has included 6½ years with the J. C. Williamson direction in responsible support of Julius Knight, and other starring artists, and he was prominently concerned in the Harry Plimmer patriotic tour of New Zealand (as Cayley Drummle, Lord Windermere, and the Messenger from Mars), by which £3500 was handed over to the Dominion Government. Mr. Winter Hall has introductions to the leading film producers of Los Angeles, and as in his own person he furnishes an authoritative type of church and legal dignitaries and financial magnates, he should readily achieve the success which his many friends on this side so heartily wish him.

"Chu Chin Chow," the "musical tale in three acts" with which Mr. Oscar Asche opened his season at His Majesty's Theatre, London, on August 31, is further described by that author-manager as "an Eastern Revue." Mr. Asche has founded this gorgeous spectacular piece upon the old fairy-tale of "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," and has staged it wonderfully to pretty music by Frederic Norton. The reviews describe the scenic beauty of Kasim Baba's Palace; a street in Bagdad converted by means of judicious screens of brightest blue into a mannequin display of sartorial extravagance; and the Orchard, a vision of grey square arches and silver bushes, and one great splash of purple trailing across the first arch. Oscar Asche himself appears as Abu Hassan, a terrible robber, who employs as his spy and right-hand woman the lovely Zahrat Al-Kulub (Lily Brayton), a human tempest of wrath who hates her master, and loves Kasim, whom he cuts up into four pieces! One gathers that the various characters are rather belittled by the scenic effect, the ballets, and stream of dainty music, but the show was pronounced a great success.

Mrs. BERTHA BURNESS, 45 Spring-street, Waverley, was ill for over three months from insomnia and weak nerves till Clement's Tonic banished them. She is now well.—Advt.

THE LIGHT IN THE UPPER STOREY.

BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.)

The Major faced her squarely.

"I don't want to have to discuss this painful subject, but can you, once and for all, give me specific details of the infamous treatment to which this Lieutenant von Waldenburg had been exposed, treatment which has forced you to expose yourself to so many dangers on his behalf?"

She hesitated.

"I was told these things in confidence," she said.

"Oh, you can trust in my discretion." He took out a pocket-book and a pencil. "If you can give me specific details of the ill-treatment to which this man has been subjected because he was of alien nationality I will have the matter inquired into and amends made."

She moved impatiently.

"How can he make a complaint, when, if he were to come forward, he would be taken prisoner and put into a concentration camp."

"Well, that, certainly, is where he ought to be," said the Major dryly, as he put his pocket-book away. "The fact is he is a spy of the most dangerous kind—clever, elusive—connected with other enemy aliens more dangerous than himself, and capable of doing us serious injury by reason of his superior intelligence and—superior unscrupulousness. If you were not in love with him you would see this as well as I do."

Giralda stood erect.

"I am not in love with him," she said firmly.

The Major shrugged his shoulders.

"You have forgotten your own admissions," said he shortly.

"No, I have not. I admit that I was in love with him once. I admit that I was heart-broken when my uncle interfered and objected to my marrying him. But—that's all over. Things have happened since then. I—I—" She hung her head in confusion.

The Major waited with a faint hope growing up in his own heart. Some change had indeed taken place in her; through all the difficulties and anxieties which her behaviour had caused him, the Major was conscious that her former attitude of heart-broken woman had changed of late.

"You behave as if you were in love still," he said stiffly.

She shook her head.

"No, no. If I cared for him as you believe, I don't think I should do so much."

"Oh, you admit that you do a great deal for him?"

"I admit I have done something," said she. "I felt bound in honour to."

"Honour?"

"Yes, honour. You need not sneer. I have never done anything to bring disgrace upon you, Simon."

"I think you forget. It is a disgrace to be connected with a suspected spy."

The shaft went home. She quivered and burst into tears. He was sorry he had said it, but at the same time he believed that it was the right thing to say. In her mad obstinacy, in her romantic fatuity, she was running headlong into dangers which she did not appreciate, and the end of which he himself could not foresee.

"You might have spared me that," she sobbed.

"I want you to understand," said he more gently.

She turned upon him with one of those fierce outbursts of passion, which, difficult as they were to deal with, constituted one of her attractions in his eyes. Giralda was a "live" woman, vivid, hot-blooded, under all her listless ways.

"What if I do understand?" she demanded. "What if I do know that I have lost some of my belief in him, some of my belief in myself, that I no longer think I am doing an heroic thing, that I am torn with all sorts of awful doubts and fears? What does it matter? I am an outcast. I live here on sufferance. I am suspected by you, by everybody. You accuse me of being in love. It's not true. I've lost the capacity of loving anybody. I've lost faith, and hope and trust and everything else. I'm just a wreck. I try to keep the rags of my old beliefs together, but everything seems to fall to pieces in my hands. Oh, perhaps you're right to treat me as you do. I suppose you can't help yourself. You are forced on in one direction, just as I am in another. But don't suppose I am sailing along happily, knowing that I am doing right, and patting myself on the back over it. I am trying to act for the best—for us all. But God only knows whether I am succeeding, or whether I am really breaking my own heart—for nothing."

The Major, touched to the quick, would have approached her, would have flung his arms round her, tried to soothe and comfort her.

But she would not let him.

"No," she said fiercely, dashing across the floor to the door as he sprang forward. "Don't let us forget the barrier beween us. It will only make the matter worse to forget it for a moment, to remember it the next. You go your way, and hunt for spies—real or imaginary. And let me go mine, wherever it leads."

She dashed open the door and went out.

Rebuffed and disappointed, the Major was yet conscious that even the misery which poor Giralda was enduring was a healthier sign than the blind confidence she had had before in the honour of her old lover. If she was not yet at the stage to desist from her attempts to help him, she was at least beginning to doubt whether her assistance was wisely given.

He left the house without seeing her again, and at once communicated to General Harborough the news of the rebuff he had received from the owner of the Abbey.

The General, however, took his news philosophically.

"Things have gone too far," he said, "for it to matter much whether Garfinge lets us make investigations or not. It's too serious a matter for him to stop the progress of events. It's my belief that this landing of arms and ammunition is part of a big plan, and that similar little expeditions, all small in themselves, are going on all round the coast, especially, of course, on this side. I suggest that you go up to town, and lay the information we have been able to get before the Home Office."

The Major shrugged his shoulders.

"I shall be snubbed," said he.

"Well," said he, "we'll go up together, and if they snub the pair of us, as I dare say they will, we'll go on till we find some one who will listen. After all, in the last resort, there's the Press."

The Major nodded, and it was decided that they should go up to town that very day. The Major went back to fetch his overcoat and a travelling bag, and came downstairs again in less than ten minutes ready to start.

"Don't disturb Mrs. Clowes," he said to Martin, who was running out to fetch a cab. "Tell her I was called away unexpectedly, and that I'll telephone."

But when he reached the bottom of the stairs the Major saw the door of the dining-room open, and Giralda, peeping out timidly to make sure that her husband was alone, came out into the hall.

He was shocked at the pallor of her face, at the look of weariness in her lack-lustre eyes.

"My dear," he said, putting his hand kindly on her shoulder, "you had better go and rest. You look quite ill."

She shook her head.

"I won't ask you where you are going," she said with pathetic resignation, "Of course, you wouldn't tell me. But I just wanted to tell you that I'm sorry, dreadfully, dreadfully sorry, to have brought so much trouble upon you, made things so hard for you. Never mind me. But just—forgive me!"

Suddenly she threw her arms round his neck. The action, totally unexpected, produced a prodigious effect upon the Major. She had never done such a thing spontaneously before, and the effect was overwhelming.

For the moment he felt as if he could have thrown his overcoat and bag into the sea, snatched her up in his arms, and carried her off for a second and happier honeymoon.

But the next moment the half-open front door was pushed back, and the voice of Martin was heard announcing:

"The fly, Major."

At the same moment the warm arms were withdrawn with the celerity of lightning. Giralda disappeared, and her husband, waking up from a dream of heaven, was walking soberly down the steps to the taxi-cab, with his heart beating very fast and the lovelight in his eyes.

THE CHURCHES.

SOCIETY OF THE PILGRIMAGE OF PRAYER.

This new movement, which the Archbishop of Canterbury and several diocesan bishops in England have sanctioned, appears, writes Archdeacon Gunther, to have met with much success. The Church of England, the pilgrim band of women, having received some preparation, go forth into various villages on a mission of faith and love for short periods. The people seem to welcome them heartily, and accept their ministrations gladly. They provide them with food and lodging, and listen most attentively. They only visit the parishes with the approval of the incumbent, stay but a short time, ask for no contributions of money, and expect no titles of honour. Their labour of love has but one object, the glory of God, and the wellbeing and extension of His Church.

MISSIONARIES IMPRISONED BY GERMANS.

A letter, written to the Church Missionary Society, by the Rev. V. V. Verbi, of the British East Africa Mission, reveals the cruel treatment (writes Archdeacon Gunther) received by some of our workers for God in Africa. He states that the C.M.S. missionaries and Universities Mission having been removed, the work of persecution began. Some 100 C.M.S. native teachers were imprisoned, and some of their wives taken as hostages and some beaten. He wonders what the ultimate fate of these poor helpless creatures will be in this great and terrible war under German modern methods of culture!

LORD FRENCH AND THE Y.M.C.A.

Field-Marshal Lord French, who opened a Y.M.C.A. centre in Dublin recently, has been bearing testimony to the immense value which the Y.M.C.A. had been to the troops in France. It was 40 years ago since he was galloping about Phoenix Park as a subaltern of cavalry, and he had seen a great reformation going on in the army since. At that time practically the only place for a soldier to go for recreation was the canteen, but since then an extraordinary change had come over the army. This was mainly due to the influence of such institutions as the Y.M.C.A. He could only tell them from his experience of soldiers in the field, but he could trace the change to no other cause. The ideal had been developed in the British soldier far more than ever before, and it had been approached and got at by institutions like the Young Men's Christian Association.

THE BIBLE IN AMERICA.

All the things of the war work for good to the trade of the United States. The "Western Christian Advocate" says that for the first time in the history of Bible printing and selling, and solely because of the war, American Bible publishers are this year making Bibles and Testaments to sell in the British, the Continental, South African, and Australian markets. The result is a Bible business unprecedented in number of volumes issued and in value of sales. Bible makers and sellers report that when other business is bad the Bible business is good. This year, owing to the war, the Bible business throughout all the world is larger than ever before, save only the parts of Europe at war. The excess of the business this year will amount, it is said, to from 40 to 50 per cent. Of the nations at war, England is affected hardly at all, while Bible sales in Germany, in the regular market and apart from the furnishing of Bibles to soldiers, is seriously interfered with. France has taken to Bible buying, and so has Russia. Even the Belgians and Servians have kept up their purchases.

The thirty-first annual report of the Church of England Homes, which includes the Avona Children's Home, the Tress-Manning Training Home for Girls, the Strathmore Rescue Home for Women, and the Minden (Carlingford) Children's home, states that the work has gone on during the year with even greater vigour than in the past. The homes are full to overflowing, and the continuance of the war has brought the need of giving for "home service" more prominently before the people, with the result that there has been a considerable increase in almost every department. The financial aspect of the homes was very encouraging, and the balance-sheet showed an increase in almost every source of income.

At the Methodist ministers' meeting last week, the following resolution was unanimously carried:—"The Sydney Methodist Ministers' Association desires to express its tender and prayerful sympathy with all the families afflicted or bereaved in connection with the war. We are conscious of how widespread is the sorrow and of how deep the sadness into which many homes are plunged, and also of the fortitude with which these sorrows are being borne because of the high and sacred character of the enterprise in which our sons and brothers are adventuring their lives and in many instances laying them down. We assure the anxious and sorrowing of our Christian affection and of our intercession on their behalf at the Throne of Grace, and also on behalf of those who are standing for our cause in the battle lines, whether on land or sea. We also pray that the result of these sacrifices and sorrows may soon be seen in the purification of life generally, and in the bringing in of a peace that shall be based upon righteousness and be promotive of a better brotherhood in our own midst and among the nations generally. May God, who comforteth us in all our tribulation, comfort and establish our hearts in Christ Jesus."

The Methodist jubilee celebrations at Bega on Sunday last, and through the week, have been a great success. Attendances were large, and interest good in all the gatherings. The president and Rev. J. E. Carruthers, D.D., were the visiting speakers.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The real estate market this week was again on the quiet side. The mind of the public is so engrossed with the referendum, and its important results, that not much time is left to devote to investments. The proposed moratorium is also agitating auctioneers and salesmen a good deal. The uncertainty as to whether the conditions of the moratorium will apply to the purchase of land on terms, as well as to fixed mortgages, is proving an important factor from the viewpoint of real estate. This was also the off-week for indoor auction, and few were held. Those which did take place proved rather flat, but no doubt the all-absorbing referendum campaign largely brought this about. Bidding was slow, and few properties changed hands. In other respects, however, the market was buoyant. By private contract several properties found new owners, and there was big inquiry at the rooms of the different firms respecting investments, etc. One outstanding feature of the week's transactions was the success last Saturday of the subdivision sales, all of which were largely attended, and a fair amount of business transacted.

The sale at Buxton, on the southern line, 60 miles from Sydney, meant the opening up of a new and apparently prosperous district. A special train was chartered, and notwithstanding that it was a lengthy train, it was crowded. The cost to the passengers was nominal. Plenty of refreshments were provided. In fact, it was a revival of the old-time auctions around Sydney, held in days of long ago. Mr. Ryan, of Batt, Rodd, and Purves, wielded the hammer, and he was kept busy selling business sites adjoining the railway station, at prices from 28/ to 35/ per foot, residential allotments from £8 to £25 each, and farm blocks at the rate of £10 to £17 per acre. At these prices Mr. Ryan almost cleared his catalogue, and his sale for the afternoon totalled almost £3000. The firm have disposed of another £700 worth of the land since the sale, and it will not be long before the first subdivision of this estate is all sold. The Government purchased about eight or nine acres of the estate, upon which to erect a public school, and when this is done the present school buildings will be handed over to the residents as a school of arts.

Another subdivision sale last Saturday which proved a success was at Undercliffe, Cook's River, where Messrs. Richardson and Wrench sold 14 portions of the Osroy Estate, at prices ranging from £2 to £5/5/ per foot. This produced a total of £1748, and during the week further sales took place, which brought the total up to about £2000.

Messrs. Horning and Co. had a successful auction last Saturday at Mortdale, where 18 allotments were sold at prices from 11/ to 21/ per foot. This sale totalled £880.

Mr. C. H. Crammond held an indoor auction on Tuesday, at the rooms of the association. There was a fair attendance. The catalogue was not a very lengthy one. The bidding, however, was fairly brisk, but only one property was sold, a cottage at Leichhardt, which realised £400. For a pair of cottages at Petersham £455 was refused, and for a cottage at Stanmore £1200 was declined. An offer of £600 was also declined for a cottage at Addison-road. For land at Lakemba 25/ per foot was also declined.

The weekly sale of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench was held yesterday. The attendance was small. A list of 17 properties was submitted, but the bidding was slow, and the whole of the properties had to be passed in for private treaty. During the week the firm sold a freehold property in Sutherland-street, Paddington, for £3000; a shop and house adjoining, facing Addison-road, Marrickville, for £1010, and a block of land in Bernera Estate, Liverpool, for £154.

Messrs. Batt, Rodd, and Purves this week sold an investment property at Kensington. The price was in the vicinity of £10,000. The firm also sold two allotments in the Concord Park Estate at £2/15/ per foot.

The second sale of the properties of the late Mr. John Norton took place at the rooms of Messrs. Hardie and Gorman on Wednesday. There was a big attendance of buyers. Competition was keen, and six properties were disposed of. A block of land at Hunter's Hill was sold for £230, and another block at Ryde-road and Blaxland-street, Hunter's Hill realised £270. Forty-three acres at Gosford brought £160, and 11 acres in the same estate realised £110. An allotment at Hurstville sold for 15s foot, and an allotment Orange Grove Estate, Penshurst, realised £37. By private contract the firm, in the same estate, sold a block of land, with an old weatherboard cottage on it, Old South Head-road, Vaucluse, for £350, and two lots Long Bay-road, Coogee, at 40s foot. During the week the firm also sold two lots, Kitchener-road, Artarmon, at [illegible] per foot, and an allotment, Beattie's Estate, Campbell-street, Balmain, at £4 foot.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co., Limited, report having experienced a rather quiet week, which they attribute to the dislocation of business caused by the referendum campaign. Nevertheless, they effected a number of sales at Bankstown, particularly in farmlet lots, which class of land they also sold at Toongabbie and Wentworthville. All the land disposed of during the week was of the industrial description.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. this week sold a cottage at Mosman, for £975, and a cottage in Iceton-street, Burwood for £825.

There are several subdivision sales set down for this afternoon. Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. will offer the Central Estate at St. Leonards (this is practically part of North Sydney), only a few yards from the St. Leonards Station and Lane Cove tram. There are 40 building sites, and these should prove very attractive to builders. The terms are easy.

That the great trek of the home-builder is undoubtedly to the northern side of the harbour is strikingly demonstrated by the great progress which has taken place during the last few years, as may be seen in the thousands of homes that have sprung up. One of the opportunities offered to the investing public is the new waterside suburb of Northbridge. It embraces all the attributes necessary for the ideal home in that it is convenient to the city, a matter of only 30 minutes, and commands magnificent water views. This fine estate is the seventh subdivision (six having already been disposed of), comprising 49 excellent building sites, a limited number of which have frontages to Long Bay. The allotments are all well sheltered from the westerly winds, and have liberal frontages to well-made roads. This subdivision will be submitted this afternoon, to public auction on the ground, by Messrs. Raine and Horne. Judging by the number of lithos handed out, this sale promises to uphold the previous records of the former sales.

To-day at South Kensington, close to the Broad-road tram, just behind Daceyville, the Cooper's Estate, of 22 elevated home-sites, will be offered by Messrs. H. W. Horning and Co. on the usual easy terms. Land in this vicinity has a good prospective value on account of its easy access to the Quay and Railway.

The big rush of the Sydney public for holiday water resorts is being (within the last two years) partially met by the opening up of residential sites along the banks of the Woronora River, right from Como, almost to the fresh water. There are two ways of approaching this resort of anglers, picnickers, rowers, and week-enders, from Como by boat or from Sutherland by a short walk through Boyle Park. The reaches of the river above the bridge are free from the mud flat nuisance, and quite free therefore from the necessity of a high tide for boating conveniences, and the natural banks afford fine camping and building facilities. In the vicinity of Boyle Park are at least some 25 river bank homes, and adjoining the river are some 50 more. In the centre of this resort an auction will be held to-day of deep water frontages on the Deep Water Estate by Messrs. Piercy Ethell and Co., who are selling on easy terms, and have arranged that all persons can obtain free tickets for their special free launches to take buyers to the land from either Como or from Boyle Park, and will also return them to either place after the sale.

Messrs. Richardson and Wrench will conduct two subdivision sales this afternoon, one is at Burn's-road, Lane Cove, close to the Longueville tram terminus. The land has an elevated commanding position, with good views. It is really the pick of Lane Cove.

The second sale of this firm to-day will take place in the Meadowbank-Ryde district. The land is quite close to the Parramatta River, and only a few minutes' walk from the Meadowbank railway station. It is a subdivision in the Bennett's Estate, which is to be offered. The building sites form portion of the old homestead.

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social" Column in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning and be fully endorsed.

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, attended by Captain Haskett-Smith, opened the annual sale of work on behalf of the Ladies' Home Mission Union at the Town Hall yesterday afternoon. Her Excellency, who was welcomed on arrival by Archbishop Wright, Mrs. J. C. Wright (president of the L.H.M.U.), Archdeacon Gunther and D'Arcy Irvine, and Miss Joan Newton, honorary secretary, referred to the usefulness of the union in sending material comforts to the poorer quarters of the city, as well as in providing for the spiritual needs of poor parishes by arranging for a regular service of curates. Archdeacon Gunther and Archdeacon D'Arcy Irvine also spoke. The archbishop proposed a vote of thanks to Lady Helen. The party afterwards made a round of the stalls, which were well stocked, the booths being gaily decorated. Her Excellency made many purchases. Among the stallholders who did very good business were Mesdames Rooke, Friend, Brady, C. E. Curtis, Hare, Arthur Scrivener, H. Scrivener, Archdale (senior and junior), Absell, Wilson, Paton, White, Jeanette, the Misses Wright, Rowle, Nora Wright, and Miss Ula Rolfe, and Masters Roy Scrivener. In addition to the ordinary calls of the Home Missions and Mission Zone, funds are needed at the present time to keep up the supply of army chaplains and for the upkeep of the Liverpool and Kiama Church halls, and for the soldiers' welcome at the Cathedral.

In connection with the social service committee of the Presbyterian Church, an Australian market was held on Thursday afternoon and evening in Oxford Hall, Hyde Park by Lady Helen Munro Ferguson. The Moderator-General and Mrs. Macintyre, the State Moderator (Rev. Jas. Purdie), Mesdames Manson, Clouston, MacQueen, Robertson, Revs. F. L. A. Schloeffel, F. A. Barber, F. A. Darling, and Mr. Wm. Wood formed the reception committee. The Rev. A. J. Schloeffel explained that money was wanted to carry on a social service campaign in congested districts, such as Woolloomooloo and Redfern, where an order of deaconesses worked. In her opening speech, Lady Helen praised the Presbyterian Church for the keen interest always displayed by it in schemes of an educational and uplifting nature. The stallholders were Mesdames Scott-West, Webster, Steele, Morgan, Murray-Will, Roberts, Wade, Barber, Wilson, Geike, Sullivan, Watts, Munro, Willis, Gray, Creven, Patterson, Wilson, Misses Watson, Mein, Fenwick, Ferguson, Munro, Teece, Dickson, Baker, Armstrong Walker, Archdeacon Wade, Kethel, Fenwick, Colley, Morrison, Green, Gourlay, Pollock, Thompson, Kerr, Lister, Maze, McDiarmid, Attenborough, Sheridan, Wyllie, Ralston. Mrs. Fell was hostess and Miss Killen honorary secretary.

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson will open a fete this afternoon in the grounds of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Knox, Leura, Bellevue Hill, in aid of the 4th and 56 Battalion Comforts Fund. The committee is large and influential, and no efforts have been spared in preparations to make the fete one of the utmost importance.

Miss May Summerbelle gave a morning tea party at her studios, Castlereagh-street, yesterday mornin, to which the women writers and journalists of Sydney were invited to meet Mrs. M. Forrest, of Queensland.

A successful garden fete and sale of work was held on the 14th inst., at Westmailing, Belmore-road, Hurstville, the residence of Mrs. E. Elliott. The function was opened by Mrs. John Kirkpatrick, of Bellevue Hill. The stalls, presided over by the ladies, were artistically decorated, and good business resulted from their efforts. At night the spacious grounds were illuminated, and a musical programme given by Mrs. C. Gardiner's orchestra. The proceeds are to be devoted to St. George's Church of England building fund.

As a result of the Guyong fete last Saturday, Mrs. T. Raine has banked £170 10s to the credit of the 17th Battalion Comforts Fund, and there is still more to follow. The promoter and helpers feel extremely gratified at such a satisfactory return for the efforts made by them.

A send-off was given by Mrs. Wilson, the superintendent, to Miss Constance Buckland, matron of Bayview private hospital, Tempe, on the evening of the 10th instant, in consequence of Miss Buckland's approaching marriage. The staff, a number of patients and friends, assembled in Emerald Hall, when Dr. E. P. Sinclair, the medical officer, on behalf of all present, presented the matron with several handsome gifts.

Mr. G. E. Holroyde has placed at the disposal of the old linen branch of the Red Cross Society two clipping machines, which he has specially invented to assist in this work. The linen clippings are used for filling absorbent surgical pads (endless supplies of which are needed), and the work will be greatly facilitated and expedited by Mr. Holroyde's machines. In designing and making these machines he was assisted by Mr. E. S. Stewart, and valuable help in connection with their manufacture was also given by the Colonial Sugar Refining Company, Messrs. Gordon Marr and Sons, and Messrs. Green and Co. Mr. Holroyde has presented one of the machines to the old linen depot, and has lent the other to it during the war. After that it is to be presented to Sydney Hospital. The depot is still urgently appealing for old linen, which includes any white cotton material that has been thoroughly washed and boiled. Contributions will be gratefully received if sent to the hon. secretary, Miss Ella Richards, or left at the depot in the basement of the Town Hall.

On October 18, at the "South Sydney centre for Soldiers' Wives and Mothers," Botany-road, Waterloo, a leather writing case was presented to the hon. secretary, Miss Myall Cadell, by Mrs. Smith, on behalf of the members. Miss Cadell has been associated with the centre since its beginning, and is now reluctantly compelled to relinquish her post owing to removal from Sydney.

The Australian miners at the front are asking for warm clothing, and the committee of that Comforts Fund will be grateful for more helpers to take work home, or to sew at the depot, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, 10 to 5 o'clock, at Robson's, Camden House, Elizabeth and Liverpool streets.

A sale of goods will be held in the vestibule of Her Majesty's Theatre this morning, in aid of the 34th Battalion Comforts Fund, No. 2. Donations of cakes, sweets, flowers, will be gratefully received. Communications to be addressed to Miss Gladys Harris, hon. secretary, 117 Pitt-street.

At St. Andrew's Cathedral on October 7, the wedding was celebrated of Elvira Helena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Greenwell, Malvern Hill, Croydon, and William George Chapple, architect, Sydney Harbour Trust, only son of Mr. John Chapple, retired City Treasurer, Wellington, New Zealand. The bride wore a walking dress of white aeolian silk, and hat with ninon poppies to match. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds, and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids—Miss Ford and little Marjorie Rumery, and Clare Niland—wore shell pink ninon dresses, black picture hats, wreathed with pink roses, and carried pink rose bouquets. Mr. C. Green was best man. The bride was given away by her father. The Rev. C. H. W. Clarke (Assistant Precentor) officiated. After the ceremony the bride and bridegroom left for the South Coast, while the bride's mother entertained the guests at "breakfast."

A wedding was celebrated at Sacred Heart Church, Darlinghurst, on September 16, when May, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Horrigan, of Paddington, was married to Herbert Fitzroy, eldest son of Alderman and Mrs. M. Purcell, of Paddington. The ceremony was performed by Monsignor O'Haran. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. Robert Boxall, wore a gown of white crepe de Chine, trimmed with marquisette and ninon, a coronet of orange blossom, and embroidered tulle veil. The bridesmaid—Miss E. Horrigan, sister of the bride—wore pink crepe de Chine and mob cap en suite. Mr. T. Balfe was best man. A reception was subsequently held at the residence of the bride's parents. Mrs. Robert Boxall, aunt of the bride, lent her home at Woy Woy for the honeymoon.

On September 16, at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, Belmore, Gertrude, third daughter of Mrs. E. Eather, Yabbi, Belmore, was married to Private James Lynch, fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Owen Lynch, Bulgundria, Dalgety. The Rev. Father Kenney officiated. The Church was decorated. The bride, who was given away by her brother-in-law, Mr. R. F. Murphy, wore her travelling dress of Assam silk coat and skirt, with a pale pink chiffon hat. She carried a posy of white carnation, sweet peas, and asparagus fern, which, with a diamond ring, was the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Madge Eather (sister of the bride) was bridesmaid, and wore a nattier blue poplin coat and skirt. Her bouquet of pink sweet peas, with a cameo ring and brooch, were gifts of the bridegroom. Major Lynch (cousin of the bridegroom) acted as best man. After the reception, which was held at the bride's home, the happy couple left for Port Hacking and Goulburn.

ENGAGEMENTS.

The engagement is announced of Geraldine Ursula, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Walker, of Winterdene, Wagga, now of Bathurst, and Lieut. Ernest Spencer Rule Taylor, only son of Mr. E. Rule Taylor, of Aldboro, Pymble.

The engagement is announced of Miss Vera Nina Mattick, eldest daughter of William J. Mattick, Esq., of Gundowda station, Hargraves, N.S.W., to S. Martin-Mortlock, youngest son of the late James John Mortlock, of North Sydney and London, England.

WHY "YES."

(BY PROFESSOR RONALD G. MACINTYRE, St. Andrew's College, University of Sydney.)

It may be safely assumed that every conceivable argument for and against an affirmative answer to the referendum has been already put forward, and I have no expectation of saying anything new. But it has been suggested to me that the point of view of one who stood for the voluntary system to the utmost may be of some help. It is little use wasting argument upon those who attend public meetings in order to prevent argument being heard. They shriek about liberty and freedom of speech while they are denying both to those who happen to hold a different view, and I have seen no protest from their leaders. These Prussian methods come well from those who "boo" at our soldiers, and cheer the Kaiser. These are degenerates such as exist in every nation, and I am glad to believe that they constitute a very small, though noisy, minority, even among the "anti-conscriptionists." On the other hand, there are very many who meditate voting "No," because they are not yet clear that a "Yes" vote is called for, and it is to such I venture to make appeal.

1. My whole idea of the State is to have in it as little compulsion as possible. The ready response of the willing mind and the utmost personal liberty consistent with the welfare of the community has been with me as a fixed principle from the days of my youth, and I have sometimes watched with grave concern the readiness of certain political factions to resort to compulsion as the normal method of procedure. Universal service is thoroughly democratic, but the highest ideal is when this can be attained without compulsion. For that reason I steadily opposed compulsory service so long as the call upon our country for its defence could be met without resort to this extreme measure, and, acting up to my own principle, placed whatever service I could render at the disposal of the State. In my view an affirmative answer to the referendum is only warranted because we have not yet attained that high stage when the urgent need of the State can be met by voluntary universal service.

2. No one can look without pride upon the response of Australia in this crisis of our existence. The response has been magnificent, far exceeding the expectation even of those who had abounding faith in the spirit of our people. The voluntary system has wrought marvels, and only the tremendous demand of the crisis has discovered its limit. But that demand has discovered its limit. If anyone says that we can meet the need by continuance of the voluntary system alone, he is talking in sheer ignorance of the facts. I have been for a longer time in intimate touch with the State Recruiting Committee than any other member, and the facts are too evident to admit of denial, that if we are to trust any longer to voluntary enlistment we must retire from effective share in defence of the Empire, and must leave our brave lads at the front without the necessary reinforcement. There is not a member of the State Recruiting Committee, or anyone who has been associated with the work, who was not convinced that we had practically exhausted the effectiveness of all our methods for voluntary enlistment. As a recruiting committee we had come to the end of our work if the test be the needful reinforcements to our present Australian army. I do not think that I am going beyond what I may be permitted to say, when I assert that that conclusion was unanimous, and that some other method was absolutely necessary to make up the shortage in voluntary enlistment. What other method can meet the need except that of compulsory service, which is welcomed by many who desired to serve, but were not clear that the time had come for them to put aside other obligations? Even now compulsion is not a substitute for voluntaryism, but an addition to it. The present proposal is only to make up so much of the shortage as voluntaryism leaves.

3. We are not being asked to add to the strength of the Australian army, but only to keep it up to its present strength. Some of us were active agents in inducing the men now at the front to go there. That was a great responsibility, one I felt every time I spoke on a recruiting platform. I ask those who took part in this work, are they willing to take upon themselves the awful responsibility of having induced men to go to the front and then to say to them, We are not prepared to back you up? What a terrible position to leave our men in. I do not desire to judge the conscience of other men, but to me it would be the great betrayal, and I am utterly at a loss to understand how men who spoke with passionate earnestness from recruiting platforms, or even those who cheered our recruits as they came forward, can now vote against sending the necessary reinforcements in the only way these can be obtained. To me the question is painfully simple, are we going to forsake the men we sent to the front or stand by them? Any other question—about Maltese immigrants or anything else—is wholly irrelevant.

4. To vote "Yes" is not only to take our proper part in saving the Empire, but also in saving the lives of the men we have sent to the front. To refuse the necessary reinforcements is to put our army at the mercy of the Germans. Our lads must be denied the needful rest from trench warfare, the opportunity of recuperation, and so be less able to battle against sickness and less fit to meet their foe when he counter-attacks. The death-roll of these brave Australian volunteers will mount up with fatal rapidity. Can we allow it? What a disheartening message to send to the trenches beyond Pozieres—Australia has decided to leave you to finish the war the best way you can! Better, far better, to recall all our troops and own that we have grown tired of the task we so enthusiastically undertook. But we know that our splendid men would refuse to come back. They will die at their post, but they will not forsake it. It is being widely urged, Have we any right to vote another man's life away? That is a mis-statement of the question. To vote "No" is to sacrifice the lives of thousands whom we were all agreed in urging to go. The question is, have we any right to vote away the lives of our men at the front? They are ours; they represent us; we are proud of them; we must stand by them. At such a time as this it is the duty of every man to stand by his country in whatever way he is asked to serve. That duty belongs to all of us, whatever our age, and I fully subscribe to it for myself. The question before us is, Are we entitled to compel every citizen to discharge the duty of citizenship when called upon by the State? Better that he should do his duty of his own free-will, as many have done; but if any fail, then we are entitled to compel him in duty's path. We vote to compel a man to do that duty which he ought to do without compulsion. The existence of a duty, not the perception of it, is the determining factor. Vote, then, that no man shall be allowed to shirk the duty of citizenship.

5. With shame does every true Australian hear it said that Russian, or Indian, or French, or even our own kinsmen of the homeland, who have answered far beyond our measure, should fill up the blanks in Australia's army. Do we realise what Russia and France and Great Britain have suffered, while we sit secure in our far-distant home that has never heard an enemy gun? Spare us the shame of such speeches. The very suggestion that Australia should sink to that level should rouse every lover of his country to vote "Yes."

FRESH AIR LEAGUE.

Established 25 years ago, and relying entirely upon voluntary subscriptions since the outbreak of war, the Fresh Air League is continuing its mission of helping sick children and poor mothers with delicate infants who need rest and change.

It was stated at the annual meeting in one of the rooms of the Town Hall yesterday morning, the Lady Mayoress presiding, that the league had enabled 7428 persons to spend a few weeks in country homes. During the past 12 months £23 3s 4d had been expended on railway fares, and £145 8s 8d on board and residence for those who had been sent to the country. The subscriptions amounted to £143 7s 6d, and the donations included £75 from the Walter and Eliza Hall Trust, £25 from the late Miss M. A. Doyle, and £10 from the trustees of the late Sir John Hay.

THE ORDEAL OF WOMANHOOD.

(BY PROFESSOR D. A. WELSH, THE UNIVERSITY, SYDNEY.)

II.

Both political parties claim credit for making military service compulsory throughout Australia. In other words, Australia has voluntarily adopted the principle of conscription. But, by a peculiar lapse of the historic imagination, it was not seen that there might arise an awful menace against which there could be no possible defence within Australia. In every retina there is a blind spot, and by a strange fatality the Defence Act crossed the blind spot of the legislative eye at this critical point. No explicit provision was made for the defence of Australia beyond Australia. Germany might overrun Europe, obtain a stranglehold on England, and proceed to adopt an orphaned Australia at her own selected time and in her own inimitable way. No citizen of Australia would be obliged to strike a blow in her defence until all defence was hopeless. To confine the defence of Australia within Australia, at this crisis of her fate, is to enforce national suicide by Act of Parliament.

A nation attacked cannot choose the place of the defence. That must depend on where the attack is launched. If Australia is attacked on the west coast, the men of Sydney must be sent more than two thousand miles to repel the invader. If she is attacked in France, her soldiers must be sent more than ten thousand miles away. There is no difference in strategic necessity; the only difference is in the distance, and Australia may count herself fortunate that the distance is so great. To quote this geographical privilege as a reason for evading a moral obligation is a reversal of argument.

By the referendum no one is given the chance of saying whether he approves or disapproves of the conscription of human life for the defence of Australia. That was settled long ago by the representatives of the people, and has been accepted by the people as a true expression of their determination to be free. The only question for decision is this:—"Shall the defence of Australia be made at the only time and at the only place at which defence has any hope of success?" But the only time is now, and the only place is there; now, while there is yet time to train our reinforcements so that they may not be condemned to death by being sent into the firing-line too soon; there, in the trenches, where our bravest and best will be condemned to death from undue fatigue and strain if relief comes never or too late.

War does not make heroes; it only reveals them. To every man, to every woman, there come critical moments in life, when the character formed throughout the uneventful years is put to a sudden, inescapable test. The great war has proved our men to be a race of heroes, ready to make the great decision in a flash. Men have thrown themselves on a bursting bomb to save their comrades when they could have saved themselves by flight. One figure, outstanding among heroes innumerable, is that of a woman—Edith Cavell. Her supreme sacrifice, her sublime charity, are an inspiration to all women for all time. Her offence, in the mind of the enemy, was not that she kept men from fighting, but that she sent men to fight—the broken and sick men whom she had nursed to health. She saw the danger to herself if she acted with courage. She saw the danger to the Allies if she faltered. She gave her life that she might send other women's sons to fight.

If honour and duty mean the same things in Australia as they do in Belgium, France, and Britain, the women will not shrink from their great decision. They will resolve to send their men to war against war, strengthened by the knowledge that the more freely they give the less are they likely to lose. They will encourage their weaker sisters to record their vote on the side for which Edith Cavell greatly lived and greatly died.

Women must dismiss from their minds the idea that military service is degrading to a man when it is compulsory. It is true that Germany did evolve a most degrading system of conscription, and no worse thing could be said of it than this, that it was consonant with the spirit of that race, an expression of the character of the men who devised it. Compulsion in France and in Britain has not killed the fine qualities of their fighting men, their elan, their camaraderie, their energy, their initiative, their humour. The conscript armies of the great free nations encourage that real independence of the soldier which is not inconsistent with true discipline.

Voluntary service is most ennobling—to the volunteer. But think for a moment of its effect on those who do not volunteer. Those who are fit and free to serve, and do not offer, rank as the moral bankrupts of the community. If they are allowed to shirk, while their comrades accept the great adventure, they will become more and more insensitive to the call of honour and duty. The race will be impoverished in two respects—it will have been unnecessarily extravagant with its best men, and it will have hastened the deterioration of its worst. But compulsion will fall on the moral weakling like a cold douche, and brace him up. When selfishness, with a dash of cowardliness, is the only thing that holds a man back, compulsion would be his salvation. With his character developed and strengthened in the great school of war, he will have reason to be grateful to his country for making him a man at last.

On every ground of patriotism and common-sense, from every motive of self-interest and self-respect, in every emotion of fear and hope, animated by a just indignation to exact full retribution from those who are responsible for this world disaster, and for the crimes which have stained humanity, determined to have no ignoble or uncertain peace, impelled by an overwhelming sense of gratitude to all who have endured the suffering while we have enjoyed the freedom, we men and women of Australia should be ashamed to rest content with anything short of our best effort.

Even in the trenches tragedy is lightened by humour. All the world over woman likes to be courted. Never have the women of Australia been paid so much attention by all sorts and conditions of men. But I never heard that women had any satisfaction in receiving proposals from men who hoped they would say "No." All true women must prefer to be addressed by men who desire that at this anxious time they should give the answer which will make them comrades in all high endeavour—the answer, "Yes."

AWARDED THE MILITARY CROSS.

CAPTAIN P. S. LONG INNES,
Son of the late Judge, Sir George Long Innes.

Captain P. S. Long Innes, of the Irish Guards, was severely wounded on September 11 last in the operations on the Somme, and was previously severely wounded at Givenchy on February 1, 1915. He is now in his 37th year, and was educated at Eton College, England, and at the Sydney University, which he left in order to join the Royal Australian Artillery. After several years' service, and serving in the Boer War, 1900-1, he exchanged into the Canadian Ordnance Corps, in which he attained the rank of captain, and from which he resigned in 1912. On the outbreak of the present war he offered his services and was gazetted as captain to the 1st Battalion of the Irish Guards, and has been on active service on the Western front ever since December, 1914, with the exception of ten months, when invalided.

LIEUT. ARCHIBALD C. GUNTER,
Son of Mr. George Gunter, of Warnock Hall, Bondi.

The official "Gazette" states: "He showed conspicuous gallantry as a bombing officer." Lieutenant Archibald Clavering Gunter enlisted as a private, but was given his commission before reaching his 21st birthday, and has not yet completed his 22nd year. He obtained his second star in Egypt, and has been grenade officer for his battalion. Private advices state that he has now attained his captaincy, and is adjutant of his battalion. At the time of his enlistment, Lieutenant Gunter was on the staff of the National Bank of Australasia, Pitt-street. The bank has sent him the following cable:—"Congratulations from directors, chief manager, and staff of bank upon his Majesty's recognition of your signal bravery." His elder brother is also on active service abroad.

LIEUT. WILLIAM HARRIS,
Son of Mr. William Harris, of Stanley-street, Leichhardt.

According to the official notification, he "skilfully consolidated the ground won, and organised bombing parties and repelled a counter attack." Lieutenant Harris was in the office of Messrs. Cadogan and Stewart, public accountants, of Castlereagh-street, at the time he enlisted, and was a lieutenant in the citizen forces. He has a younger brother, Sergeant J. Harris, serving at the front.

LIEUT. JOHN GURNER BURNELL, B.E.
Son of Mrs. Burnell, of Macquarie-street, Parramatta.

The official notification of the award of the Military Cross to Lieut. Burnell states: "He carried out a most risky reconnaissance which resulted in the occupation of further trenches." Lieut. Burnell was educated at the King's School, Parramatta, and at the Sydney University. At the time of enlisting he was chief mechanical engineer to the State Rivers and Water Supply Commission of Victoria. He is with the Field Engineers.

CAPTAIN HUGH RAYSON, A.M.C.,
Son of Mr. Henry Rayson, of Summer Hill.

He has been awarded the Military Cross for rendering first aid in the trenches under the heaviest shell-fire, working night and day. He was born in Wollongong, and completed his medical studies at Sydney University about two years ago, gaining his degrees. He then took up a practice in the country, but relinquished it to leave Sydney as a captain in the Army Medical Corps.

LIEUT. C. A. KELLEWAY,
The International Cricketer of Glebe Point.

A private cable states that Lieut. Kelleway was presented with the Military Cross by the King at Buckingham Palace. He was wounded in the thigh on July 2, but returned to duty, and was again wounded, this time in the forearm. He became dangerously ill, but recovered, and is again at his post. He is a native of the State, and was born in 1889.

In each case there was a motion to dismiss the suit, particulars of which have already appeared.

UNION DISPUTE.

Milburn v Quill.

This suit, which was reported yesterday, was mentioned. The matter at issue was the work of conducting the ballot for a new committee of the Australasian Timber Workers' Union, New South Wales Branch. His Honor held that the election of the new committee must be decided at one time and at one place, as it was not possible to hold the election simultaneously in two or more different centres.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Heydon.)

FURNACEMEN'S WAGES.

Giving judgment in the appeal by the Federated Ironworkers' Association against portions of the Iron and Shipbuilding Trades Group, No. 11 Board, his Honor said that as a result of the inspections, he could not possibly see that the board was wrong. He found that the small difference which it had made between the two rates of wages correspond to, at least, an equal difference between the two classes of work. He must, therefore, leave the award unaltered.

His Honor added, that he thought he should take notice of another matter, which appeared during the hearing of the appeal, that the appellant union joined in a stoppage of work, not for an industrial, but for a political purpose, on the 4th instant. He, therefore, directed that the union be called upon to show cause why the preference given to it in the award of July 14, 1915, should not be cancelled.

NEW BOARD REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. J. Mathews, of Port Kembla, was nominated as the employees' representative on the Metalliferous Mining (General) Group, No. 3 Board (Electrolytic Refining and Smelting Co.), in lieu of Mr. C. Sloan, resigned. His Honor recommended the nomination.

(Before Mr. Justice Edmunds.)

IRONWORKERS' WAGES.

His Honor delivered his reserved decision in the appeal by the Federated Ironworkers' Association against portions of the award of the Iron and Shipbuilding Trades Group, No. 2 Board. His Honor said he had inspected the work in the structural and in the engineering shops, and had come to the conclusion that the drillers' work in the structural industry did not require as high a skill as in an engineering shop, whether that work was paid under the engineers' or the ironworkers' assistants' award. He accordingly refused to increase the rate to 1/2¾ per hour, but he thought the rate for ironworkers' assistants—1s 2½d per hour—was justly applicable to those structural employees. As regarded other workers mentioned in clause 4 (b) of the structural steel and iron award, he put their wages at the same rate, 1s 2½d per hour, and ordered, in conformity with the employers' consent, that the amendment of the award take effect as from April 1 last. He also directed that the preference clause in the award should be altered so as to include the applicant union, which embraced the majority of the workers concerned. His Honor added that as the question whether preference should be taken away from the union for stopping work on the 4th inst. was now pending in another matter, he refrained for the present from making the alteration.

Mr. Croft appeared for the applicant association; and Mr. F. Wegg Horne for the Iron Trades Employers' Federation.

COURT OF REVIEW.

(Before Judge Murray.)

CLAIM TO DEDUCTIONS.

Re J. F. Elliott.

Mr. H. E. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Norton, Smith, and Co., appeared for J. F. Elliott, who appealed in his personal capacity, and also as agent of Gordon Roy Elliott, against income tax assessments. Mr. A. Thomson, instructed by Mr. R. M. Kidston, of the Crown Solicitor's Office, appeared for the Commissioners. Mr. Manning explained that appellant is a beneficiary under the will of George Robertson Elliott, with seven others, and he was residuary legatee. He had been with other legatees allowed to overdraw the amount to which he was entitled as residuary legatee, and had to pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent.; and the main question in the case was whether the Commissioners had properly disallowed £335, amount of interest as a deduction.

His Honor, after hearing argument, reserved judgment.

MILITARY CROSS HERO KILLED.

LIEUT. RICHARD FARLEY BULKELEY,
Son of Mr. R. H. Bulkeley, of Wallerawang.

Private advices state that Lieut. Bulkeley was killed in action, in France, in August last. He was awarded the Military Cross for gallantry at Pozieres on July 24, his deed thus being officially described:—"He pushed ahead of the British position with great gallantry, capturing 13 prisoners and gaining most valuable information."

General Birdwood, in a letter to Lieut. Bulkeley, dated August 17, said:—"Dear Bulkeley,—This is just a line to congratulate you very heartily upon the Military Cross, which you so thoroughly well deserved for your gallantry and great bravery on the 24th of last month during the attack on Pozieres. I well know how you pushed forward the head of our position in the village, and captured 13 prisoners, thus gaining for us most useful information. I know, too, that your gallantry inspired the men with confidence, especially, perhaps, when you helped in digging out men who had been buried by the heavy shell-fire. I thank you so much for this, and with good wishes to you for the future, yours sincerely (signed), W. R. Birdwood."

MR. J. J. VIRGO.

CIVIC RECEPTION.

The Lord Mayor (Alderman R. D. Meagher, M.L.A.), tendered a civic reception to Mr. J. J. Virgo, British national field secretary of the Y.M.C.A., in the Town Hall yesterday. Among those present were Mr. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C., Alderman John Leitch, and Messrs. Hugh Dixson, John Kent, G. Mason Allard, S. M'Call-M'Cowan, R. A. Dallen, E. L. Davis, W. T. MacPherson, W. Gillanders, B.A., W. T. Willington, C. Le M. Walker, C. H. Dew, G. B. Vickery, G. S. Scott, James Sandy, J. Henry Lang, A. B. Pursell, J. T. Tillock, and A. W. Cohen.

The Lord Mayor, in proposing the toast of "Our Guest," voiced his pride, and that of those present, not only in Mr. Virgo's great intellectual power, but also in his marvellous energy. He briefly sketched Mr. Virgo's history as associated with the Y.M.C.A. work, recalling the fact that he was the means in 1903, when secretary of the N.S.W. branch of that institution, of raising £15,000 in 30 days to erect the present Y.M.C.A. building. The Lord Mayor mentioned that Mr. Virgo is now touring the world in the interests of the Y.M.C.A., and expressed appreciation of the work which that institution is doing in connection with Australian troops and sailors abroad. Touching on the conscription issue, the Lord Mayor said he was an anti-militarist, and of the opinion that if any monuments were to be erected they should be in honour of men like Pasteur and Simpson, the discoverers of chloroform and antiseptics, who helped to preserve life, rather than destroy it. Still he believed the Australian heart and intelligence would manifest itself in a triumphant "Yes" on the 28th inst. and thus help to assure the continuity of Australia, the Empire, and liberty. (Applause.)

The toast was supported by Mr. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C.

In responding, Mr. Virgo stated that, as a Briton, he failed to understand how a call like that which now came could remain unanswered. (Applause.) Mr. Virgo added that, in connection with the establishment of a British national headquarters, one of the most important phases of the work would be that of emigration and immigration. The London Y.M.C.A. had appealed for £25,000 for their work at the front, and they had received £1,000,000. (Applause.) Of that amount, Australia and New Zealand had contributed one-fifth.

Mr. G. Mason Allard proposed the toast of the Lord Mayor.

These committees, Mr. Lang (Australian national secretary) explained, had come into existence since the war, and had rendered splendid service in connection with appeals that had been launched. They were composed of the leading professional and commercial men in the various cities represented, and were heart and soul with the Y.M.C.A. in the work it was doing.

A report submitted by the committee of secretaries appointed to prepare recommendations on the national policy scheme was adopted by the convention. The committee recommended that steps should immediately be taken:—

To secure the services of Mr. J. J. Virgo for an additional three months in Australia, and to ask the Adelaide board of directors to release Mr. Wheeler for three months.

To secure immediately a national budget for five years, Mr. Virgo to take charge of the effort.

To appoint as the national executive: Messrs. T. Thomas (chairman), Messrs. W. Shaw and L. Jenner (vice-chairmen), Mr. A. H. Sargood (treasurer), Messrs. C. F. Crosby, George Kettlewell, Gillespie, and Prof. Eoken, with headquarters in Melbourne, these gentlemen to be included on the national general committee.

To urge the executive to make as its first business after securing the budget the raising of £30,000 as a permanent national endowment.

To instruct the executive to appoint two associate national secretaries to work with Mr. J. H. Lang, who shall be the national general secretary.

The national State secretaries should be appointed as soon as possible, the report stated, and the national executive urged to work out the biggest possible national programme.

Mr. Mason Allard, president of the N.S.W. Citizens' Committee, commented on the proposal to raise the sum of £30,000 as a permanent national endowment. The nationalisation scheme was a good one, he said, in view of the need for extension, but he did not think that the present was an opportune time to launch any further appeals on an already overburdened public. Funds would be available at the right time, but they should organise their budget, and go on vigorously collecting for war work. Then, when the war was over, they would find the public willing to support them in any proposal brought forward.

Mr. Wheeler (Adelaide) said the association should try and be the first organisation in the field. If they could be of service to the returned soldiers, it would mean that the Y.M.C.A. ideal would be presented to them, instead of some other ideals which might not be so advantageous to them.

TRAINING OF OFFICERS.

The question of training of officers for Y.M.C.A. work was dealt with in a paper submitted by Messrs. J. E. Jenkins and P. A. Wisewould. Among the proposals was one for the establishment of an efficiently organised college or school for the training of candidates for official positions, suitable students being assigned to selected centres on terms providing for a salary adequate to cover living expenses. It was also suggested that the Australasian students' Christian movement and kindred organisations should be asked to bring before their members the Y.M.C.A. secretaryship for consideration as a possible avenue for life work.

CITY AND SUBURBAN EXTENSION.

Mr. R. E. Boardman, acting general secretary of the Melbourne association, read a paper on Y.M.C.A. extension plans in the city and suburbs. The war work, he said, had given the association a unique place in the affection of the people, and it was felt that the care of returning soldiers was a sacred duty. There was an urgent necessity for new buildings in Adelaide and Melbourne, and also for structures for the suburbs. It was necessary to inaugurate a great suburban scheme, in order to prepare for the work ahead, and he recommended, amongst other things, the organising of a metropolitan Y.M.C.A., consisting of a central building in the capital city and branches in the suburbs, each suburban branch to be autonomous, and to deal with its own work and finances, and to be represented on the metropolitan council.

The matter was referred to the committee on reports.

PUBLICITY WORK.

The questions of general publicity and a national magazine were discussed. Mr. A. B. Pursell advocated a Y.M.C.A. war paper, which, he said, would not only deal with association problems, but could also be used for the exchange of ideas in its circulation among the men in the camps and at the front.

Mr. A. S. Wilson (Perth) said that to neglect the printing-press would be to throw away one of the chief factors in Y.M.C.A. advance. The association badly needed an interstate newspaper, up to the standard of the best association journals of the world.

DIED ON ACTIVE SERVICE.

LIEUT.-COL. HAROLD KNOWLES BEAN, of Wallsend, near Newcastle, whose death took place on board the hospital ship Kanowna on September 26.

He was about 60 years of age, and was born near Manchester, England. His father had a medical practice at Mosley, England, and during the early part of Lieut.-Colonel Bean's medical career he assisted his father. He left England about 30 years ago, and practised in Victoria for two or three years. He returned home, but came out to Australia again shortly afterwards and settled at Wallsend, where he practised from 1890 to 1914, when his services were accepted by the military. Lieut.-Colonel Bean served in the South African war. He held the rank of major in the Fourth Regiment, and when the Second Light Horse Field Ambulance was formed for field service he was placed in charge.

Shortly after the present war broke out Lieut.-Colonel Bean offered his services, which were accepted. Two years ago he left Queensland with the Second Light Horse for Egypt, and saw service in Gallipoli. He was invalided to England last November, and on recovering went to Egypt in charge of the Third Light Horse Field Ambulance. He was in Egypt six or seven months before he became ill a second time, and did not recover.

Mrs. Bean and her daughter were with the late Lieut.-Colonel Bean in England some months ago, and they are now returning to Australia by the R.M.S. Mongolia, which is due to arrive at Fremantle shortly.

WAR SERVICE COMMITTEES.

A conference of delegates from the War Service Committees of the metropolitan area was held at Victoria Barracks yesterday. The business of the conference was to discuss:—(a) The method of utilising the war census information in the hands of War Service Committees for the purposes of the War Service Regulations, 1916. (b) The amount of voluntary assistance that members of such committees can provide in furtherance of the foregoing. (c) The utilisation of the services of recruiting sergeants, and the information they possess, for a similar purpose.

It was decided "that this conference of delegates of the Metropolitan War Service Committees pledges itself to assist the Minister for Defence in every way possible in carrying out the provisions of the War Service Regulations, 1916."

HABERFIELD.
THE CELEBRATED GARDEN SUBURB.

Known throughout Australia as the only district where a Town Planning Proposition has been practically completed, and where everything can be seen illustrating the wonderful advantages associated with home life under these favourable conditions, and at the same time providing purchasers with artistic, most substantially constructed and scientifically designed cottage properties.

We are still constructing these unique residences, and if you will come and inspect the district we will show you a beautiful cottage home for £800 with 50ft of land by a depth of 210ft. The cottage being unique in its arrangement and construction. We have also a very fine proposition of a bungalow variety, contg. drawing, dining room, 3 good bedrooms, sleeping-out verandah, return verandah front and side, tiled, breakfast-room, tiled bathroom, with porcelain bath, linen press, and, above all, a first-class corner position, convenient to Summer Hill Railway Station, and a 3 mins.' service tram. We have also other types larger, which range from £1085 to £1350.

Listen to our terms. If you only have £50 in cash, that will do. You can then pay us 25/, 27/6, or 30/ per week, as the case may be, according to the size of the property, and the interest charged is the low rate of 5 per cent. p.a. As far as we are aware no other new properties are offered to-day on a 5 per cent. terms basis. This alone should show a saving of £100 on any one cottage compared with a similar purchase elsewhere on a 6 per cent. basis. These are matters that should be carefully considered when you are deciding on a purchase of a home.

Our Salesman will be in attendance all day Saturday at the Haberfield Office, or, in fact, any other time during the week. Full particulars.

HOUSES AND LAND FOR SALE.

RICKARD'S REALTY REVIEW.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

POINTS FOR LAND BUYERS.

Our New Deposit Scheme has caught on well.

We are now opening accounts for any amount down to one shilling.

The depositor can afterwards make payments whenever he likes, and of whatever sum he likes.

When a sufficient amount has been saved he can apply it as a deposit on the purchase of a block of land on our Easy Terms System.

We allow 5 per cent. interest on the moneys thus deposited. The depositor has the right to withdraw his money if he wishes to do so, in which case the interest would be computed at 4 per cent.

The object of this system is to provide for those cases, which are so common, of people who desire to start to acquire a home of their own, but find it difficult to get together the amount of the first deposit.

The system also provides for those who do not care to buy land by instalments, and who would prefer to save till they have the requisite amount of cash to purchase it right out.

It also meets the case of those who prefer to wait till they can see a site that strikes their fancy.

This is a splendid opportunity for young boys starting in life to save their money to the best advantage. It gives them a definite object to save for, and as their land will keep on increasing in value it enables them to enter into a sound investment with their spare shillings.

It is also a fine chance for parents desiring to provide a dowry for their daughters when they marry. No wedding present could be better than a block of land. If the girls are only children now, the value of the land will doubtless have so greatly increased by the time they marry that they will be easily able to finance a Home of their own.

Our Easy Terms System means the payment of £1 down and 10/ per week for every £25 worth of land purchased; £2 down and £1 per month for every £50 worth; £2/10/ down and £1/5/ per month for every £75 worth; and £3 down and £1/10/ per month for every £100 worth.

For £1 down and 10/ per month we have some Fine Home Sites available now at Auburn, a suburb with a certain future. On the Highlands Estate, which is splendidly situated in an elevated position, about 15 minutes of the station, there are fine, cleared, grassy lots, 40 x 165 ft, from 12/6 per foot.

The Highlands Extension Estate adjoins the above, and provides good lots, 50 x 132 ft, which, at from 6/6 per foot, are very lowly valued.

One of the best parts of Auburn is that where the Riverside Heights Estate is situated. This property adjoins the new Government Abattoirs at Homebush Bay. The land is sufficiently removed from the works to avoid all unpleasant features, and makes convenient Home Sites for the workers employed there. A 'bus from the station passes the Estate frequently.

If you will call at Arthur Rickard and Co.'s Branch Office, on the South-parade, Auburn, right opposite the Railway Subway, our local agent (Mr. Firmin) will be glad to drive you over our various Estates at Auburn.

Nothing seems to interfere with the progress of Bankstown, which is going ahead at a great pace. Those in the know realise the fine prospects of this district, and land is, therefore, being snapped up fast. Our Suburban Park Estate is rapidly selling out, and those who want to get hold of one or two of the quarter-acre blocks which we are offering on this subdivision, from only £10/10/ each, have no time to lose.

The Sydney Park Estate, in the vicinity of Suburban Park, is also in great demand. Allotments of a quarter-acre can now be obtained there for as little as £5 each, though good-soil blocks of the same size will cost from £10/10/, which, however, is remarkably cheap. A Motor 'Bus now runs to this Estate from the station, and only takes fifteen minutes in transit.

Workers seeking good Home Sites should take our advice, and see the Marne Park Estate at Lidcombe. It is really excellent land, right on the Parramatta-road, quite handy to the station and to a good shopping district, and opposite the new Abattoirs (without being in any way unfavourably affected by them), which are giving increasing value to the land. The Estate is subdivided into lots 50 x 132 ft, which are offered at the low price of 14/6 per foot.

Another splendid locality for the wage-earner to settle in, particularly if he wants to keep poultry, is that part lying between Clyde and Granville known as Granville Downs. This Estate is in Clyde-street, 15 minutes of the station, and there is a large variety of good building blocks, with 50 to 60 ft frontages, from 8/6 per foot.

Our Farmlet movement is growing in great style. People are writing from all parts of Australia for particulars of the great opportunities now offering around Sydney for poultry farming and intense cultivation.

We actually received a letter this week from a man in the Dutch East Indies, asking us to keep ten acres of good land for him near Sydney, as he intended coming out here to start a market garden.

Outsiders seem to realise even more than Sydney residents the great possibilities of small farming near this great and growing city. There never was a better time than this to undertake these pursuits. It is the only certain money-maker.

Good soil is, of course, the first essential, and it is because of the richness of its soil that Toongabbie Park has been in such demand for the purpose mentioned. This Estate has every possible advantage. It is only 45 minutes from Sydney; it possesses the richest of soil; it is subdivided into convenient blocks, ranging from 1 to 4½ acres; and it has its own railway station, thereby providing the easiest facilities for the marketing of produce. With all these advantages the price of land there ranges from only £47/10/ per acre.

Another splendid district for the suburban small farmer is Blacktown, a few minutes by train beyond Toongabbie, on the Western line. Our Flushcombe Farmlets there are wonderful value at from £20/10/ per acre, considering that they are not very far from the station. The soil is good, and the blocks are two acres in size.

For larger small farms, the Bungarribee Estate, facing the Flushcombe Farmlets at Blacktown, is most suitable. Blocks can be obtained there from 11¼ to 12½ acres from £16/10/ per acre—really excellent value.

Intending Land Buyers should not fail to send for our Catalogue, which gives full particulars of our Estates in every part of Sydney.

"Rickard's Realty Review," our bright and interesting Monthly Magazine, will also be forwarded free on application.

For the convenience of workers, our office is open for inquiries every Monday and Friday evenings till 9 o'clock.

BUILDING MATERIALS.

EFFICIENCY HAS BECOME THE GREATEST FACTOR IN MODERN BUSINESS, WHY NOT IN MODERN HOMES?
OSCILLATING PORTABLE WALL BEDS.
The First and Last Word in Efficiency, Comfort, and Utility.
AWARDED GOLD MEDAL AT THE PAN-PACIFIC EXPOSITION, 1915.
Adopted in the Commonwealth Bank Building Sydney; National Bank of New Zealand, N.Z.; and by all Progressive Architects and Builders.
And at the T. and G. Residential Flats, Hyde Park, Sydney, over 200 people sleep nightly in comfort on Oscillating Portal Wall Beds.
VENTILATING AND AIRING.
Oscillating Portal Wall Beds must not be confused with the old style wall beds, which had no means of ventilation. With this improved patented method the bed is daily aired by being allowed to remain in an erect position, exposed to the light, sunshine, and air, and daily revolutions sweep fresh air into the recess. You thus have the full use of the floor space at the same time. With ancient wall beds this was impossible—hence their use was discouraged. That our beds are eminently suitable for the Australian Climate is proved by the fact ascertained from the Commonwealth Meteorological Bureau, Sydney, that climatic conditions compare favourably between Sydney and Los Angeles, the mean temperature being 63.0 as against 60.3 degrees, and it is at the latter place that Mr. Hugh Bryson, Speculative Builder, has erected five of the finest Apartment Houses in that City, equipped with over five hundred Wall Beds.
FOR IN-AND-OUT-DOOR SLEEPING
our bed is unsurpassed, acting in that dual capacity, you get the full use of floor space in the daytime, an ever-tidy verandah, and free from dust, soot, and dampness.

FARM AND STATION.

DOMESTICATION OF WILD BIRDS

(BY F. S. SORENSON.)

Considering the excellence of many of our indigenous birds, it is strange that little effort has been made by country dwellers to domesticate them. The black swan, which is rarely regarded as a table bird, may be seen at plenty of homesteads, either waddling about on grassy lawns or majestically swimming in an adjacent waterhole. The brolga is another that adds a picturesque note to homely surroundings; but of the great variety of splendid wild duck, one seldom sees any in domestication. Yet all, or nearly all, are easily tamed. An example is afforded by the black ducks in the Sydney Botanic Gardens. These birds are free to roam where they will, and, though they fly about, they never depart from the ponds, where they are regularly fed, and which are frequently visited by crowds of people. The circular pond—the remnant of Billygoat Swamp—in the old Zoo was another haven to which wild ducks came occasionally, and they stayed there in spite of the people around them, demonstrating how easily they can be tamed in the wild state; that is, by winning their confidence without placing them in captivity. Thus there is no trouble at all when they are reared from the egg among tame poultry.

Another instance of wild waterfowl being tamed in their native state was supplied by a flock of pelicans at Thylungra West Queensland. The homestead stands on the bank of a big lagoon, and the pelicans, about 80 of them, had been quietened by constant feeding from the kitchen. The bank of the lagoon drops sheer to the water a few feet from the back door, and the birds came there regularly at meal times to feed on the scraps thrown out by the cook. Though never very wild, the pelican is a lover of quiet places. From a dietetic point of view it is as valueless as the shag, but with its enormous yellow bill and huge black and white body it is a conspicuous feature in the waterscape, and is often shot for its fine skin.

The pied goose, now rare in the settled coastal districts, where it was once very plentiful, is well worthy of preservation. It is the largest of the wild geese, a semi-palmated, black and white bird, whose hooked beak is surmounted by a knob. It likes reedy swamps, but flocks are often seen walking about feeding on contiguous flats. They are easily reared, and adapt themselves quickly to civilised quarters. The gnaras, or maned goose, is a shyer bird. Like the pigmy geese of the north, it is only about the size of a wild duck, but its colouration makes it most attractive, and it is a table dainty. The pink-eared duck, freckled duck, blue-billed duck, shoveller, wymbin (pink-eyed duck), the perna or mountain duck, and the mardo, or Rajah sheldrake, are all attractive in appearance, and would make splendid additions to the poultry flock. The simplest procedure is to obtain the eggs from the swamps in the breeding season and place them under a broody hen, mixing the clutches with a few ordinary duck or goose eggs, as the case may be.

There are also several ground-feeding birds, frequenting the forests and plains, that could be domesticated with advantage, notably the kio, or plain turkey, the common bronzewing, the flock pigeon, squatter pigeon, quail, the grass parrot, and the stone curlew. The latter is often found in country towns, running about the gardens and small paddocks. It is one of the most interesting of birds, a good insect destroyer, and not to be despised for table purposes. The kio, which loves the open plains, is the most highly-prized by game hunters outback. It measures four feet in length, is about four feet high, and weighs about 20lb. The flesh is somewhat dark, but prime and tender. It is not very wild in its native habitat, except when frequently hunted. I have seen it shot from a homestead verandah, as a flock fed along a stony rise about 80 yards distant. There were sheep troughs at the bottom of the rise, and the turkeys, as well as emus and other birds, used to come there to drink in dry summers. The common bronzewing is one of the plums of the forest, a plump, symmetrical bird, a pound in weight, which is often found feeding in stubble fields.

Flock pigeons are exclusively terrestrial, never alighting on trees. Like most bronzewings, they rise with a loud, whirring noise, and when a flock of many thousands strong rise together the roar of their wings is a sound to remember. They are profitable game to the shooter, for he bags many brace with one cartridge. The blacks net them at the drinking holes; they also kill them on the wing at such places with boomerangs. The squatter pigeon is a graceful little creature, and about the tamest of this group. It associates in pairs and in small companies of half a dozen or so. When flushed it separates from its companions, all making off in different directions, and after running a little way squats down in the short grass, depending for protection on the harmony of its light-brown colour with the immediate landscape, and at the last moment rising with a startling burr from under one's nose. Horsemen at times kill it with a flick of a stockwhip. Along the main roads, where it often feeds, and in proximity to which it crouches when disturbed, teamsters also upset the little creature's calculations with a swipe of the bullock whip. The flesh is white, and as a table delicacy only equalled by the brush bronzewing.

The wonga, which is stationary in its habits, and among the most desirable of brush haunters, is another pigeon that soon adapts itself to homestead surroundings, especially where there is a large garden with plenty of trees. The quail is a doubly useful bird. It is one of the farmer's best friends, and yet the farmer allows "sportsmen" the use of his land to shoot it. The common quail is prolific, laying as many as a dozen eggs to a sitting, and producing two or three broods in the season. Most of the species are easily domesticated, and if the man on the land understood them better he would take pains to keep them about him instead of allowing them to be exterminated. A family of bird-lovers on a Clarence River farm, who domesticated many kinds of birds, hatched quail eggs in an incubator, and the young birds were reared with common chickens. They remained in the vicinity of the house, coming up regularly with the fowls at feed time for a share of cracked corn. The grass parrot, which is another delicacy, is a strikingly handsome bird. It is a ground feeder, now very rare, and it would be a great pity to allow it to die out. Even the mound builders, all of them most acceptable as game, though requiring exceptional conditions on account of their breeding habits, are not difficult to manage.

THE WOOL TRADE.

KEEN COMPETITION IN MELBOURNE.

This week's public sales were held in both Melbourne and Brisbane. In the southern capital the first of the regular series of sales was commenced. There was wide and keen competition for almost all grades at improved prices. On the resumption of sales on Monday it was at once evident that buying orders were far more general than at the sale of three weeks previously. On that occasion, satisfactory as prices undoubtedly were for all better class of wools, comparatively few were prepared to pay them, and, as a consequence, a good deal of irregularity was apparent, whilst faulty and inferior sorts were practically neglected, except at speculative prices. At this week's sales, however, thanks to the increased competition, much of the irregularity in the better class wools disappeared, and faulty and inferior sorts were by no means as difficult to dispose of.

During the week higher limits for merinos have come to hand from Bradford, and with strong support from both Italy and Russia, the latter being solely interested in the best, there has been a further improvement upon the high rates previously ruling. The "Argus" says that the most marked advance has to be recorded in medium and coarse crossbreds, which of late had shown a serious decline, owing to the apathy of the home trade in general. Possibly the lower prices that had been established have induced a speculative demand from Bradford, for it is quite evident there are now more orders in the market from there, and, moreover, at increased limits, than was the case a fortnight ago. This, of course, has helped the situation materially, but at the same time the full extent of the advance in these descriptions, which may be put down as anything up to /2 per lb, cannot be attributed to this cause, but rather to strong French support, together with that from other Continental buyers, who may possibly be operating in the belief that some modification in the embargo is pending. There has also been a sharp advance in burry crossbred prices of all qualities, these now commanding more than passing attention.

At the Brisbane auctions, which opened on Tuesday there was a good selection of greasies, although a fair proportion of the wool was poorly grown. Only a moderate display of scoureds was available. On the whole competition was general, but Japanese buyers were particularly active. Well-grown, shafty wool met with a keen demand, but short and faulty descriptions had a poor reception. As compared with the previous Brisbane sales held on September 5, 6, and 7, prices were generally 5 per cent. to 10 per cent. lower. The fall may, perhaps, be explained by the recent heavy increase in oversea freights.

SYDNEY SALES TO RESUME ON MONDAY.

Public sales will be resumed in Sydney on Monday, and will be continued without interruption until the Christmas recess. The catalogues are to be limited to a certain number of lots from each broker, and the offerings, therefore, should not be so heavy as those submitted at the last sales. It is probable that the policy of selling houses will be to bring forward only those wools which are in demand, and to ask owners to hold over all faulty samples until such time as the market is able to absorb them. On the whole, the catalogues to be submitted are attractive, and include wools from a wider area of the State than was possible earlier in the current season.

The roster for next week's sale has been arranged as follows:—

Tuesday, Oct. 24.—New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Co., Ltd.; Australian Mercantile, Land, and Finance Co., Ltd.; Pitt, Son, and Badgery, Ltd.

Wednesday, Oct. 25.—Pastoral Finance Association, Ltd.; Goldsbrough, Mort, and Co., Ltd.

Thursday, Oct. 26.—John Bridge and Co., Ltd.; Co-operative Wool and Produce Co., Ltd.; Country Producers' Selling Co., Ltd.

CURRENT BUSINESS.

During the week a fair amount of private selling has been done, and a good number of the lots withdrawn from auction during the previous week changed hands at prices which showed an advance on those offered in the saleroom. Burry crossbreds and thin, weak merinos were neglected.

THE PRESENT RECORD PRICES.

Never in the history of the wool industry have prices been so profitable as they are to-day. The best descriptions of wool are realising rates which easily eclipse all previous records. For the best greasy merinos anything up to 26½d is being paid, as compared with 19½d in the "boom" season of 1899 and 1900. It is difficult to realise that a little over 20 years ago 8½d was looked upon as a record price for greasy merino, and that since the "boom" year it has ranged between 11d and 18½d.

The following comparison of the record prices of the "boom" year and those of the past decade, with the present season, was compiled by the "Wool and Stock Journal":—

Season.	Greasy Fleece.	Greasy Lambs.	Greasy Pieces.	Greasy Bellies.

AMERICA AND FAULTY WOOL.

Latest news from the United States shows that there is some uneasiness in wool circles regarding future supplies, and no doubt the fears are well founded. It is clear that America is expecting the privilege of buying faulty merinos in the Australian market, but if this permission is given, who is to decide the dividing line between a fairly clean wool and a parcel that can be called faulty? Reports from London show that during recent weeks there has been less pressure upon carbonisers in the Bradford district, and it is expected that in a few months' time considerably more carbonising machinery should be available. "It looks to me as if faulty wools are going to sell far more in harmony with fairly free wools than they have done," says a Bradford authority. "One of the principal reasons why the War Office has permitted certain machinists to make carbonising machinery was the pressing needs of home trade manufacturers, particularly of woollen cloths, and also to increase the purchasing power of the home trade in regard to faulty merinos. As much attention as possible has been called to the huge weights of faulty merinos by American representatives in London of the Textile Alliance, and no doubt these representations are being considered."

BRADFORD TOPS.

Our cables this morning state that the Bradford tops market is firm and active, with a hardening tendency. Sixty-fours are ½d higher, super 60's /1½, and common 60's 1d.

PIT SILAGE.

Mr. G. H. Tolley writes in the "Irrigation Record": "In June, 1915, I visited Kiakator Station (R. Wootton owner, S. Monie agent), to advise on irrigation matters. While there it was decided to conserve some of the native herbage—crowsfoot, etc.—as silage, by means of underground pits. Recently Mr. Monie called on me and brought a sample of the result, a beautiful coloured sweet-smelling product, real first-class silage. It would be worth while again to draw settlers' attention to this matter, as during the present season there will be abundant natural pasturage that could be preserved in this way."

THE SEASON.

The Commonwealth Meteorologist supplies the following summary of the condition of stock, crops, pastures, etc., during the month of September, 1916, gleaned from the reports furnished by meteorological observers throughout the State of New South Wales:—

The last week of September was noted for persistent general rains of a gentle soaking nature, which in most cases were of much value to crops and grass, and resulted in the promise of another excellent summer season.

In the North Coast conditions were generally satisfactory, more especially in the north, where crops of young sugar cane, maize, and potatoes were making rapid growth, and pastures were flourishing. In some cases the low lands were saturated, and ploughing was at a standstill. Stock were all in good order, and the milk supply increased. South from Grafton drier conditions prevailed, and good rains were needed to promote further growth. In the Hunter district also the rainfall was insufficient, though there was fair growth in crops and grass, and stock kept in good order. The cream supply did not increase as it should at this time of the year, but the rainfall at the end of the month gave promise of improvement in the outlook.

In the metropolitan area the fine rains at the end of the month did incalculable good. All vegetation was growing prolifically, and the prospects for the summer fruit crop were bright. Similarly, in the South Coast the rainfall of the last week gave assurance of a good season; grass and crops were much benefited, and the stock outlook improved. Some floods were experienced at the end of the month, but no damage was reported.

Reports from the interior all testified to the excellent promise of the season, due to the copious rainfall experienced during the last week. Grass again received an impetus for fresh growth, and an abundant supply of feed for stock seemed general. The main difficulty seemed to be the shortage of stock for the supply of grass available, while all stock were in good condition. Shearing proceeded during the month, and the clips were generally satisfactory. Good results were also obtained from the lambing. The wet weather during the last week proved hard on the shorn sheep and young lambs, and some losses followed. Orchards benefited greatly by the late rains, and gave promise of a good yield.

In many cases, particularly in the central and south-west slopes, the rainfall provided rather much moisture for the growing crops, and some lodged badly, while others showed signs of rust or bleaching. Many crops were very far forward, some in the north-west slope being heavy in ear. Generally, crops were looking splendid everywhere, and a record harvest was anticipated.

In Riverina and the Western district a plague of caterpillars did much damage to the grass and herbage in the early part of the month, but the rains of the last week destroyed them, and the pastoral outlook became most promising. The heavy rains caused floods in the Lachlan and Murrumbidgee Rivers; the flood in the Lachlan extended over the surrounding country for miles, naturally irrigating thousands of acres of dry plains, and flooding large areas of grass country. All dams and creeks were full, and water supplies abundant.

STORE STOCK RAILAGE.

Messrs. Pitt, Son, and Badgery, Ltd., have forwarded the following copy of a letter forwarded by them to the railway authorities, under date October 19:—

We were astonished on learning from you that no trucks were available at store stock rates, and that the store rate was really going to be practically abolished. This we can hardly believe, as, if so, it is the most reactionary policy we have ever known the railways to adopt, and we trust before the matter is finally decided that the reasons which were submitted when the store stock rates were inaugurated, will be reviewed, when we feel sure all the benefits to the State, the producer, and the railways that were predicted, will be found to have been realised, particularly the pressure that it took off the starving stock trucks, and the increased traffic in transmitting store stock from one portion of the State to another. The store stock traffic is almost invariably on a wholesale scale, which we take it must be more profitable as a matter of railway economy than a number of small orders, aggregating the same number of trucks. Trusting, therefore, that the matter will be given further consideration.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

MUNDOORAN.—All the district surrounding Mundooran, and especially the country between Gilgandra, Tooraweenah, Binnaway, and Mundooran, is covered with a heavy coat of clover and other herbage in some places to a depth of 2ft to 3ft and very thick. The season is the best hereabouts for very many years. The railway line from Dubbo to here is nearing completion, and will be open for traffic by the end of February next.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION.

The Department of Agriculture has arranged for a lecture on "Poultry Farming" to be given by the poultry expert (Mr. J. Hadlington), under the auspices of the Manning River District Poultry and Horticultural Society, at Taree, on Monday, 23rd October.

CITY MISSION.

The Brisbane City Mission delegates arrived in Sydney yesterday, and left by evening train for Melbourne. During their brief stay they were entertained by the Sydney City Mission. The fifth Australian City Mission Conference will commence its sittings on Tuesday next, when the Lord Mayor of Melbourne will give the visiting delegates a public reception.

Mr. A. HENDREN, Optician, Australia-st., Newtown, says:—"Clement's Tonic has done so much for me that I am only rendering what is due when I say it is the best medicine to build up the system."—Advt.

THE GRAND UNION.

Above the confusion of the referendum one thing stands out clear. All the leaders of Australia are on the one side. There is nothing more striking, nothing more inspiring, than this fact. We do not refer only to the political leaders of this country—the appearance of Mr. Cook on the same platform as Mr. Hughes, the bond uniting men like Senator Pearce, Sir William Irvine, Mr. Holman, Mr. Wade, Mr. Watt, Senator Millen, Mr. Crawford Vaughan, Mr. Watson, Mr. Scaddan, Senator Givens, Mr. Spence, and Mr. Lamond in a common spirit of brotherhood in the great crisis of our nation; we refer also to the leaders of thought in all the varied manifestations of our national life. Never before in Australia's history has there been such unanimity. If we look back upon the past we shall find nothing approaching it. In all the great political fights in this country, in Parkes's day or later, when the original Federal Convention was before the people, and again when the draft Constitution came up, we saw our leaders divided. Some were on one side and some on another, and some again halted between two opinions. So it has always been up till now. It matters not where we look to-day we find on the one side all the men and women in whom the community trusts. Politicians have found a common meeting-ground, and they have found it because, for all their differences, they yet treasure the common institutions which belong to us all and that British freedom which is our priceless heritage. To-day those institutions, that freedom, all things that we hold dear as free men, are threatened. For years the Churches have been seeking for some basis of union; to-day they have found it—found it in a very real sense. And it is a wider union than any of us ever dreamed of, for it embraces Protestants and Roman Catholics alike. The battle is not only one of civilisation versus barbarism, but of Christianity versus all the powers of darkness. That is why so many hundreds of thousands of young Churchmen are fighting to-day in France. And only yesterday a manifesto, which is signed by over ninety members of the staff of the University of Sydney, was published. "Uninfluenced by any consideration of party, creed, or class," these professors and other members of the University staff have issued an appeal to the people to vote "Yes" at the referendum next Saturday, because "the cause of the Allies is the cause of Australia." So with the captains of commerce and industry, so with all men, employers and employed, who value the precious liberties they possess. And so it is also with all women who love their country, who love their honour and the honour of their menfolk.

And on the other side, what? Never was there a case so hopeless, never one so abject in leadership. It has no appeal to any greatness in the soul. It relies upon fears, upon suspicions, upon hatreds, upon abuse. It has no ideal of personal or national honour. It is as shallow and as selfish as its own cries. No wonder that such a cause appealing to no nobility in its adherents discloses no greatness in its leaders. We look around and we see no leader there—only blind men leading the blind to the ditch. There may be one or two exceptions, but for the most part they are political tricksters and opportunists, who, like Catiline, with minds daring, subtle, and versatile, keep about them crowds of the unprincipled and desperate, and teach them all to regard, with equal unconcern, honour, property, and danger. It was Catiline who caused the Roman Senate to decree that "the Consuls should make it their care that the Commonwealth should receive no injury." And we must make it our care that our Commonwealth shall receive no injury. We must see to it that all the conspirators against the good name of Australia are put into their proper place when we go to the ballot-box on the 28th of this month to perform a sacred duty. Australia has given her pledged word to keep up the reinforcements due to her own brave men, and that word must be kept. We are no nation of cowards who will turn our backs on the men who are fighting to preserve our freedom and to protect our honour. We shall not treat this solemn obligation as a "scrap of paper," as the Germans would have us do. Rather shall we rise to the full height of our national greatness—won for us by those men of imperishable memory who fought and died on Gallipoli, and those others not less renowned who have sealed their honour with their blood in France—and say, as Lincoln said at Gettysburg "It is for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honoured dead we take increased devotion to that cause to which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain." Not for us, surely, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters of these men, is the craven part; not for us the part that says, in answer to the call of our boys for reinforcements, "No, we have done enough!" When shall we have done enough for those who have done so much for us? Not, indeed, till every sacrifice we can make is ours and victory be won—not till we have given all, if need be. There is a Chinese proverb which says that in a journey of twenty miles the nineteenth is half-way, and it is in that spirit we must brace ourselves for the task that lies before us. The nearer we get to the end the harder the task will be. But there is no escape from it—no escape with honour. We can, if we wish, desert the great Mother of Nations who has been our shield and buckler in the past. We can, if we wish, "shorten our line," or even recall our soldiers and do not a hand's turn further to assist the gallant armies of France and Belgium. But we prefer the nobler part, the only honest part, the only safe part. And we prefer it because there is one sacrifice we are not prepared to make—we are not prepared to become an appanage of Germany. We prefer to remain free men, and the conscription of our manhood in this great crisis is the price of our freedom. For the sake of our pledged word, for the sake of righteousness and justice, for the safety of our homes and the honour of our women—"for all we have and are," as Kipling says—we dare not fail now. If the union of our political leaders is, as we have said, without a parallel, it is because the crisis that we face is unparalleled. We believe that the heart of Australia beats true, and that the mighty "Yes" which will go up on Saturday next will express, as nothing else could, the Grand Union which has been born of this war—the "one big Union" which is to carry us on to victory and shape our destinies for many an age to come.

THE WESTERN FRONT.

General Haig's summary, read in conjunction with the official statement issued on Tuesday by the Press Bureau, explains to us the nature of some of the difficulties which have been overcome on the Western front—the factors which have contributed to the British and French progress and the probable consequences of the success which has been obtained. The difficulties have been extraordinary, so extraordinary, that many Germans have from time to time announced that they had proved insurmountable, and that many Englishmen have believed them. The line was chosen by the enemy not merely because its gradual slope was a hindrance both to attack and observation, but because man had collaborated with nature in rendering it suitable for defence. The slope is deeply indented and covered with hillocks, so that there are many obstacles to a uniform advance. The hills are the sites of villages where troops can fortify themselves against the most accurate artillery, and in some cases are separated by woods in which they can reassemble or prepare for a counter-attack. The villages are separated by an extraordinary network of roads and lands which may be easily held or used for retreat by a garrison which considers the loss of its position inevitable. Behind the slope, in addition to the roads, are the railways which connect directly with the German centres of communication and with their main bases of supply. The enemy holding these slopes had advantages which the French in holding Verdun had not. They had perfect freedom of movement for the troops behind their lines, and they could transport any men or guns that were available to any part as they pleased. We have no need now to be told that in attacking such a ridge so fortified the British were putting the highest test imaginable to their infantry and artillery. In July the series of villages had to be gained by a frontal attack. Until the German line was broken there was no such thing as envelopment. At that time the artillery had difficulties in observation which were not shared by the enemy and which, but for the valour of our airmen, would have proved insuperable. With the reports of the aircraft before them the artillery could destroy houses and break down earthworks. They could not drive the machine-gunners from their lairs underground, nor could they invariably silence the enemy's artillery or prevent it from putting a curtain of fire between our infantry and its objective. The generals who sent infantry to take positions protected by all these elements showed an unwavering confidence in their new soldiers, and among them in the men from the dominions who were associated with some of the most difficult portions of the attack. The result shows how thoroughly their faith was justified. There is no battle in history in which men have gone to certain death with a more unquestioning devotion than those assaults on Thiepval and Pozieres, which have cost both the mother country and the dominions so terrible a price. There has never been a battle in which the British officers have shown so consistently that union of skill and training with an almost reckless courage which is essential to victory.

In their advance the British have proved themselves the possessors of many qualities which had previously been denied them by their enemies, and only half anticipated by them. They have shown not only generalship but a power of co-ordination and leadership running through all ranks, from the Commander-in-Chief to the non-commissioned officer. Their artillery has been ably directed and sufficiently supplied for the needs of a movement on this limited front. Their aircraft have completely mastered the enemy by his own admission. As the reports tell us from day to day the British have lost many machines, probably many more than the Germans. But their loss of machines is justified for the same reason as their loss of ships. It is the price of their success in sailing into the enemy's territory whenever there is any need for them to do so, and in keeping their own line entirely free from observation. The proof that we possess these attributes and an unrestricted and formidable army is one of the main results of the offensive. It has given the Allies renewed confidence and had an effect on the decision of Roumania only second to that produced by the Russian advance. Its influence on the Germans is proved by the misleading accounts in their reports, by the attempt of German experts to discover another and unsuccessful offensive north of Arras, and by the success of the Chancellor in making converts to his views on satisfactory terms of peace. In the course of the advance many thousands of Germans have perished, many of them from among the only troops fit to conduct an attack. The moral results are an access of confidence to the Allies and of a sense of danger to the Germans. The material results are some extent of territory recaptured, many thousands of Germans destroyed, and considerable disorganisation caused to their plans, as well as great assistance rendered to the Allies on other fronts. The most valuable, if the most costly, of all the elements in the British success was to be found in the ability of the Allies to draw German troops to this centre, there to perish before a superior artillery. But the effect of these losses on the German army besides being a proof of ultimate success is an indication of the distance between our present achievements and the end of the war. The loss of so many splendid troops on the Somme and at Verdun has not prevented the Germans from engaging in another offensive. It will not prevent them next year from appearing with a new class of recruits who, if not fitted for prolonged exertions, will fight with most desperate energy in attack. The British have been warned by General Haig against taking the amount of territory recovered, or to be recovered, as the test of victory. It is none the less impossible for them to disregard the advantage which the Germans gained by their successes in the first month of the war. The Allies are now looking towards another portion of that district which both the French and British attacked a year ago with but indifferent success. Douai and Cambrai are outposts of the Black Country, against which a whole series of attacks has broken down since the capture of Neuve Chapelle. Before they reach that line they will have to cross a space of country which has not yet been touched by their artillery, and when they reach it they will find another of those deadly collections of machine guns which have always been the most effective German weapon of defence. When the Allies are sufficiently equipped to be able to attack from two sides at once they will be fighting under conditions diametrically opposed to those of their earlier battles. Their advance will be as inexorable as it has been during the last few months, and far less costly.

THE OTHER WOMAN'S SON.

(BY ETHEL TURNER.)

Not all anti-conscription women are the shrill, self-assured, determined ones in evidence at meetings. There are many of them silent, timid, unhappy, genuinely struggling with the problem that seems to be presented to them by the question—"Shall I vote to send another woman's son to the trenches?" They are the women in whom sentiment holds stronger sway than reason, and who must not be blamed that this is so, since it is a matter of constitution. They are the women upon whom the framer of the question—some lover of Germany without a doubt—counted when he concocted it. "Appeal to sentiment in woman and you'll win every time," he said to himself, and went out and sowed it broadcast, with his tongue in his cheek. "Shall I vote to send another woman's son to the trenches?" Let the timid women answer this for themselves by asking themselves, quite quietly, another question—

WHAT WOMAN'S SON?

Do you mean the woman who already has given more than her share? You know that you do not, since she is already exempt. Do you mean the woman who has her son for her sole support? No; you know that she also is exempt.

IS THIS THE WOMAN YOU MEAN?

The one who is contentedly continuing to enjoy life as if there were no war, spending more money than she has ever spent before, pluming herself in the latest monstrosity of fashion, demanding rich foods, soft living, gaiety, while other women's sons are keeping the country safe for her and making it possible for her to have exactly what she demands?

OR IS THIS THE WOMAN YOU MEAN?

The one who, though she may be spending as much as before the war, and is even retrenching and subscribing to war funds and working for soldiers, has several stalwart sons who are staying behind with the women and children while other women's sons are dying because they must stay in the trenches till fatigue and disease do what the German bullets do not do, since no one comes to relieve them?

OR PERHAPS IT IS THIS WOMAN—

The one, whoever she is or whatever she is doing—whose sons are shouting themselves hoarse with applause at the Stadium, where blows are delivered that nothing on earth would induce them to face, or who are looking on and cheering at games they do not play?

AND NOW.

Ask yourselves afresh the question that is troubling you—"Is my sentiment going to prevent me from voting to send the sons of these women to the trenches?" You know that it is not. You know that the thought of the other woman's son staying in these trenches to his death through not being reinforced, is day by day, as the time for decision draws nearer, burning into your profoundest sentiment like a live coal.

Timid women, cast off your fear. Justify your womanhood at whatever cost to yourselves, and say to all efficient manhood, in a voice that shall roll next week from shore to shore of this vast continent—

Strike—for your altars and your fires,
Strike—for the green graves of your sires,
God—and your native land.

COAL MINING DISPUTE.

THE BOARD OF REFERENCE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister stated to-day that the regulation under which the appointment of a board of reference was made in connection with the Pelaw Main colliery dispute set out clearly that the board was appointed to hear and determine matters in dispute between the parties, other than those matters of which the Arbitration Court had cognisance. These might comprise such matters as matters arising after the filing of the plaint, or matters relating to disputes within a State. The suggestion which had been made that the Ministry, in appointing this board, "had gone over Mr. Justice Higgins's head," was, therefore, entirely without foundation.

MEETING OF THE BOARD.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The special board which was appointed by the Federal Government, under the War Precautions Act, to endeavour to settle the dispute now existing at the Pelaw Main colliery, sat in Newcastle to-day. Evidence was taken, and had not been concluded when the board rose.

ARCHBISHOPS.

ANGLICAN AND ROMAN CATHOLIC.

URGE COMPULSION.

PERTH (W.A.), Friday.

Chaplains-General Archbishops Riley (Anglican) and Clune (Roman Catholic), who are with the Australian troops on active service, have cabled their strong advocacy of compulsory service.

Archbishop RILEY states that reinforcements are urgently needed, and that compulsory service is the only way to keep the magnificent units we have in the field now up to their strength.

Archbishop CLUNE says:—

"Whoever believes in the righteousness and justice of the war we are engaged in ought not to hesitate to vote for compulsory military service in Australia."

LOYAL LABOUR MEN.

IN THE WEST.

SUPPORT MR. HUGHES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) announced to-day that he had received the following telegram from Mr. Cornell, acting secretary of the Australian Labour Federation in Western Australia:—

"Last evening the metropolitan district council of the Australian Labour Federation resolved, by 49 votes to 34, as follows: 'In view of the necessities of the Empire, and Mr. Hughes's efforts to secure a lasting peace, this council sppports conscription.' "

Mr. Hughes, in commenting on this message, said that he regarded it as one of the most significant manifestations of public feeling yet displayed. It showed, in a manner which silenced the attempts of those who might seek to explain it away, that the organised Labour movement of Australia, having had ample opportunity to hear both sides of the question, and having had an opportunity to examine the means by which the Labour movement had been duped into supporting anti-conscription, and the character of the men responsible for thus duping it, had decided, by an overwhelming majority, to declare the true attitude of Labour in this great crisis.

This resolution, he added, showed at once that Labour was not only loyal but sane, and that it was not going to allow itself to be made a tool either of the I.W.W. or of those rebels in their midst who sought to use the Labour movement for their own purposes. He had no doubt whatever that the effect of this resolution would be very far reaching, and that it would encourage literally tens of thousands of the loyal men in the movement, whose mouths had been closed by the tyranny of those men who had contrived to capture the organisation, to declare their allegiance to the cause of Australia and the Empire.

AN APPEAL.

To the Athletes, Cyclists, Footballers, Cricketers, Rowers, Swimmers, Golfers, and other Sportsmen of New South Wales.

NEVER has Australia been faced with such a danger as the danger of the rejection of the Prime Minister's proposals as to conscription.

NEVER has Australia been in greater need of a whole-hearted assistance of every one of its loyal citizens to uphold its honour.

TO NO ONE is the honour of Australia dearer than it is to her sportsmen.

Our association now appeals to the committee and members of every sporting club throughout New South Wales to resolve immediately that:—

"For the honour of Australia every member is called upon to devote himself or herself from now until the 28th instant, and on that day to actively personally canvassing, persuading, and subsequently escorting, as many persons as possible to

"VOTE YES."

For the Suburban and Country Golf Association of New South Wales,
W. A. WINDEYER, President,
25 O'Connell-street.

MEN OF ANZAC.

"LET US BE WORTHY KINSMEN."

The men of Anzac have made the name of Australia glorious amongst all the nations of the earth.

On the fields of France they are adding fresh lustre to that name.

They have done great things for Australia and for the cause of liberty.

Let us prove ourselves worthy to be the kinsmen of such men by voting to send them reinforcements.

Vote "Yes."

W. M. HUGHES.

RED CROSS SOCIETY.

ANNUAL MEETING OF AUSTRALIAN BRANCH.

The annual meeting of the Australian branch of the British Red Cross Society will be held at the Town Hall on Wednesday afternoon next, at 3 o'clock.

Among the speakers will be her Excellency Lady Helen Munro Ferguson, Lady Galway, General Sellheim, and other visiting delegates.

All members and friends of the society are invited to attend. A musical programme on the organ will precede the meeting.

"ANZAC."

PROMISCUOUS USE PROHIBITED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A further curtailment of the use of the word "Anzac" has been provided by a War Precautions Regulation which was issued yesterday. The regulation sets out that after November 1 no person shall, without the consent of the Governor-General or a Federal Minister, use the word "Anzac" as a name or part of a name on any private residence, boat, vehicle, or charitable or other institution. The use of words resembling "Anzac" or resembling any other words which are notified as prohibited is also prohibited. The penalty for a breach of the regulation is £100, or six months' imprisonment.

BATTLEPLANE.

PRESENTED TO GREAT BRITAIN.

The residents of the Tweed River district have presented to the British Government the New South Wales No. 9 battle-plane "The Tweed." The cost of the machine—£2703—was cabled by the Union Bank of Australia, Ltd., yesterday to London.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

With only one week to go before the taking of the poll it is perhaps as well to review the progress of the campaign to date. It began with a remarkable dearth of volunteer recruits. It promises to conclude with figures for the last month well up to the best average month since recruiting began.

* * *

The reason for this is not far to seek. Vigorous as was the volunteer recruiting campaign, there was always a suggestion about it that it was a matter of purely personal conviction. It was not doubted that volunteers would be forthcoming. But the absolute need of men was never, apparently, sufficiently emphasised. Now, however, when it is a question of: "Can you go; will you go; must you be forced to go?" volunteering has been given a decided fillip.

* * *

The possibility of the people of Australia declaring for compulsory service has had a very potent influence upon the voluntary recruiting of the past three weeks. Now we read of a hundred volunteers turning up at the Barracks where before we read of 50 or less. And the more careful readers of the news of the day will have noticed that the percentage of rejections is much lower to-day than hitherto.

* * *

Thus we find that not only are we getting more volunteers to-day than we did a month ago, but also that a greater proportion of them have no difficulty in passing the tests of physical soundness.

* * *

This fact opens the way for the most conclusive argument of the whole campaign. It is:—"If sufficient volunteers come forward to keep up the quota of reinforcements to which Australia is pledged not one conscript soldier will be sent out of the country."

* * *

But the position only serves to show how lamentably weak are the contentions of the anti-reinforcement brigade. If the men are not needed; if it is a crime to send them away; if it means "ruination, stagnation, and devastation"—as one speaker puts it—why not stop volunteering?

* * *

Such a stage has been reached in the campaign that there is very little fresh to be said on either side. It would, however, be a good idea if every anti-speaker were asked the question, "Why not stop volunteering?"

* * *

Another gratifying feature is that the anti-campaign appears to have reached the point of desperation. Quite early in the fight there was justification for the statement that these people would say anything to bolster up a cause that is founded upon personal disinclination and morbid fear of the acceptance of the full rights of citizenship.

* * *

To-day they are "saying anything." It is a sure evidence of weakness. The people who don't care whether Germany is beaten or not, and who fail to realise the awful consequences of a victory for Germany, are the only people left who can honestly vote "No."

* * *

SOME MORE FIGURES.

Take the latest statistical argument of the antis, for example. Somebody has "discovered" that Kitchener is reported to have said that 80,000 soldiers could successfully defend Australia. The simple little fact that Kitchener never said anything of the kind doesn't seem to matter.

* * *

But let us suppose, for a moment, that Kitchener did say so. And let us suppose that his opinion is endorsed by every other eminent military authority—let us suppose that it is correct. How does it help the antis? Up to now their trump card has seemed to be that there was a very pressing need to keep the men in Australia because of some threatened danger, worse than a conquest by Germany.

* * *

Where is the need? If 80,000 men can successfully defend Australia, why bother about our own safety? Australia could provide twice as many divisions as she now has in the firing line—and keep up their reinforcements, too—and still always keep 80,000 men back to defend her shores. Such rubbish as this must surely lose votes to any cause.

* * *

Anti-speakers and writers, however, have a fetish for mathematical calculations. In the current week's issue of a prominent anti-conscription paper some figures are given which will doubtless be quoted on many platforms before polling day. Here they are:—

September	32,500
October	16,500
November	16,500
December	16,500

* * *

"Allowing for exemptions and rejects, as per daily papers, of 50 per cent., there are 43,110 available, which indicates that married men will be called up in November," says the anti authority. What unblushing nonsense this is. It is true that between September 1 and December 31, 82,000 men were required to provide reinforcements for the men actually in the firing line.

* * *

Of this number, 73,000—the article quoted admits this with supreme indifference—were available from the volunteers in camps, here or in England, or on the water. The voluntary recruiting figures since September 1 show that at least 10,000 have offered their services.

* * *

Thus we get this sum:—

Reinforcements required by December 31	[illegible]
Volunteers available	[illegible]

It, therefore, follows, as clear as daylight, that not only will no married men be called up by November, but that none—not one—of the called-up single men will be required before January, 1917. Then, even presuming that not one more volunteer enlists between now and January, 1917, we find that, on the antis' own figures, the 43,110 available will be sufficient to provide the drafts for January, February, and March, 1917.

* * *

The difference between married men being wanted in November, 1916, and the single men not being exhausted until March, 1917, is so great as to bear out the statement that these people will say anything. Add to this the feet—indisputable on the real figures—that the single men called up will provide at least 100,000 reinforcements, and we get the real position, viz: That before any further drafts are made, we will be well into the second half of next year!

* * *

THE GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSIBILITY.

Up to date, because of the peculiar nature of the voluntary system of recruiting, the responsibility for Australia's share in the war has been a purely personal one. A feature of the referendum that is often overlooked is that we now propose to make it, no matter what it ought to be—one of national administrative responsibility.

* * *

A great many women are being influenced by the thought that if they vote "Yes" they will be "sending other women's sons to their death." As a matter of fact, the referendum relieves them of this responsibility. If they vote "Yes" they are voting for a general, and to give the Government the power to decide as to who had best go and who had best remain here.

* * *

It is nearly time we handed this responsibility over to the national Government. That is the only way to distribute the burden. That is the only way to preserve the liberties of Australia and the institutions we prize.

ROUMANIA

HOLDING THE PASSES

ENEMY THROWN BACK

SOMME GAINS

LINES STRENGTHENED

CUNARDER LOST

SUNK BY MINE

The British and French have held their recent gains on the Somme against strong counter-attacks. Bad weather is reported on this front.

The Roumanians continue to hold their frontier passes against the Austro-Germans from Transylvania, and have thrown them back with severe losses in places. The position is now regarded as more hopeful.

The Servians have had minor successes on the western front at Salonica, and have captured the village of Brod. The Bulgarians towards Monastir have been reinforced.

The Allies continue firmly to control Grecian affairs. There have been disorderly scenes in Athens streets, where the French police have been attacked.

The Cunard liner Alaunia, 13,300 tons, was sunk by a mine in the English Channel. All her passengers were saved.

ON THE SOMME.

GAINS CONSOLIDATED.

LONDON, Oct. 20.

A French communique on Thursday morning stated: We organised our gains at Sailly and Saillisel and the adjacent conquered positions. We broke up counter-attacks and made new progress between La Maisonette and Biaches. We repulsed an attempt on our trenches north-east of Luneville.

Adjutant D'Orme brought down his 14th aeroplane.

The French communique issued at midnight on Thursday stated: Our artillery repulsed waves of the enemy leaving their trenches in a vain attempt to counter-attack our lines to the north and east of Sailly and Saillisel. The enemy's losses were serious.

We made progress afresh between Biaches and Maisonette, west of Peronne.

General Sir Douglas Haig, in his noon report on Thursday stated: Our raiders entered trenches at Loos and south of Arras. Rain is falling.

Sir Douglas Haig, in a communique issued at midnight on Thursday, stated:—Heavy rain fell all the morning. We slightly advanced our line at Butte de Warlencourt, and our barrage stopped a counter attack.

GERMAN REPORT.

A German communique states: The English from daylight to noon attempted to break through between Le Sars and Morval. We held our positions by hand-to-hand fighting, or recaptured them by counter-attack.

Unimportant gains by the English have been obtained north of Eaucourt l'Abbaye and Gueudecourt, and by the French at Sailly, and between Biaches and La Maisonette.

OPERATIONS REVIEWED.

Sir Douglas Haig, reviewing the operations on the Somme front since his last summary, says:—In the area between Thiepval and Le Sars we have gradually won a series of strong positions. The fighting was heavy and prolonged. The enemy resisted stubbornly until we surrounded one place after another, and large numbers were taken prisoners. We had to repel repeated counter-attacks. Generally these were stopped by our artillery and machine guns, but where the enemy traversed our barrage to reach our lines he was thrown back by the infantry and rifle fire with heavy losses. Once or twice he obtained a foothold in a trench, and was then promptly driven out with the bayonet.

The prisoners taken since the beginning of July number 28,918. One of our divisions, which previously had many days' hard fighting, captured in action on October 7 eight officers and 474 men.

A captured document from German headquarters, acknowledging the superiority of the British airmen, suggests methods of reorganisation, whereby it was hoped it would be possible "for at least some hours to contest the enemy's supremacy of the air."

Assisted by aeroplanes our artillery has established and maintained clear superiority over the enemy. It supported our infantry and disorganised the arrangements behind the enemy's front lines. It has also hindered the arrival of reserves and supplies, and allows no rest day or night. It materially assists in that wearing down of moral so vital to success in battle. The infantry has shown its wonted endurance and devotion. We captured documents that bear clear testimony to the effect of our continuous artillery fire, the dash and discipline of the infantry attacks, and the quality of the men.

LULL ON THE SOMME.

The comparative lull on the Somme continues. Nevertheless, the offensive has been progressing the whole time, as the big guns are slowly creeping nearer the German positions. This takes immense labour—necessitating the construction of roads and railway tracks, by which the monster guns can be brought up and kept supplied with projectiles.

The French capture of Sailly is most important, as the Germans had installed numerous machine guns, which greatly hampered the British advance on Le Transloy. Every house was fortified. General Fayolle's troops added a glorious page to history during a hand-to-hand fight in the streets. The fierce character of the fighting alone accounts for the few prisoners taken.

PREPARING FOR BAPAUME.

The London correspondent of the "World" interviewed Lieutenant-Colonel Maurice, Director of Military Operations. He said:—"The main strategic purpose of the Allies' operations on the Somme is to retain the bulk of the German forces on this front. As five-eighths of the German army is there, our purpose is achieved. The British are now fighting for a jumping-off place, from which they may attack Bapaume. While Bapaume and Peronne are not of first-class strategic value, their capture would be morally important."

NEW GERMAN LINE.

The "Daily Telegraph" correspondent in Paris says that, owing to the loss of Sailly and Saillisel, the Germans are hastily forming a fresh line of defences between Warlencourt, Le Transloy, and Sailly, but Le Transloy is in imminent danger of capture by the British. This would probably compel the Germans to withdraw their first line three or four miles to the eastward. St. Pierre Vaast Wood is virtually lost. The Germans have already removed their artillery to Vaux Wood, three miles eastward, under a harassing French fire.

INVALUABLE AIRMEN.

A correspondent of the Paris "Matin" says that British airmen in recent operations have made 3000 trips across the enemy's lines, to a dozen made by enemy airmen over theirs. Before every attack the troops resting behind the lines reproduce a plan of the enemy's complicated works, made from the airmen's photographs, and rehearse the capture.

IN EAST AFRICA.

ENEMY SURROUNDED.

IN SOUTH-EAST AREA.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

The War Office, in a review of the East African operations, says that the bulk of the enemy is now confined to a limited area in the south-eastern portion of the colony in the neighbourhood of the lower Rufiji River, in malarial country, largely saltmarsh, and untenable after the October rains. All the coast ports, main lines, and approaches are in the possession of the Allies.

MURDER OF AFRICAN TROOPER.

The Colonial Office, in a report on the operations in Southern German East Africa, states:—Colonel Roger, on June 6, put the enemy to flight. Before this a trooper of the 2nd South African Rifles, who had been captured by the enemy, was tied to a gun wheel, and beaten by a native under a European's order. He was then shot, being wounded by seven bullets, and died two days later. He was quite conscious, and in the interval was able to make his dying depositions.

Captain Count Falkenstein commanded the enemy force. The prisoners include three Germans at present, one of whom is probably guilty of the above murder.

Among the Europeans captured are 13 missionaries, who had been fighting or doing supply and transport work.

GERMAN RUTHLESSNESS.

ADVOCATES CHECKED.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 20.

The Berlin newspaper "Germania" publishes a full report of Count von Reventlow's anti-Hollweg conference. It states that one speaker conveyed to the conference the Imperial Chancellor's reply to the conference's demand for submarine ruthlessness, saying that it could not yet be begun.

Geheimrath Duisberg caused a sensation in the conference by announcing that he was there as Marshal von Hindenburg's special envoy, and he had been instructed to request the conference to abandon the campaign in favour of ruthlessness.

Subsequent speakers declared that von Hindenburg's wishes had decided them not to proceed further.

Count von Reventlow then violently attacked Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg for falsely inspiring von Hindenburg, who had only heard one side of the case.

The German Emperor, replying to the petition presented by the Prince of Salm-Salm against the danger and sham of monarchy, and urging the dismissal of Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, expresses his displeasure, protests against the unjustified attacks on the Government, and refuses to receive the signatories to the petition.

"TOOTH OF PASUBIO."

LONDON, Oct. 20.

An Italian communique states: The enemy re-entered the redoubt known as "The Tooth of Pasubio," but was driven out promptly, after a hand-to-hand struggle. One hundred prisoners were taken during Wednesday's operations.

BELGIAN DEPORTATIONS.

The German Governor of Belgium, von Bissing, announces that all unemployed Belgians dependent on charitable relief are liable to compulsory work, the alternative being three years' imprisonment.

The Belgians are indignant, and interpret the announcement as a prelude to wholesale deportations.

MINOR SUCCESSES.

GENERAL OPTIMISM.

NEXT ENEMY MOVE AWAITED.

LONDON, Oct. 20.

Though in some quarters it is considered that Roumania has passed the corner, some correspondents declare that the crisis is not yet permanently passed, as the Germans are sure to continue to send reinforcements as long as the weather permits. A confident feeling prevails in Bucharest military circles.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" says that there is reason to believe that the German punitive expedition against Roumania has passed its most dangerous stage.

Lieutenant-Colonel Maurice, British Director of Military Operations, interviewed by an American correspondent, said that there was no reason for lack of confidence in regard to Roumania's ability to make an effective stand. "They have enough men, with good leadership," he said. "There is no ground for doubting the result."

ENEMY DRIVEN BACK.

The Roumanians are driving back the enemy in the passes, and have taken 900 prisoners.

A Roumanian communique states: On the western frontier of Moldavia one of our detachments passing via the Lampris Mountain towards Agas attacked with the bayonet, destroyed 12 cannon, drove back the enemy, and captured 600 prisoners. We surprised the enemy in the Trotus Valley, taking 300 prisoners. We repelled the enemy in the Uzul Valley. There is violent fighting in the Oitos Valley.

On the northern frontier of Wallachia light engagements have occurred at Tzlobutzetu. We drove back the enemy beyond the frontier at Predeal Pass and gained ground in the Bran defile. We stopped an advance towards Scara Pass.

ALLIES' ASSISTANCE.

Mr. Bonar Law (Secretary of State for the Colonies), in reply to questions in the House of Commons, said the situation in Roumania for some time had been the subject of careful and anxious consideration by the Allies. Everything possible was being done.

Sir Edward Carson asked when it would be possible to get a Government statement, in view of the prevalent anxiety.

Mr. Bonar Law replied that it was not desirable to make a statement at present.

The London correspondent of the "New York Times" says there is deep disquiet in Britain regarding Balkan diplomacy. The fear that Roumania may possibly suffer the fate of Servia has not been completely dispelled by official statements. There is a more or less general belief that the Entente's plans in the Balkans have not fulfilled expectations.

BLAME FOR GREECE.

The "New York Times," commenting on the position of Roumania, points out the importance of the check received by General von Falkenhayn. The paper adds: If Roumania had fallen, it would have been Greece who destroyed her. Greece broke her treaty with Servia and held back the rescuers of Roumania. Otherwise it would not have been left solely to the Russians to aid Roumania. It is no wonder that King Ferdinand begged the Allies to be less considerate of Greece's feelings, and to think more of Roumania, who had ventured all.

BULGARIANS AND RUSSIANS.

Owing to the reluctance of the Bulgarians to fight the Russians, General Jekoff, Commander-in-Chief, has issued an army order, concluding, "Let us tear all the gratitude for the past out of our hearts."

ENEMY REPORT.

TITANIC BATTLE.

RUSSIA'S ARTILLERY.

LONDON, Oct. 20.

During this month or early in November we shall reach the climax of the titanic war on the Russian front, says the Petrograd correspondent of the "Morning Post." Many millions of men, after manoeuvring for months, are now at close grips, ready for the greatest battle in history. The contending armies stand marshalled for a supreme effort from the Danube to the Gulf of Riga.

The Vienna newspaper, "Die Zeit," says "The Russian artillery preparations are now overwhelming. The task of our heroic soldiers is more and more difficult. We ought to understand and appreciate their valour, even if they do no more than hold their own against Russia's hordes and artillery frightfulness."

A Russian communique states:—We repelled an attack which was preceded by gas north of Kiselin. Fierce fighting has taken place east of Sviniuchi. We drove back stubborn attacks at Dorna-Watra.

There has been a violent snowstorm in the Carpathians.

A German communique states: We captured trenches on the west bank of the Stokhod. We repulsed the Russian Guards near Bubnow.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

After two night marches in sandy country they located the enemy in precipitous hills on the morning of the 15th inst., our aeroplanes co-operating. We drove out the enemy with losses.

We lost one killed, while two were wounded. We gained valuable information.

THE LOST BREMEN.

The Athens correspondent of the Central News Agency says that King Constantine was conciliatory during his interview with the British Ambassador, Sir Francis Elliott. VENIZELOS REPUDIATES KING.

The Exchange Telegraph Agency's Athen's correspondent says that M. Venizelos has informed the Entente Ministers that he can no longer co-operate with King Constantine—even if the King acquiesces in the national movement.

VILLAGE CAPTURED.

LONDON, Oct. 20.

The capture by the Servians of the village of Brod, southwards of Monastir, is reported in the latest French communique, which proceeds:—

We repulsed Bulgarian attacks north of Daldzeli. The Servians made progress despite enemy resistance at Dobropolje.

A Servian communique states: We occupied positions on the Sokol Mountain, and have appreciably advanced towards the summit. In the direction of Monastir the Bulgarians are bringing up reinforcements, and many trench mortars.

BRITISH RED CROSS.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

There was a record "Flag Day" in London to-day on behalf of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem. Thousands of ladies, nurses, and wounded soldiers were engaged selling 35,000,000 Red Cross flags and one million aluminium souvenirs cut from the Zeppelin which was recently brought down at Cuffley. Zeppelin bracelets were selling at five guineas apiece, and smaller souvenirs for a shilling.

Leading society women and actresses took up collections in the hotels and restaurants. Lady Birdwood and the wives of the Agents-General headed a party in the Hotel Cecil and Strand, selling toy kangaroos, boomerangs, and other Australian souvenirs.

Mrs. M'Kenna, in St. James-street, sold a flag for £1000. A lady collecting from the provision merchants in Tooley-street secured £200 before half-past 10 in the morning.

It is hoped the fund will total £2,000,000.

METAL TRADES.

POST-WAR POSITION.

LONDON, Oct. 20.

It is officially announced that Mr. Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, has appointed Sir Gerald Muntz (late president of the Institute of Metals) chairman of the committee which is to consider the post-war position, especially in relation to the international competition of lead, copper, tin, and other non-ferrous metal trades, and report as to what measures, if any, are necessary or desirable to safeguard the position of the trades. The other members of the committee consist of Mr. Cecil Budd, Mr. Clive Cookson, Mr. Charles W. Fielding, Lieutenant-Colonel A. J. Foster, Mr. Andrew W. Tait, and Mr. Alfred H. Wiggin.

AMERICA'S ROLE.

In the course of a speech at Chicago, President Wilson said he would like to think that when the time came for a settlement of the war America was able to assist in interpreting the needs of the future. He did not mean that the United States would have any part in determining the terms of settlement. He added that he hoped that America would never covet a single foot of foreign territory.

He re-enlisted as a private, and was promoted to corporal, and then to sergeant for gallantry on several occasions. He won the D.C.M., and was subsequently awarded a bar. His conduct on September 15 was so distinguished that he was recommended for a further honour, and consequently his commission was restored. He has been severely wounded.

CUNARD LINER SUNK

STRIKES A MINE.

PASSENGERS RESCUED.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

The Cunard Company's steamer Alaunia, 13,305 tons, has been sunk.

All the passengers have landed.

It is believed that four of the crew were drowned.

A New York message states that the liner Alaunia, while bound from New York to Falmouth with 200 passengers aboard, struck a mine in the English Channel and, after the passengers were disembarked, she sank.

The captain and majority of the crew were also saved.

The New York office of the Cunard Line states that the Alaunia did not carry munitions. Many Americans were among the passengers.

The Alaunia, which was launched at Greenock in June, 1913, was a fine twin-screw vessel of 13,300 tons, and with such sister-ships as the Andania, Ascania, and Ausonia, did service in the Cunard Canadian service, which afforded such exceptional travelling facilities between Great Britain and North America. The Alaunia was 540ft in length, 64ft in breadth, and 46ft in depth. She was fitted with the most modern improvements. The vessel has accommodation for 2140 passengers, and the provision made for the comfort of travellers was lavish. Six of the steamer's eight decks were devoted to passengers. From a decorative point of view, also, the Alaunia was right in the forefront of modern naval architecture.

RAIDS ON SHIPPING.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.

Extracts from German newspapers which have been published predict great activity by German submarines in American waters. These are to be representative of every important British colony, every State of the United States, and of Germany. Five German scholarships, each of an annual value of £250, and each tenable for three years, have been awarded yearly.]

WAR NOTES.

THE SOMME OFFENSIVE.

General Haig's summary of the recent fighting in the region between Thiepval and Le Sars is a most interesting statement as it confirms the opinion, which all but the ultra-pessimists entertain, regarding the progress of the Somme offensive. There are not wanting people who are ready to lend an ear to even enemy contentions, say that all is not well with the Somme offensive, and that the "big push" has failed. The three prominent points made by General Haig are:—(1) Superiority in infantry; (2) superiority in aircraft, and (3) superiority in artillery. Without a doubt these are the main essentials for a successful offensive. General Haig's announcement that we possess this superiority, and the later reports showing that the British and French are still making progress, should dispel any fears which might be entertained regarding the continuance of the advance. The operations which come under review in the summary referred to are the preliminary moves which are to result in the turning of the strong enemy positions in the Ancre Valley, and to bring about eventually the fall of Bapaume. They have not been marked by any very brilliant advances, resulting in the capture of large areas of country. They have consisted of a series of comparatively small attacks directed towards surrounding and cutting off strongly defended positions. The repeated references to unsuccessful enemy counter-attacks should not be overlooked. General Haig recognises that this is one of the most promising features of the operations in the Somme area, as it goes to show that the enemy's defence is faulty, and ineffective. While this remains as it is the Somme offensive must continue to show further satisfactory results for the Allies.

"FOR AT LEAST SOME HOURS."

If we wish to arrive at a true understanding of the enemy's real feelings regarding the seriousness of the Somme offensive, we need not pay too much attention to extracts from German newspapers nor to the statements of German politicians. A careful study of the French communique issued in Paris late on Thursday night and published in our columns this morning should satisfy curiosity in this respect. Yesterday we referred to the importance of the ground around the twin village of Sailly-Saillisel. The enemy has given us clear proof that he recognises the importance of this position by his frantic efforts to wrest it back again. The message referred to above tells us that he counter-attacked with waves of infantry, and sustained serious losses in a futile effort to regain the lost ground. It is but another instance of his declining defensive powers, as, by the weight and suddenness of his counter-attacks, we may judge the quality of his general defence. General Haig tells of a German document captured on the field which expressed the hope that it would be possible "for at least some hours to contest the enemy's supremacy of the air." So much now depends upon the activity of the aircraft when an army is taking the offensive that too much importance cannot be placed upon the significant compliment thus paid to the British and French airmen. Upon the supremacy of the air must depend largely the supremacy of the artillery, and upon the efficacy of the artillery's bombardment depends to a great extent the success of the infantry attack. With a fleet of aircraft "spotting" uninterruptedly in order to enable a preponderating number of heavy guns to smash up defensive positions prior to the rush of infantry, superior in quality and in numbers, the wearing down of the enemy's moral must follow, and this consummation, General Haig says, is vital to success in battle.

ROUMANIA'S STRUGGLE.

Although the menace to Roumania still remains, there are further signs this morning of the growing strength of the counter-attacks which are being hurled against the enemy in the region of the various passes along the western Roumanian front. The enemy appears to have experienced a decided check in the Trotus Valley, where he is working his way south-eastward along a branch line towards the Central Moldavian railway. In the Oitos Valley, some miles farther south, he is pushing up in a north-easterly direction towards the same region. Here fierce fighting has been reported for three days past, but, up to the present, the position appears to be still undecided. At the other vital point, below Brasso, the Roumanians claim to have driven the enemy back beyond the frontier above Predeal Pass. This is the gateway through which runs the main railway from Bucharest to Brasso, and, since the recapture of Brasso, the enemy appears to have been able to make little or no impression upon the Roumanians defending this point. He is, however, still in Roumanian territory on both sides of this pass, having penetrated farthest south on the western side of the railway below Torzburg Pass. He is unable to make any great progress here, however, while the Roumanians hold Predeal Pass, and, if any marked Roumanian advance takes place in the latter region, the enemy communications along the valley leading from Brasso towards Torzburg will not be too secure. Up to the present the Roumanian communiques have not conveyed the impression that the fighting reported to have taken place in the various valleys has been conducted on a very large scale. The numbers of prisoners captured, although more satisfactory this morning, have been by no means great. There has certainly been nothing to suggest that Falkenhayn has struck with anything like the full forces which he is supposed to have at his command. If the great offensive against Roumania were to end at this stage it would be a very poor thing, as it is only now that any really serious opposition is being exerted towards it. It is more than likely that we will find before long the heaviest fighting is still to come, and it is, therefore, reassuring to hear from Mr. Bonar Law that the Roumanian situation has received anxious consideration "for some time," and that everything possible is being done.

SQUEEZING BELGIUM.

Germany is evidently determined to lose no opportunities for squeezing the smaller nations on whose soil she has set her invading foot. Her latest decision to compel the poverty stricken Belgians to perform war work is a typical example of German tyranny. She has already been securing great numbers of workers in Belgium and Northern France, and the extreme methods for increasing the available supply, such as that mentioned in this morning's cablegrams, and the recent deportation of women from Lille, suggest that the necessity for releasing men behind the firing line is becoming much more pressing. Those Belgians who are unemployed and depending upon charity must form no small section of the population, as the enemy has paid little heed to the industries of the conquered territories. In Poland, Belgium, and Northern France factories have been stripped of all machinery, which has been packed off to Germany, and the countries have been robbed of their products in order Germany should not go short. The German professor, Karl Ballod, in an article published in Germany recently referred to the manner in which the German army had profited at the expense of the occupied territories. He estimated that the requisitions made in Belgium had more than compensated for the losses occasioned by the Russian invasion. He also stated that 3,000,000 men had received from Belgium and the north of France at least 400 grammes of meat, 50 grammes of butter, 600 grammes of bread, and 500 grammes of potatoes per day per head; and that 44 per cent. of the total consumption of meat by Germans and 6 per cent. of the total consumption of bread and potatoes had been drawn from the occupied territories. In addition he stated that Germany seized in Belgium at the commencement of the war over 400,000 tons of wheat and at least a million tons of other foodstuffs.

LATE WAR NEWS.

WESTERN FRONT.

BRITISH RAIDS.

LONDON, Oct. 20.

General Sir Douglas Haig in his midday report to-day says:—We raided trenches at Loos.

The enemy shelled Stuff and Schwaben Redoubts.

EASTERN FRONT.

BITTER STRUGGLE.

The Petrograd correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" emphasises the importance of the weather as a factor on the Eastern front. There are signs of an early winter. Snowfalls are reported from Petrograd to the Carpathians.

There is a bitter struggle in Volhynia, from a line east of Vladimir Volynski to Sokal, where the Germans have concentrated artillery.

Both sides are concentrating to their utmost on the Roumanian front before the winter sets in. The Germans desire to knock out Roumania, and the Russians are making an effort to obliterate the possibility of the German danger. Hence the extreme violence of the struggle on General Brusiloff's front and Dorna-Watra, where the Russians and Roumanians will join up.

VON FALKENHAYN WOUNDED

A Zurich message says that Field Marshal von Falkenhayn has been wounded in the leg, and has relinquished the Transylvanian command.

WHEAT STACK FIRE.

TWO MEN COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

LOCKHART, Friday.

A Coroner's inquiry was held at the Lockhart Courthouse into the circumstances connected with the fires at the Lockhart wheat stacks on the 14th instant.

The two men in custody, George Francis Finn (Wagga) and George Thompson (Lockhart) were represented by Mr. P. W. McCarthy.

Witnesses, who had seen the fires, expressed the view that they were not accidental.

Sarah Ingam, wife of the licensee of the Lockhart Hotel, recognised the two men Finn and Thompson as being the same who were in her husband's hotel on the 24th. Finn said, "returned soldiers were sent back here to scab." Witness replied: "It is not up to us to speak of the soldiers like that. Whatever they were before, they are men now." Only once when the men were leaving was the I.W.W. referred to. Two other men were in the bar with Finn and Thompson, one being named Waldron. A lad named Baden Day came into the bar and gave the alarm that the wheat stacks at the railway station were burning. None of the four men made any remark, and the conversation on conscription was continued.

Robert James Woodward said that about 11.30 a.m. he saw both Finn and Thompson going towards the gate leading into the wheat stacks yard. About twenty minutes later his wife directed his attention to the fire.

Cross-examined by Mr. McCarthy: He did not see the men near the wheat stacks. The men were about a chain away from the wheat stacks, and were walking along the roadway.

The jury at this stage inspected the railway yards.

The inquiry was brought to a close at 8 p.m., when the men in custody were committed to take their trial at Wagga Quarter Sessions on November 16, on a charge of setting fire to the stacks. Both men said they were members of the I.W.W. Bail was fixed in two sureties of £50 each.

GENERAL HAIG

APPEALS TO AUSTRALIA

SEND STRONG DRAFTS

DIVISIONS FAR BELOW STRENGTH.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The following cable message was received by the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) to-day from General Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces in France:—

"The divisions have fought splendidly, and their heroic efforts will live in history; but they cannot continue to achieve results unless their strength is kept up.

"The successes of the past few months justify absolute confidence in our power to win final victory, but it is not yet won.

"To complete our work and ensure a future enduring peace, the utmost efforts of the Empire and of the Allies are required for a long time yet. I hope strong drafts for your divisions will be despatched and their strength maintained."

Referring to the above message, Mr. Hughes said:—"The cable message speaks for itself. It needs neither interpretation nor comment. It is at once the most complete endorsement of the Government's policy, and a crushing refutation of the statements that men are not needed, that the war is won, and that Russians or Indians or other men should be hired to take the places of Australians.

"Here, from the lips of the Commander-in-Chief of the greatest army that the British Empire has ever put into the field, is a plain and unsolicited statement of the present position, that the Australian divisions are far below strength, that reinforcements are not arriving in sufficient numbers, and that their splendid heroism and valour will live through history, but that they cannot continue to achieve victories unless reinforcements arrive in sufficient numbers. To all, save the enemies of the Empire and of Britain in our midst, the message from this great soldier, General Haig, will carry absolute conviction."

MESSAGES FROM GENERAL BIRDWOOD AND THE MINING CORPS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

General BIRDWOOD, commanding the Australian Army Corps in France, has forwarded the following message to the Mayor of Kalgoorlie in response to a request for a message on conscription, especially for one from the Mining Corps:

"The Anzacs feel sure that Australia will see that sacrifices already made are not in vain, which may be the case unless we are well assured that men will be forthcoming to keep effective and maintain at full strength the magnificent battalions, batteries, and companies which have made history and have established tradition."

"We are strongly in favour of conscription. All are wanting to finish the enemy quickly, that we may return the sooner to those we voluntarily came away to shield; clearly conscious of our duty to the nation. Don't delay."

OUR EASTERN ALLY.

BASELESS INSINUATIONS.

STATEMENT BY CONSUL-GENERAL.

The Consul-General for Japan, Mr. S. Shimizu, in welcoming Dr. Batchelor, a visitor from Japan, at a dinner given by the Japanese Society of Sydney on Wednesday, said:—

"The whole of Australia is now agitated upon the conscription issue. As this is entirely an internal affair for Australia, I am not inclined to make any observations thereon; but, in the presence of this company, I should like to take the opportunity to say a few words to the Japanese residents here upon the matter of their attitude at the present juncture. Since this question has been brought forward, I have been several times informed by my Australian friends, as well as by the Japanese residents here, that our nation had been frequently referred to by public speakers for and against the conscription proposals.

"While, on the one hand, those in favour of conscription had urged as an argument upon their side that conscription was necessary in order to defend Australia from Japanese aggression, those upon the other side had asserted that, if Australians were conscripted, there would be an influx of Japanese labour into the Commonwealth. Thus it will be seen that the references to Japan are awkward and unpleasant from both sides, and, I may add, quite baseless.

"One would have thought that the remembrance of the part which Japan had already taken in the present great world crisis would have been sufficient to disprove any suggestions of ulterior motives on the part of Japan. I realise how unpleasant it must be to you to have to listen to, and read about, statements which are so misleading and so cruelly untrue; but I strongly advise you individually to comport yourselves, in these trying circumstances, with the same dignified forbearance of which the Imperial Japanese Government has set you so strong an example.

"It must be left to time to prove how mistaken those are who make such allegations against the honour of our country, and I think and hope that those who are most voluble upon this subject will yet live to see and acknowledge their error."

MR. GRIFFITH AT LEICHHARDT.

Mr. Griffith (Minister of Education) and Mr. Hollis, M.L.A., were the principal speakers at a meeting at the corner of Morton-street and Parramatta-road, Leichhardt, last night. The crowd was a noisy one, and Mr. Griffith, in pleading for a fair hearing, said it was not the first time he had faced a hostile majority. He had taken the unpopular side in the Boer war, because he believed it to be right, and now he was advocating compulsion because he believed it to be right. Australia must not "throw in the towel," and leave to their fate the young men who had gone. The stock argument of the opponents of the referendum was that Australia could not bear the strain of supplying the 16,500 men per month, necessary to build up and maintain adequate reserves and reinforcements for the men in the firing line. Mr. Griffith pointed out that the share of New South Wales would be 180 men per day—just two men for each of the 90 electorates into which the State is divided. "Are we to be told," said Mr. Griffith, "that a great electorate with 20,000 people, cannot provide two young men per day for a few months to keep our ranks filled, without dislocating and paralysing our industrial life?"

Mr. Hollis asked if his hearers wanted to win the war. If so, compulsion was the only course to be adopted.

TOTTENHAM MURDER.

MICHAEL KENNEDY ACQUITTED.

BATHURST, Friday.

Michael Herbert Kennedy, the third man arrested in connection with the Tottenham murder, was brought up for trial before the Chief Justice (Sir William Cullen) at the Bathurst Circuit Court to-day. He was charged with feloniously and maliciously murdering Constable Duncan. Accused pleaded not guilty.

Frank Franz (who was on Wednesday convicted of the murder of Constable Duncan) said he, Michael Kennedy, and the latter's brother (also already convicted) were members of the I.W.W. Franz detailed the circumstances of the murder as given in his evidence in the previous trial, stating that the two Kennedys fired at the policeman through the window almost simultaneously; while, he, who was in the rear, fired a second or so later and deliberately missed.

At the conclusion of the Crown case, Mr. Pilcher sought for an acquittal on the ground that there was no evidence identifying Michael Kennedy as the third person whom the Crown sought to prove was present at the murder.

The Chief Justice said: There is the most ample proof that a gross, foul crime was committed, and there is evidence that more than one person was concerned. There is, in fact, some evidence on the question of three persons being concerned. But the whole of the defence is not concerned with a denial that there was a crime committed, but rests on the question of whether the accused is shown to be one of the persons concerned. The all-essential link, upon which the whole strength of the case against the accused lies, depends wholly and solely on the evidence of an accomplice, an accomplice who, on his own testimony, was a party to the commission of the crime, although he does not admit that he fired the fatal shot. I believe that my proper course in so serious and important a matter is to direct that there is no evidence, proper or sufficient, for the jury to consider the question of guilt or innocence. Above all considerations is that principle of the British and Australian law which protects all persons against conviction of guilt, unless there is a clear case made against them, and complete legal proof of guilt. I shall direct the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

Without retiring the jury returned a verdict as directed, and Kennedy was discharged.

QUEENSLAND MINISTRY.

STATEMENT BY THE PREMIER.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The Premier (Mr. Ryan) stated that he had received the following letter from the Assistant Minister (Mr. Fihelly):—"Department of Justice, Brisbane, October 18. Dear Mr. Ryan,—Adverting to our conversation relative to my speech on Irish affairs at the Queensland Irish Association, may I be permitted to again emphasise that nothing therein was intended that would be incompatible with absolute loyalty. Neither in my public nor private capacity was there any intention of offending the susceptibilities of any section of the community, and it is regretted that the contrary should have suggested itself. I have always had but one opinion on the war, and that is that the Empire must win, and that we must wholeheartedly co-operate in supplying men, metals, and foodstuffs. In view of the misconceptions which have arisen I very naturally have no objection to publicity being given to the sentiments herein expressed. Believe me, very truly yours, J. Fihelly."

"As far as I am concerned," the Premier added, "I am convinced of the paramount necessity for Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotsmen, and Welshmen, and their descendants standing together in this great crisis, strong and united in their purpose to triumph over the forces arrayed against the Empire, in this great struggle. Whatever differences of opinion may exist as to the methods of achieving that objective, all Britons should be, and are, united in a wholehearted desire to win the war. I must add that this is not only my opinion, but the opinion of the Government, and of the party supporting it."

REFERENDUM.

WHAT "NO" MEANS.

PERMANENT CONSCRIPTION.

MR. HALL AT BONDI.

Speaking at an open-air meeting at Bondi Junction last night, the Attorney-General (Mr. Hall) said that to vote "No" would mean voting against temporary conscription, but in favour of permanent conscription with a huge annual expenditure on a standing army, warships, aeroplanes, and Zeppelins. The way to crush German militarism was to vote "Yes." If the referendum were defeated there would be rejoicing in Berlin.

A voice: You are a politician, therefore you are exempt.

Mr. Hall: Any politician who would not waive his privilege would deserve to be hunted out of public life. (Applause.) He was prepared to go when his turn came, but he would take the other eligible men with him. "I know there are people who would like to get rid of me and others who hold similar views, but if we go, and in time the ranks become thinned, will those people go over and fill up the gaps?"

Voices: "Yes."

Mr. Hall (smiling): "Yes. I know you would." (Great laughter.) Voluntaryism had failed. If a man was not compelled to pay his income tax he doubted whether there was a man anywhere who would pay it. In the Labour movement——

A voice: You are outside the Labour movement.

Mr. Hall: "I don't care what is said about that. If the Labour movement can get on without me I can get on without the Labour movement. (Applause.) I would rather go out of public life than take the platform against universal service when I know that it is necessary. (Applause.) In the Labour movement if a man deserted his mates at a time of crisis he was called a 'scab.' Was Australia," he asked, "going to 'scab' on the Allies?"

Mr. J. S. Hawthorne (ex-M.L.A.) also spoke.

CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE.

The president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Australia, Mr. G. A. Parkes, yesterday made the following statement:—

Rumours are being industriously circulated by anti-conscriptionists to the effect that the Chambers of Commerce have made no pronouncement as to their attitude regarding the referendum campaign, and that members of the chambers of commerce throughout Australia are not only assisting anti-conscriptionists, but are also making large donations to the funds to help to fight conscription. I desire, therefore, once more to call the attention of the public to the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted at the annual meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Australia, held at Brisbane on May 15 last, as follows:—

"That the Federal Government, having undertaken to send three hundred thousand men to the front by the end of June, and, having promised to send Australia's last man and spend Australia's last shilling in prosecuting the war to its end, this congress of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the Commonwealth, offers to support and assist the Government in any action it may take to ensure complete fulfilment of its obligations."

This resolution should in itself be sufficient answer to any who doubt the attitude of the Chambers of Commerce on this question. In moving this resolution, the proposer said that:—

"In the early stages of the war, within practically a few hours of England's decision to safeguard the integrity of Belgium, it was flashed across the wires that Australia was behind the motherland to the extent of her utmost capacity and resources. Voiced by our leaders in Parliament, both Federal and State, and supported right throughout the length and breadth of Australia by public opinion, we promised to send our last man and spend our last shilling in the Empire's cause. These promises have been reiterated times without number, and the Prime Minister of Australia, in his public utterances on the other side, and more recently the Premiers of the various States, have in unmistakable terms indicated that Australia would redeem her pledges. We know the meaning of the terms 'sending our last man' and 'spending our last shilling' and the meaning of the term 'unsheathing the sword, and throwing away the scabard;' in plain language the former means utilising every resource in men and money, and the latter, fighting, maybe, till physically exhausted. It is not a question of whether or not we approve of the war. As a matter of fact we are a peace-loving nation, and we have no desire to war with other nations; but we were forced into this conflict, and the question is, are we fulfilling our obligations? Are we making an honest attempt to redeem the pledges we have given to use every resource at our command? The responsibility for Australia's fulfilling her obligations rests entirely with the Federal Government. The people themselves have no say in the prosecution of the war. They may be permitted to express an opinion, but only by the will of the Federal Parliament, which, as soon as Australia entered upon this war, became all powerful, and I think we cannot do more than say to the Federal Government that we shall support it in any action it may take to ensure fulfilment of the undertakings to which Australia is committed."

The attitude of the Chambers of Commerce throughout Australia to-day is, they are supporting and assisting the Federal Government by every means in their power.

CAMPAIGN EXPENSES.

Mr. Mason Allard, speaking at the Y.M.C.A. convention yesterday, said that Mr. Hughes was quite right when he said that no Government funds were being used in connection with the referendum campaign. He (Mr. Allard) had for some weeks been engaged in helping to secure money to carry out the work, and he was pleased to say that the public had responded nobly, and had provided ample funds to prosecute the campaign in all the States of the Commonwealth.

WHITE FLAG.

WILL AUSTRALIA RAISE IT?

A meeting in support of conscription was held in St. Matthia's Hall, Woollahra, on Thursday.

Mr. W. L. Duncan asked had they ever imagined what would have become of Australia if Belgium or France had stood out. Which Empire was it that Germany was out to challenge? He felt sure that there was not one man in Australia who wished to adopt conscription. But here was an occasion when we should throw over the principles for the time being in order to firmly establish them in the future. Unfortunately, we had some people in our midst who did not desire to see Britain win this war. These men were not so much anti-conscription as they were anti-war. They proposed that we should put up the white flag. This was absolutely antagonistic to the Australian spirit and determination.

Professor MacCallum said that everyone was agreed that this war must be ended as speedily and as successfully as possible. Consider what things were at stake. In the first instance, Australia and the Empire were vitally concerned. It was Britain that had secured the freedom we enjoyed and our democratic institutions. Without the British Navy there would be no security. Something more than democracy was at stake. Our moral ideals were in the balance. This war had begun with violence in the little kingdom of Belgium, and it had gone on with devastation in Northern France and Poland. All their inhabitants had been subjected to unspeakable outrages. We had to remember the Lusitania, the judicial murder of Nurse Cavell and Captain Fryatt, and the forced deportation of non-combatants into Germany from the city of Lille. There was now a popular outcry in Germany for more frightfulness. In his school days he had been taught to look upon the Germans as an inoffensive and kindly disposed people. How came this change? The Junker class and the Prussian Government had perverted and polluted the whole nation. Mr. Hughes, who knew more about the requirements of the war than any anti-conscriptionist, and the War Council, which knew even more than Mr. Hughes, had both told the people that more help was needed. What more final authority could they have?

We had been told that Australia would be unable to defend herself without the men which the Federal Government proposed to send to the front. Now, what mightier defence could they have than the British Navy? We must avert at all costs an indecisive victory. If the Allies were forced to come to unfavourable terms, they would be forever looking forward to a renewal of the struggle, which might happen at a time when we were least prepared for it. It had been said that conscription would interfere with the industrial life of the community. If a man was struggling for his life with a murderer he must expect to be knocked about and suffer some hurt; if a nation was struggling with murderers, was it not necessary for it to make some sacrifice? The more men we sent away now the less arduous would be that sacrifice. (Applause.)

Mr. Kelly, M.P., also addressed the meeting.

A motion in favour of conscription was carried, with a few dissentients.

PUBLIC HOLIDAY.

MILITARY EXPERTS.

PROFESSOR PEDEN'S REMARKS.

"I do not wish to say anything harder against the advocates of no-conscription than that they are the most wonderful lot of amateur military experts the world has ever seen," said Professor Peden when addressing a large gathering of people in favour of the referendum at Crow's Nest last night.

Proceeding, Professor Peden said Great Britain had really never won a war yet without compulsion of some form or other. She had adopted it in Cromwell's time, and it was even more necessary to adopt it to-day if we were to bring the war to speedy termination. If democracy meant anything, he said, it meant that it provided the very liberties for which we were now called upon to fight. (Applause.) It was said that Mr. Hughes's promise that conscription would only be for the duration of the war could not be relied upon. He for one did not doubt that Mr. Hughes would keep his word. Even if he did not, they had a powerful safeguard in the franchise which gave one man one vote. They had a majority in the Senate against conscription, and there was little danger that they would consent to a bill becoming law to compel men to go out of the Commonwealth, unless it embodied a clause limiting that power for the term of the war only. (Applause.) They were not being asked to send reinforcements to make new fighting units, but to ensure the men already there a priceless opportunity of getting proper rest and a decent chance of being able to recover from their wounds before returning to the trenches. Were they going to vote against a system which would deny them that unalienable right. (Cries of "No!")

Professor Peden: It was unthinkable that they would do anything of the kind, and by the grace of God, grave as the responsibilities were of introducing conscription into this country, he believed they would stand up to their obligations like true Britons and vote "Yes." (Loud cheers.)

Mr. Boxall, a Labour man, also spoke.

CONFLICTING VIEWS.

FEDERAL MEMBERS' VISIT TO ENGLAND.

Returning to Australia after an absence of several months, the members of the Federal Legislature who arrived by the Makura yesterday stated their views on the subject of conscription. "Conscription is absolutely necessary if we are to maintain our fighting forces at any strength," said Mr. R. B. Orchard, Liberal member for Nepean. "We must keep up the reinforcements, and the casualties are increasing. Every soldier that you meet puts the question, 'When are they going to have conscription in Australia?'"

Mr. P. McMahon Glynn, M.P. (South Australia), said he was a believer in the voluntary system, but if they could not secure the necessary reinforcements, compulsion was the only alternative. "Victory," he added, "is practically assured, as long as there is no slackening of effort. While a great war is on we cannot discuss the merits of voluntaryism or conscription from an academic standpoint."

Mr. A. C. Palmer (Victoria), said: "I am in entire unison with the Liberal Party in supporting conscription. My only regret is that it was not submitted in the form of a bill in Parliament instead of a referendum."

Mr. Palmer had the experience of going up in an observation balloon and viewing the German lines when the Parliamentary party visited the Western front. "You want to be there to realise the strenuousness of the fight," he said. "The sooner we can put more men into the field, the sooner we can bring it to an end. The need for men is accentuated by the fact that Great Britain is in such a strong position as far as munitions are concerned."

Senator Barker (Victoria) said: "It is rather early to express a definite view. We do not know anything about the controversy yet, and only saw the newspapers at the last port of call. I think we have done more than our share under the voluntary system, but would like to know a little more than I know at the present time. We have seen the need of men, but this is a shell fight rather than a fight of numbers—Vulcan instead of Mars."

Mr. Josiah Thomas, Labour member for the Barrier, said:—"When we left Australia the Ministry gave us to understand that there was no necessity for compulsion. I must inquire further before expressing a definite view."

Mr. A. J. Hampson, Labour member for Bendigo, handed a written statement to the press for publication, in the course of which he stated:—"The Australians on the western battle-front in France say that the severe fighting in Gallipoli was only a circumstance compared with the 'push' in Flanders. The men and officers are confident and optimistic; but beyond all they wish it was over. The French nation is continuing its grim duty with a quiet but firm determination. The British people, with an expenditure of money greater than any other combatant, are putting the whole of their weight into the struggle. The workers are accepting regulations and conditions only because they are guaranteed as being temporary. The chief complaint of the worker is that food prices are not regulated. The representatives of the workers hate conscription. The struggle is developing into a trade war. The claim that we are fighting German militarism is becoming a farce. I trust the free people of Australia will never make the mistake of fastening the manacles of conscription on their own wrists. We have done and can continue doing our duty without it."

Mr. R. J. Burchell (W.A.) declined to express an opinion on conscription so soon after his return.

Mr. David Watkins (Newcastle) said that owing to lack of information on the subject he was not prepared to make any statement at present.

ANTIS AT REDFERN.

The crowded attendance at the no-conscription meeting in the Town Hall, Redfern, last night included a considerable number of women.

Mrs. Locke Burns said she had that day read a letter from one of their boys in France. According to this Australian soldier he and his comrades were having a good time, "helping the French farmers to get in their crops." That letter was written in September. Yet the advocates of conscription were painting awful pictures of Australians dying in the trenches through lack of reinforcements. Such reinforcements as were required could be raised here without conscription. Some of the conscriptionists went so far as to say that if the shearers were sent away women could do the shearing. The scandalous incidents in the Exemption Courts gave the public some idea of what would be done under conscription. By voting "No" on October 28 they would save the country from brutal military rule, from social degredation, and from industrial bankruptcy.

Mr. T. D. Mutch, who was announced as a member of the P.L.L. executive, said he would commence by answering the man at the back of the hall who wanted to know what he (the speaker) thought of the cablegram which was published that day as coming from General Sir Douglas Haig, Commander-in-Chief of the British Forces. It was a most suspicious cablegram, timed to arrive at the psychological moment. They would note that it was addressed personally to Mr. Hughes. The latest dodge of Mr. Hughes was to announce that shearers and rural labourers were to be exempt from the present preliminary dose of conscription, as well as from conscription if it was brought in. If the number of exemptions was increased from day to day only women and old men would be left to draw upon for military service abroad.

Mr. Riley, M.P., said it was to the credit of Australia that it had sent to the front the finest volunteer army of modern times. As they started they were willing to continue without coercion or conscription. It was an insult to the British army and an insult to Australians to say that Australia was not sending sufficient men to France. There might have been some justification for conscription 18 months ago. There was none at the present time. It was ridiculous to say, as the supporters of Mr. Hughes were saying, that the Allies were depending upon conscription in Australia. At the most Mr. Hughes could raise only 50,000 single men in the Commonwealth. Mr. Hughes said he would not call up married men. It might be asked how could 50,000 men turn the tide in a war of millions. With 100,000 Australians now in the firing line no one could say that Australia was not doing her duty.

LEICHHARDT.

A meeting was held at Leichhardt last night in opposition to conscription.

Mr. G. Burns, M.P., referred to the arguments being used by conscriptionists in regard to the proportion of the population under arms in Australia and the allied countries. The countries which had 10 per cent. of their population under arms were in a different position to Australia. Those countries were over-populated, and had in the past gone to war to gain new lands in which to settle their surplus population. Australia was a producer, and relied entirely on her wool and wheat for her wealth. Could it be expected that the women, when the man power of the country was depleted, should take up the burden of field work and station duties miles away from civilisation? The people should remember that when Napoleon introduced conscription into France he said that it would be only a temporary measure. Frederick the Great, of Germany, said the same thing, but both these countries had it still. It would be the same in Australia. The income of Australia was two hundred million pounds per annum. If conscription was carried the cost would be 120 million pounds, leaving a balance of only 80 millions. Who was going to bear the burden, and would it be commensurate with the ultimate effect that conscription in Australia would have upon the war?

MEETING AT DARLINGHURST.

Mrs. Hartnott occupied the chair at an anti-conscription meeting convened by the Darlinghurst Women's No-conscription League, at St. John's Hall, Darlinghurst-road, on Thursday. The building was well filled with an enthusiastic crowd, and the remarks of the speakers were listened to attentively.

Mr. J. E. West, M.P., declared that it would be a scandalous thing if the people of Australia granted the right to the Commonwealth Government to carry out their proposal to exhaust the manhood of the country.

Miss May Mathews moved a resolution opposing conscription. She said she was opposed to the idea of submitting the question to the people, and had Mr. Fisher remained in Australia it would not have been put to a referendum. (Cheers.)

Alderman J. Farrell supported the motion, which was carried unanimously.

OPPOSITION TACTICS.

Mr. F. J. Thomas, M.L.A., joint secretary of the National Referendum Council, stated yesterday that the unscrupulous tactics of some of the opposition must undeniably recoil upon the instigators.

"There are few families," said Mr. Thomas, "in Australia who were not either represented at Gallipoli, or have now some representative at the front. Could anything be more insulting than a typewritten circular received by a lady resident at Drummoyne.

After asking a blasphemous question whether the person addressed has a husband, brother, or son at the front, the circular asks if such relative went to the front from vanity, from love of adventure, from a desire to shirk some duty here, or from fear of other folks' opinion, and winds up—or "did you drive him there?"

Then this atrocious insult goes on—"Remember, though your man may be slain by a German, the husbands, brothers, or sons of women as innocent of this war as yourself, perished at your man's hand."

FIVE DOCK.

A meeting in favour of conscription was held at Hitching's corner, Five Dock, last night, when addresses were delivered by Mrs. Bennett and Mr. S. W. Thornton. There was a large gathering. A motion in favour of conscription was carried without opposition.

THE ROLLS.

NAMES TOTAL 1,050,000.

Mr. McLaren, Commonwealth Electoral Officer for New South Wales, reports that the printing of the principal and supplementary rolls for all divisions of this State, is now complete.

The rolls contain approximately 1,050,000 names, the number of new and transferred enrolments since last year's print being 232,000.

The committee of the Edith Cavell Memorial Concert has postponed the concert at the Town Hall on October 26, to allow the building being used for a public meeting, at which Mr. Hughes will deliver an address.

FIRE AT PYRMONT.

A two-storied house, belonging to the Perpetual Trustee Company, and tenanted by Mr. Arthur Nelson, at 55 Nelson-street, Pyrmont, was severely damaged by fire last night. It is believed the outbreak was caused by the upsetting of a kerosene stove. Two bedrooms on the first floor and the kitchen on the ground floor were severely damaged.

EARLY CLOSING OF HOTELS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Some time ago the Attorney-General moved the expediency of bringing in a Liquor Amendment Bill. Matters in connection with same appear to have fallen through, or has Mr. Hall and his committee fallen asleep? Hotels were closed without a minute's notice, and up to the present it has taken four months for Mr. Hall to give assistance in any way to the hotelkeeper.

High rents still predominate. We have had 30 hours a week taken off our selling hours. Agents have raised the prices of spirits considerably, but reduced the strength of same; also our best day, Saturday, is often closed on us for electioneering and referendum purposes. Also, with the number of our brave boys at the front, and now the single men going into camp, our country towns are deserted. Yet, under these circumstances, we are compelled to pay the high rents the landlord demands. Under the existing circumstances, how can we repay the interest and instalments of purchase money and interest of mortgages. This 6 o'clock closing has played right into the hands of Greeks, Italians, and even Chinamen. If we are compelled to do without hotels after 6 o'clock, surely we can do without these soft drink shops? Yet we call ourselves a white Australia. Railway refreshment rooms serve other than travellers before and after hours, and seem to care nothing for the law. Truly, the hotelkeepers at present have a lot to put up with. The sooner Mr. Hall gets a move on and passes the Liquor Amendment Act, the better we struggling hotelkeepers will like him. The reduction of rent means a lot to us at present, and it might assist some of us to meet our liabilities.

I am, etc.,

HOTELKEEPER.

Oct. 18.

YESTERDAY'S CASES.

The work of the exemption courts proceeded smoothly yesterday, a large number of claims being dealt with. The principal ground on which exemption was granted was on account of applicants being only sons.

Conscientious objectors come daily before the magistrates at one court or another. One applicant yesterday withdrew his objection, stating that after reading reports of the Exemption Court proceedings in the papers he had come to the conclusion that his objection would not hold good.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Two exemption courts sat at the Central Police Court yesterday, presided over by Mr. Macfarlane, C.S.M., and Mr. Barnett, S.M. In all 67 applications for exemption were dealt with, 23 being granted to only sons or remaining sons. Of the remainder 13 were refused, and the balance were postponed, mainly to allow of the applicants going before the Medical Referee Board.

A tailor's cutter claimed exemption on the ground that he had a religious objection to killing men. After reading his application through, Mr. Barnett, S.M., who presided, said that the ground stated was not allowed for by the Act, and he took it that the applicant had conscientious grounds.

His Worship: What you really mean is that you have a conscientious belief that prevents you from bearing arms?—Yes.

You object to using arms in a dispute?—I have never been called upon to use arms in a dispute.

Suppose you were at the war at the present time, and were in danger of being wounded, would you wound?—Yes.

I see you state that you are a member of the New Church.—Yes; I joined that Church six years ago.

His Worship refused the application. The applicant stated his intention of appealing, adding, "If I am compelled to go to the front I will go to gaol." On passing the Press table he was overheard to say that he would join the A.M.C.

The son of a city restaurant proprietor applied for exemption on the ground that his services were required by his father, by whom he was employed. He superintended the cooking department, and assisted in the clerical work, which was of a private nature. The father stated that the applicant was the only son of the first marriage. If the applicant became a soldier the business would be materially interfered with, but he would not have to close it up. A temporary exemption was granted until the end of the present month.

REDFERN.

Mr. McKensey, S.M., heard a large number of applications for exemption at the Redfern Police Court yesterday. Lieut. E. Gouldar Smith represented the military authorities.

A naturalised Dutchman, Albert Reumer, 28, engineer, said he was supporting aged parents living in Holland. Applicant said he had served in the Dutch Navy. He applied for exemption on the ground, among others, that it was against his principles "to join any branch of military service." This conscientious objection he had held for 8 years. Still he was willing to make munitions. In the absence of proof that the applicant was supporting his parents, the magistrate refused the exemption.

The day's record was: Absolute exemptions, 33; temporary, 6; refused, 7; withdrawn, 5; adjourned, 12; non-appearance, 7. Total, 70.

GLEBE.

Sitting for half a day at the Glebe Police Court, Mr. King, S.M., disposed of 31 applications, and two were adjourned.

The rejected applications included those of a chemist, 28, who urged that he was "engaged in a business of national importance," the proprietor of a printing establishment, a storeman, 21, who declared that he was "the sole support of a widowed mother and subject to fits;" an expert boot operator, 23; a Customs officer, 21, and a seaman, 26.

A temporary exemption of one month was granted a coal foreman, aged 28, who pleaded "that it was expedient in the national interests that his services should be retained in furthering the despatch of transports;" and a temporary exemption was also granted to an engineering student, who gave his age as 22, and who set out that he was in his last year of training at the University of Sydney.

While "only sons" were granted absolute exemptions, the magistrate refused to recognise the claims of men who said they were supporting their parents, but who had brothers of the military age—brothers who have not enlisted. Helping to support parents, Mr. King held, was not a sufficient ground for granting exemption from military service.

PADDINGTON.

At the Paddington Court a fifth-year medical student was declared exempt, as were a number of only sons. A hair, skin, and scalp specialist was granted exemption on the grounds that he had four brothers on active service. He was the only remaining son, and was supporting his parents. He treated all returned wounded soldiers without charging any fee, and had a number of contracts on hand with patients in hospitals and private homes to personally treat their ailments until they were cured.

One man asked for exemption on the grounds that his mother was laid up with a bad leg, but the excuse was insufficient, and the application was dismissed.

A telephone mechanic was granted exemption on the grounds that all his brothers were fighting in the war, and also that he was flatfooted, and could not stand for any long period without resting.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Keith Grafton Nobb, an insurance broker, of 103 Macleay-street, Potts Point, applied for exemption on the ground that he was the only remaining son. Of his brothers one was married, one had enlisted, and the third was under age. He would have to close his business if called up. Temporary exemption was granted, and the magistrate said that the application would be referred to the military for favourable consideration.

Frank Patrick Dalton, a dentist, of St. James's-chambers, King-street, city, applied for exemption on conscientious reasons. When the case was called the applicant said he wished to withdraw his application.

The Magistrate: Have you got over your conscientious objections?—I have not, but the Court has decided against me.

Magistrate: I haven't asked you any questions yet.—No; but I have read the papers, and have come to the conclusion that my case would not hold ground.

NORTH SYDNEY.

Robert Innes Kay, a University law student and articled clerk, sought exemption on the previous day on the ground that he was the sole remaining son of a family, one half of whose sons had already enlisted prior to October 2, 1916. Applicant stated that he was being trained in a service which was of national interest, and in which he should remain. Applicant further stated that his father, who was a minister, and opposed to war, had been confined in a hospital since his brother had enlisted, and the applicant feared that his enlisting would probably make him worse. An exemption on those grounds was allowed for three months. It was incorrectly stated yesterday that the application had been dismissed.

There was only one conscientious objector yesterday. When pressed by the magistrate for further reasons the applicant explained that both he and his sweetheart were Bible students, and he believed that it would break her heart if he were compelled to bear arms. The magistrate compromised by granting partial exemption to enable the young man to join a non-combative corps. He then expressed a desire to be alloted to the A.A.M.C.

A letter carrier (23) told Mr. Hawkins that he wished exemption as an only son, and the sole support of his widowed mother. The latter was called in support of the application, but admitted having two more sons, whose whereabouts she did not know. The magistrate asked the witness if that were all. "No," was the reply, "I have two daughters as well."

The postman was recalled, and after being admonished by the magistrate, was informed sharply that his application was granted reluctantly. Applicant's other brothers, it was stated, were not thought to be in Australia. The Court adjourned till Monday.

PREMATURE PEACE.

WARNING BY THE PREMIER.

GLEN INNES, Friday.

The Premier (Mr. Holman) delivered an address at Glen Innes last night. The large hall was packed to its utmost capacity, and the meeting was presided over by Dr. Mackenzie, president of the Referendum Committee. Mr. Holman's appearance on the platform was the signal for vigorous cheers, and a few groans from the back of the hall.

The question before the people, said Mr. Holman, was not whether they should go to war or not, but whether they should continue in the great struggle. Let them consider what would be the result of peace today. Austria would hold Servia, and Germany the whole of Belgium, Northern France, and Poland, and their enemies would emerge from the war immensely strengthened. German military leaders would be able to say to the people:—"See how our sacrifices have been justified." Then the Allies would have to deal with a Germany more arrogant than ever before, and have a treaty signed by the German Emperor, one just as binding as that which guaranteed the neutrality of Belgium. Such a peace would be merely preliminary to another attack, and would enable the foe to recover from the blows now being received, and prepare for another advance in world domination. Then the Allies would have to prepare for the even more terrible struggle which would have to come. They would be living for the next 50 years in daily expectation of the outbreak of war, and every national energy would have to be devoted to an increase in their military strength. Conscription would then come as a matter of course, and not as a temporary step to end a war. (Applause.) All their industries, land settlement, and progress would be subservient to the great object of military preparation.

Mr. Holman compared the German Emperor to a wild beast preying upon the free nations of Europe, and he had to be caged. "No," he said, "there is nothing yet in any alternative to complete victory." With a decisive victory secured we free people of Australia could then continue to enjoy all the great privileges of peace and freedom we so much value. If compulsory service was the only way by which this could be achieved they must have it. (Applause.) It was not a new principle. Compulsory arbitration was applied. The same principle was applied in the Workshops Act, which compelled employers to safeguard employees against the dangers of machinery.

Why, the Government was run on the basis of compulsion. He, as the Treasurer, had to collect income taxes, but he did not ask the people would they pay the tax. "No," said Mr. Holman, "I compel them to pay it." (Laughter.) They were asked to have conscription of wealth, and that was probably right, but the men who advocated it said in the same breath:—"Compulsion sears the conscience and outrages the dignity of the individual." Such arguments were childish and unworthy of self-respecting men. They said:—"We never agreed to compulsory service abroad;" but what difference was there morally? What difference did the sea voyage make? They said:—"It is right to kill Germans this side of the Torres Strait, but wicked to kill Germans on the other side." Many of the men who were proud of the military measures they had framed for the Commonwealth, and who gained personal prestige through them, were now brought down to these miserable subterfuges. Now they whined and said that they meant it was all right to kill men south of the Torres Strait, but nowhere above it. Every man they could send would reduce the slaughter and bring the war to an earlier end. Napoleon used to say that battles were often won by an extra squadron of cavalry, and there were certainly incidents in the present war where a reserve body of troops converted possible defeat into victory.

At the conclusion of the address, during which Mr Holman had a splendid hearing, a vote of thanks was heartily accorded him.

SOLDIERS' LETTERS.

POSTAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The postal authorities intimate that usually the Expeditionary letter mail closes 24 hours before the ordinary English mail, and that under ordinary circumstances the next mail, that per the R.M.S. Medina, would close at 5.30 p.m. on Monday, 30th inst. Next Saturday, however, having been proclaimed a public holiday in connection with the referendum, it is expected that the mails from suburban and country offices received on Monday, the 30th, will be exceptionally heavy, as they will contain all postings after about 9.30 a.m. on Saturday. In view of this it has been decided, in order to enable the detailed sorting to be properly done and to avoid risk of congestion, to close this mail at 10.30 a.m. on Monday, the 30th inst, instead of at 5.30 p.m. It is added that the next Expeditionary parcel mail will close at 3 p.m. on Wednesday, the 25th inst, and the ordinary United Kingdom, Ceylon, Egypt, Malta, and Continent of Europe parcel mails at 2 p.m. on Friday, the 27th. To facilitate as far as possible shipment and loading of these mails, and to ensure despatch of all articles posted, the public is strongly advised to post early.

RED CROSS DELEGATES.

REVIEW OF VOLUNTARY AIDS.

To-day several delegates from the South Australian and Victorian divisions of the Red Cross Society will arrive in Sydney to attend the annual meeting of the Australian branch next Wednesday, and they will be present at the review of voluntary aids at Government House at 2.30 this afternoon.

Other interstate delegates will arrive tomorrow and on Monday, and arrangements have been made for an inspection of the Red Cross depots next week.

On Monday afternoon, at 2.15, there will be an exhibition of Red Cross films at the Piccadilly Theatre.

CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER.

A CORRECTION.

The Acting City Coroner, Mr. Jamieson, who conducted an inquiry on Thursday into the cause of the death of a Chinaman named Buck Hoy, recorded a finding of manslaughter against Oppo Kong Sing, and not a finding of murder, as stated in yesterday's issue. Oppo Kong Sing, who was committed for trial, was defenced by Mr. James, instructed by Mr. E. G. Maddocks Cohen.

BRITAIN'S TASK.

A MIGHTY EFFORT.

WHAT OUR REPRESENTATIVES SAW.

A very interesting account of his travels in England and elsewhere was given to a representative of the "Herald" by Mr. P. M'M. Glynn, who, with other members of the Parliamentary party, returned to Sydney yesterday.

"In the finance of war, in instant and sustained naval effectiveness, and the development of army organisation," said Mr. Glynn, "the mother country has shown that it only requires to be roused by a great emergency to stand the sternest and most searching test of circumstance. Though from April 1 to July 22, 1916, the average expenditure has been £5,000,000 a day, of which £1,500,000 represents advances, chiefly in material, to the Allies and the Dominions, there was no appearance of strain. The raising of a field army from about 130,000 to the number now at the front was not the only miracle of organisation. The transport of supplies across the sea, of enormous quantities of material—coal, stone for roads, thousands of tons of metal, munitions, etc.—was a remarkable manifestation of enterprise and organisation. We saw scores of thousands of troops in training. We saw a splendid array of aeroplanes. I went up in a machine presented by the Malay States, and within an hour it had started for the front in France.

MAKING OF MUNITIONS.

"The production of munitions and other material at places we visited in Great Britain was remarkable. In the first works inspected were 5200 employees, of whom 600 were young women—making motors, aeroplanes, armoured cars, shell cases, and what not. In another munition factory run by the Government through company management, 300 men and 4000 women were employed in turning out 60lb shells. There was one army factory with 10,000 employees. The girls were healthy and cheerful, and were doing skilled work in places. In the different works of one company alone in the United Kingdom 61,000 men and 14,000 women are employed.

"The great shipyard rang with preparation. Vessels of all sizes and types—some of dimensions and class that would astonish—were at various stages, from the laying of the keel to readiness for sea. Great turrets of 150 tons weight were lifted in two or three minutes through openings in a shed roof to the ship outside. It was wonderful. Ireland, too, was contributing in shipbuilding and munition-making. Everywhere the men and women were working as if with a sense that upon the output of munitions depended the date and the decisiveness of victory for the Allies.

BRITAIN'S MIGHTY FLEET.

"The spectacle of the fleets at the northern bases was at once an assurance and an inspiration. We were received by Admiral Sir David Beatty on the Lion, which looked none the worse for her dashing experience in the North Sea. From the flagship we went to H.M.A.S. Australia, and we found everything in the best trim and everybody in the best temper. Vessels of all sorts, visible evidence of the supremacy of British sea-power, were near. But it was at the northern base that the tremendous naval strength of Britain was most apparent. Resolution, efficiency, readiness, and vigilance were everywhere to be seen. We met Sir John Jellicoe on the Iron Duke—a man of composed and of quiet, simple bearing, contrasting with the sharp, eager, dashing appearance of Sir David Beatty.

WONDERFUL FRANCE.

"And then—France. France, visited in the middle of July, is still the France of history, of ardent temper, splendid resourcefulness, and unconquerable hope. The French fight with the confidence of men who feel that the victory and its results will compensate for their sacrifices and sufferings. The President and the Premier, at receptions in Paris, paid a tribute to the work done by the British, and spoke in feeling terms of the association of the French and Dominion troops as comrades on the battlefields of France. We were at the front, near Armentieres, the second day after the attack by the Australians on the German trenches in the neighbourhood. Our boys fought, as they always do—like men. They took the German trenches upon which they were ordered to advance. I saw many of the wounded. 'I hope,' said a Red Cross boy to me, as I knelt chatting to a young fellow from South Australia, who had been hit in the side and lay two nights on No Man's Land, 'that the work done by this brigade will not be forgotten.' About a week after my wife and I spent a day in a London hospital with some of the wounded from Pozieres. They need not fear that Australia will forget what they have done for her sake and the cause of the Allies. One feels more than ever proud to be an Australian. One cannot envy the feelings of a man of physical fitness who, when this great struggle is referred to hereafter, will not be able to say he was with them at the time."

CANADA'S SHARE.

Referring to Canada's contribution in men, Mr. Glynn said: "Canada, by September, had raised about 350,000 men, of whom 210,000 had been despatched to England and the front. The number at the front, is, of course, less than the total despatched, as training is continued in England. Some six months ago the Dominion Premier declares that it was intended to raise 500,000 men, but as far as I could ascertain the enlistments were about 150,000 short of the half million. The proportionate enlistments are greatest in the western provinces; but as most of the men who attested were not born in Canada, and immigration is least into the French provinces, the shortages in Quebec and Ontario are not altogether due, as some say, to the comparative meagreness of response by Canadians of French descent. In some places, such as Winnipeg, a modern and busy city of over 200,000 inhabitants, of whom about 70,000 are Austrian Ruthenes, there are many races. At Camp Hughes, near Winnipeg, some of the 22,000 men there were pure Indian. Apart from raising men, however, Canada is producing munitions, and a special small craft of submarine destroyers."

TROOPS IN CAMP.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S PRAISE.

"KIND OF MEN WANTED."

The Governor-General, Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson, spent yesterday at the military camp, Liverpool. He was accompanied by General Foster, chief of the General Staff (Commonwealth military) and by Capt. Firth, A.D.C. He was met at the station by Colonel Lamrock, camp commandant, and Major McFarlane and staff. At headquarters he was met by Colonel Miller, commandant of camps in New South Wales, and Capt. F. Smith, camp adjutant. He inspected a guard of honour at the station, and was present at a parade and march past of reinforcements at Moorbank-avenue.

At the inspection, his Excellency, after paying a tribute to the efficiency of the men, said:—"I am delighted to hear that the conduct of all in the camp has been of the highest standard. Liverpool to-day is a temperate kind of place to what it was in January. It has become much more of a military camp, and it has become so because here, as elsewhere, it has been realised that this war is no picnic. It is a long stand, and one which will test all our best qualities before the issue is decided. I am also glad to know that, after parade hours, officers, non-commissioned officers, and men no longer make it their main business to get out of camp as quickly as possible, but make the necessary self-denial to master their profession. It is a test above all of those who are really efficient, and who can exercise a good influence. It is by their example that a high standard is set. When the right man sets the right standard there is no difficulty in having that standard maintained. I have seen many camps and have seen different standards of excellence, or the reverse, but I can tell you, and I do it with joy, that the standard of discipline—although Liverpool could always make a good performance—has immensely improved, and I can see in you the kind of men that are wanted in the need of the Empire and of his Majesty's Allies. It gives us all who see you confidence that those who have already fought so excellently at the front will never want for succour and reinforcement as long as the war continues. As your conduct in camp has been good, so I am sure that in France, the first of all military nations, you will maintain the respect and regard of our Allies for the high position won for Australia by our comrades in arms."

SHOOTING AFFAIR.

SOLDIER SERIOUSLY HURT.

At about 10.30 last night a shooting affair occurred at the entrance of the Crystal Palace side-shows, in George-street, city. It is believed a dispute occurred, as a result of which Private John S. Jones (23) received a serious bullet wound in the left groin. The Civil Ambulance conveyed him to the Sydney Hospital.

The police report states that an altercation occurred between a showman in charge of a stall and a soldier. They came to blows, and fell against the printing press. Another showman rushed downstairs, and, pointing a revolver at a soldier, cried, "Let that man alone," and immediately fired a shot. The crowd had by this time fallen back, and Jones staggered and fell in the centre of the floor. The two showmen then walked behind the bootblack's platform, and one of them blew a whistle.

A number of police soon arrived, and the two showmen were taken to the Central Police Station, where they were charged with shooting with intent to murder. One was further charged with assault.

One of the showmen subsequently made a statement to the police, in which he said that about eight weeks ago "this same crowd" threatened him, and he told them he would "use his gun" on them. He then complained to the police, who promised to send plainclothes men to watch.

At an early hour this morning Private Jones was in a critical condition.

LATE SHIPPING.

U.S.A. PRESIDENT.

CANDIDATES' CHANCES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.

Even money is now offered on the Presidential election, which takes place on November 7. The early odds were two to one against Dr. Wilson, the Democratic candidate.

This almost unpredecented change in public sentiment is attributed chiefly to the unwillingness of Mr. Hughes, the Republican candidate, to discuss German-American issues.

Mr. Roosevelt is not sparing his attacks, and it is thought that he is trying to swing the pro-Allies' vote towards Mr. Hughes. He incessantly criticises Dr. Wilson, and especially his foreign policy. Pro-Allies' sentiment inclines towards Dr. Wilson, not because of German-American attacks, or because Berlin hopes for Mr. Hughes's return, but because Dr. Wilson's foreign policy is known, and that of Mr. Hughes is not known. Wall-street supports Mr. Hughes, who promises a higher tariff. Dr. Wilson's decision in favour of an eight hours' day has brought him strong labour support.

WHEAT FREIGHTS.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

"Fairplay" says:—Some shipowners expect a freight of 150s for wheat from Australia, bu. all that is known at present is that the rate will exceed the Blue Book rates. Some quarters consider that 120s is highly probable.

JAM FOR THE ARMY.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

The War Office has let contracts for the supply of 20,250,000lb of Australian jam for the season 1917, of which the Australasian Jam Company (Melbourne) has secured 7,750,000lb; the Cockatoo Company (Melbourne), 1,500,000lb, Jones and Co. (Hobart), 7,750,000lb; the Stanmore Company (Sydney), 1,500,000lb; and Taylor Brothers (Sydney), 1,500,000lb.

£2,000,000 DAILY.

FOR AMERICAN MUNITIONS.

LONDON, Oct. 19.

Replying in the House of Commons to some criticisms on the issue of 6 per cent. bonds, on the ground that such unnecessarily high rate of interest depreciated the war loan, Mr. M'Kenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that one of the main objects in offering a good rate of interest was that the security should be held abroad. He had to find £2,000,000 for the United States every working day, otherwise he would be forced to cut down absolutely essential supplies.

The general financial opinion was that it was a bad time to issue a long-dated loan. He would ask sanction for a loan, but the Treasury must be the judges of the best time for the issue.

FINANCIAL.

SOME ARRANGEMENT DESIRABLE.

The proposal of the directors of the Kampong Kamunting Tin Dredging Company, which operates in the Federated Malay Straits, and which is registered in Sydney, the bulk of the shareholders being domiciled Australians, to put the company into voluntary liquidation, with the object of disposing of the property to another company, to be registered in the Malay Straits, is one of the most interesting and instructive developments of the war taxation. The directors freely admit that their chief objective is to avoid the multiplication of taxes. Now, what is the position and what are the principles to be applied? Is this a typical case that calls for special treatment at the hands of the Legislature? Were we in error when last week we asserted that much locally situated wealth could not be removed abroad, and that the idea of capital fleeing the country was to that extent a myth? Is it not possible as the law now stands for any locally-registered company to do what the Kampong Kamunting Company now proposes to do, and so remove itself beyond the reach of the local taxing authorities? Could not the Bank of New South Wales, for example, go into voluntary liquidation, resell to another company registered, say in Guam, and thus avoid all taxation save such as might be imposed by the authorities of Guam, if such there be? These and kindred questions naturally arise, and they are worthy of discussion. They represent what is really a very important Empire problem.

First, let us state the facts. Companies registered in Sydney may have either of the following characters:—

1. They may be controlled in Sydney, and may have all their assets and carry on the whole of their operations in New South Wales.

2. They may be controlled in Sydney, but may operate and have their assets partly within and partly without New South Wales.

3. They may be controlled in New South Wales, but may have substantially the whole of their assets abroad.

It is conceivable that different principles of taxation might justly be applied according to whether a company belonged to one or other of these classes. Clearly, if a company were registered in New South Wales, and had the whole of its assets in New South Wales, and the bulk of its shareholders were domiciled in New South Wales, neither company nor shareholders could well escape the clutches of the New South Wales Commissioner for Taxation, or, New South Wales being part of the Commonwealth of Australia, of the clutches of the Federal Commissioner of Taxation. At the same time, neither the company nor its shareholders would, in these circumstances, have any fear of being dragged within the jurisdiction of any other taxing authority. But even were a company so registered, so controlled, and so confined in its operations to the State of New South Wales, that would not free an English shareholder from having to pay the English income tax on his dividends, and the English succession duty on his interest upon his death. But if the positions were reversed, and such a company were registered in London, and carried on its operations solely in the United Kingdom but had some Australian shareholders, these latter would have to pay English, but not Australian, income taxation, and the company would have to pay on their behalf English war-time profits taxation. In other words, the Australian taxing Acts are restricted in their operation. The English Acts have a much wider scope. This is one of the causes of the much-complained-of double taxation.

Or a company may fall within class 2. That is, it may carry on local and foreign operations. The Bank of New South Wales is a typical case in point. It operates in every State of the Commonwealth, in New Zealand, in Fiji, as well as in London and in Papua. It—or its shareholders, as the case may be—is subject to New South Wales taxation to the extent of New South Wales profits only; to Commonwealth taxation as to Commonwealth profits; to New Zealand taxation as to New Zealand profits, and so on. Were each of these taxing authorities to claim a right to tax upon all profits, its business could not be carried on as at present.

Or a company may belong to class 3—that is, it may be controlled and substantially owned in New South Wales, but may carry on the major part of its operations abroad, and have the bulk of its assets abroad. An illustration of this is the Kampong Kamunting Company. Such a company, or its shareholders, is subject to certain State, Federal, and Malay taxation, which conjointly may be very heavy. If it can succeed in changing its domicile to the Malay Straits, as the law now stands both it and (though this is doubtful) its shareholders will escape State and Federal taxes, but would still be subject to Malay taxes, if any, and this evasion is clearly the object of the proposed change.

Now, let the ethics of the case be considered in as detached a way as is possible. Taxation may be imposed for two purposes: (1) For the carrying on of ordinary Government functions, and (2) for the purposes of war. Should a locally resident shareholder in the Kampong Kamunting Company, whose interest was worth, say, £1000 a year, be permitted to escape either? As to the former, he receives all the benefits, such as they are, of Government protection, the police guard his house from burglary, his children may receive their education at the State schools free of cost. Surely he should pay for these privileges, just as other citizens pay! As to the latter, his property in the Malay Straits and in Australia also, and his person in Australia, are protected by our army and the British navy, of which the Australian fleet is an integral part. Should he not pay for this? True, he may have to pay war taxes in the Malay Straits where his chief assets are, and it would perhaps be unfair to ask him to pay twice. He has only one lot of property, and only one life to be protected; therefore, he should have to pay no more than one lot of war taxes. This is an important principle of taxation, and one that is liable to be overlooked. As to the duty of the company which is not merely the aggregate of a lot of Australians, but includes Malayans, Englishmen, and New Zealanders, that is quite another question. The whole subject of intra-Empire taxation should be carefully studied, and steps should be taken for the prevention of harmful overlapping. No one should be allowed to escape; but no one should be unduly imposed upon by competing taxing authorities. To permit the one would be quixotical; to allow the other, rank tyranny.

Having carefully considered the position of the shareholders in the Kampong Kamunting Company in their relationship to the proposed wartime profits tax, we have come to the conclusion that in lieu of a definite promise from the Government that their case should be specially provided for, the directors are absolutely justified in the action they propose to take, and, indeed, it is their duty to do so. At the same time, it is undesirable that companies should be forced to leave Australia in this way, and so it behoves the Government to give immediate and binding assurances that fair treatment will be meted out to them. If foreign registration is actually resorted to, it will relieve Malayan, and New Zealand shareholders from treble taxation, and in the case of English shareholders of fourfold taxation, but, seemingly, will not admit of Australian shareholders avoiding their responsibilities. As to the latter point, till a certain section of the bill is judicially interpreted, there is some doubt. The next move should come from the Treasurer.

MARCUS CLARK AND CO.

The report of the above company covers the 12 months ended July 29. It shows that trade improved, despite freight difficulties, high costs, and increased taxation. A net profit of £33,891 is shown, and dividends similar to those previously declared are recommended, with £10,000 to the reserve fund, and £15,000 off goodwill account, which is now extinguished. *During this year the £18,844 carried forward from last account was allocated as follows:—£8000 to reserve fund, £10,000 to write off goodwill, £844 carried forward.

The shareholders met yesterday, Mr. R. M. Clark, managing director, presiding. The chairman said that he felt that shareholders had reason to be satisfied with the excellent statement of affairs and the fine results attained during the past year, notwithstanding the troublous times. The goodwill has now disappeared from the accounts, and a new reserve fund for the equalisation of dividends has been provided to meet any possible depression due to the after effects of the war. A dividend at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum was declared, and £735 was carried forward to next year. The report was unanimously adopted. Mr. Frank Grimley was unanimously re-elected a director of the company, and Messrs. Bowes and Craig were re-elected auditors for the current year.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The tea auction yesterday proved satisfactory to the vendors. Competition was strong for all teas showing quality. Ceylons offered numbered 415 packages, and all were sold, prices ranging up to 14d. Only one line of the Javas offered was disposed of. Importers are not now bringing tea from Java, in consequence of the guarantee required. Cables, however, from that centre state that supplies are falling off, and that sellers are firm. The Indian market at the Calcutta auction on Tuesday was excited, Russian representatives purchasing heavily. Prices showed an advance of a half-penny a pound on the rates of a fortnight ago. In the local market there has been a fair sale of teas out of the Medina, which arrived last week, up to 16d. Of the Indians out of the Umta all good liquoring Assams were sold, realising up to 16½d. There has been some demand for Kooloos.

The metal markets remain lifeless. Inquiries made in Melbourne regarding the fixing of tinplate prices have met with no success. The delay is seriously hindering business.

Oils were more active yesterday than they have been for a week past. Cables received from London quoted Blundell, Spence's raw linseed at 3/4 f.o.b., an advance of 2d, and this led to some buying on the part of merchants at higher rates than had ruled all the week. About 700 drums changed hands at prices ranging up to 5/2 for raw, and 5/4 for boiled. On yesterday's cabled price the landed cost would be at least 5/9 a gallon. More inquiry was noted for whitelead, but the business done was not of great extent. No alteration in the rates occurred. Calcutta cabled an increase of 1½d in the cost of castor oil. Some buying took place on the local market, the local product selling at 4/5 a gallon, and imported lines at 4/6. China oil had business at 6/9, and whale oil at 3/.

Chemicals were again quiet. Carbide was easy at £36, though small lots of a special brand were quitted at £32. Caustic soda of 70/72 per cent. was quoted up to £36, but the fact that no business went the way of those quotations would seem to prove that the chemical was still to be obtained at £33. For 76/77 per cent. the lowest quotation was £36. A little rosin changed hands for export, mostly G grade, at £20/10/. For N grade an additional £2 was paid.

Cornsacks continued to attract attention yesterday, and a good business was done in October and November deliveries at 9/4 net to rails. December delivery was offered at 9/3 net. There was little or no demand for woolpacks or branbags, which were quoted at 3/11 and 7/10½ net respectively.

LONDON METAL QUOTATIONS.

DAIRY.

The scheme devised in Melbourne to "pool" the butter supplies, in order to overcome the difficulties which have been caused by the action of the Commonwealth Government in restricting prices, has been adopted by all the producing States. Operators believe that the scheme will cause a minimum amount of friction.

BRISBANE WOOL SALES.

The Brisbane Wool-selling Brokers' Association wires that at the third day's sales in this week's series of Brisbane wool auctions, held on Thursday, 15,000 bales were offered, making a total of 46,400 bales for the three days. A good selection of both greasies and scoureds was offered. Competition for all well-grown shafty wools was keen, but in the case of short, faulty, and burry wools there was irregular bidding. There was no demand for faulty greasy skirtings, and withdrawals of those descriptions were heavy. Scoured wools maintained their position well. The market closed with prices at 5 per cent. lower for good greasies, and 5 to 10 per cent. lower for medium and faulty greasies, as compared with the rates in force at the Brisbane September sales. The highest price for greasies on Thursday was /23, for Clifford/Queensland, grown by Taylor's Estates Company, Limited, Cecil Plains, Dalby, and for scoureds /39½, for GDL/Cassilis, grown by G. D. Lowe, Cassilis, Richmond, and scoured by Ladbury, Carrar.

MINING.

VALUES IMPROVING.

Yesterday's mining market may be described as both a "bear" and a "bull" one. In the morning prices were on the downward grade; in the afternoon they took an unaccountable turn for the better, and went up. In the copper division Hampdens opened 4½d cheaper than they were on Thursday night, and remained at that figure. No sales of this stock were made in the afternoon. Mount Morgans were steady at the price they reached a fortnight ago. British Broken Hill silver stocks opened in the forenoon 6d lower than the overnight price, and recovered 3d in the afternoon. Broken Hill Proprietaries recovered 6d after lunch.

But the feature of the day was furnished by Edna May Deep Levels. They opened weak, and continued to weaken all the forenoon. Then they rose. The words "ex rights" appeared in front of the announcement of a sale, and the secret of the rise came out. An official telegram had been received from Melbourne to the effect that the directors had secured the underwriting of £10,000 worth of 8 per cent. debentures with two years' currency, for 2½ per cent. commission. The purchasers were to have the right to convert the debentures into shares at 25/ each at any time during the first nine months. In the first instance the shares are to be offered to the shareholders, giving them priority, and any not applied for by them will go to the underwriters. Weeks ago it was announced that a new issue of shares was to be offered to existing shareholders at 25/ each, but the market price of the stock having afterwards fallen below that figure, it was felt that there would be a difficulty in getting them off. The new development has removed the difficulty for the time, at any rate. Edna May Central shares also hardened during the afternoon, and in tin companies, where more than one sale of a scrip was recorded, the prices were on the ascending scale.

MOTOR CAR FATALITY.

Whilst crossing the road at the corner of Jackson and Alfred streets, North Sydney, on Thursday afternoon, Henry Arthur Edinborough (8), who resided at 142 Arthur-street, North Sydney, was knocked down and run over by a motor car. He was carried to Dr. Isbister's residence nearby, where he was attended to. The Civil Ambulance then conveyed him to the Royal North Shore Hospital, where he died about four hours after being admitted.

SOCIETY OF ARTISTS.

At a meeting of the Society of Artists it was decided to hold an exhibition of pictures in the society's galleries (Queen Victoria Markets). "Sending-in" day will be November 13, and the show will open about a week later.

POLLING ARRANGEMENTS.

ABSENT VOTING.

There are several important provisions relating to the referendum which electors will do well to bear in mind. In this State the Government has decided to proclaim Referendum Day—October 28—a public holiday.

POLLING HOURS.

The hours of polling will be from 8 a.m. till 8 p.m.

ABSENT VOTING.

Special attention is drawn to the regulations in regard to "absent" voting. The law provides that any elector who on polling day will not be within the subdivision for which he or she is enrolled, under conditions which would permit of voting at any polling place prescribed for that subdivision, may vote at any other polling-place in the Commonwealth as an absent voter.

Electors who have reason to believe that on polling day they will not be within any Commonwealth electoral division may, up to 6 p.m. on October 27, attend at the office of any Commonwealth electoral registrar, and vote before him as an absent voter.

All absent voters will be required to sign a declaration.

It is the duty of all electors who can do so to vote at the polling-places within the subdivision for which they are enrolled.

Absent voters should arm themselves with information as to the divisions—and, if possible, the subdivisions—for which they are enrolled, for they will be required to make a statement in this regard in their declarations. If they state incorrectly the name of the division for which they are enrolled, their votes will not be effective, for these ballot papers will be forwarded to the returning officers of the various divisions, and if the statements made do not tally with the rolls the votes will be rejected.

NO POSTAL VOTE.

The postal vote has been abolished, and no person can record a vote without attending personally at the polling booth.

RETURNED SOLDIERS.

It is provided that on polling day a returned member of the Australian Expeditionary Forces, who is of the full age of 21 years, and who was unable to secure enrolment before the closing of the rolls on September 18, may vote as an absent voter before a presiding officer at any convenient polling place on making a declaration embodying a statement as to rank or designation, number and unit, and, if discharged, place of discharge.

Included in this regulation are members of the Army Medical Corps and the Nursing Service, provided they are 21 years of age and otherwise eligible for enrolment.

FEDERAL CAPITAL AND OTHER TERRITORIES.

A new departure is the taking of the votes of persons living within the Federal capital territory, and who are not entitled to vote at the general elections. Mr. J. G. M'Laren, Chief Commonwealth Electoral Officer in New South Wales, is the returning officer for the Federal territory. A list has been compiled containing the names of about 1500 eligible persons, and there will be 15 polling-places within the territory.

Furthermore, the Military Service Act specifies that persons in the Northern Territory, Papua, and Norfolk Islands, shall be entitled to vote, so long as they possess the ordinary qualifications of electors. The mere fact that a man is living there does not entitle him to vote. These places do not form a portion of the territory of any State, and are not in any Commonwealth electoral division.

In regard to Lord Howe Island the case is different. This island is part of the East Sydney division, and arrangements have been made for a poll to be taken there, though, possibly not more than 40 votes will be recorded. In order to avoid any undue delay, the electoral authorities have arranged with Burns, Philp, and Co., to defer the sailing of their steamer, which was to have left Lord Howe Island on the 26th inst., until after the close of the polling on the 28th. The votes will be counted in Sydney. In the case of the Northern Territory, Papua, and Norfolk Island, however, the votes will be counted on the spot.

THE COUNTING.

There are 1,050,000 electors enrolled in New South Wales, and there will be over 2700 polling places in the State. The counting will not be done at each polling place. It will be conducted at selected centres by assistant returning officers, the ballot-boxes being taken thither from the smaller places. There are slightly over 400 counting centres, and when the count has been made the assistant returning officer in each centre will advise the divisional returning officer (there are 27 divisions in the State), and the latter will forward the totals for and against to Mr. M'Laren, the Commonwealth Returning Officer in Sydney. Thus there will be no overlapping. And as there is only one ballot paper on this occasion the scrutiny should be conducted with reasonable expedition.

APPOINTMENT OF SCRUTINEERS.

The powers of appointment of scrutineers conferred by the Act are being exercised, both by the Governor-General, and by the members of Parliament not in favour of the prescribed question. In New South Wales Mr. Hector Lamond has been authorised to make appointments on behalf of the Governor-General, and Mr. J. H. Catts on behalf of the members of Parliament not in favour of the question. One important thing should be remembered; not more than one scrutineer may be appointed to represent either side at any polling place, irrespective of the number of subdivisions of a booth.

DISQUALIFIED PERSONS.

The Military Service Referendum Act disqualifies from voting any naturalised British subjects who were born in any place which forms part of the territory of any country with which Great Britain is now at war, unless such subjects can produce to the presiding officer a certificate by the district commandant, or other authorised officer, that they are parents of persons who have been, or are, members of the expeditionary forces.

The presiding officer has the right to challenge any person whom he has reason to believe is disqualified on the ground stated. He does so by putting a question to him directly asking whether the person in question was born in a country now forming part of the territory of the enemy. In the case of any person answering this question in the negative, the ballot paper handed to him will be marked "section 9," and when he has marked it he must return it to the presiding officer, who will enclose it in an envelope, endorsed "section 9." After the close of the polling the ballot papers marked by such persons will be held in suspense until one of the tribunals appointed under the Act has decided whether or not these persons are, in the opinion of the tribunal, "disloyal." The tribunal may form its opinion on the matter in any manner it thinks fit.

VOTERS WHO HAVE BEEN "CALLED UP."

The question has been asked, Can the presiding officer at any polling booth, who may suspect a man desiring to vote of being in the class called up by the Defence Proclamation, and having failed to report himself to the authorities, challenge the voter to produce his exemption paper? This, however, it is pointed out, is no part of the business of the electoral officers; it is a matter entirely for the military authorities.

DECEASED SOLDIERS' EFFECTS.

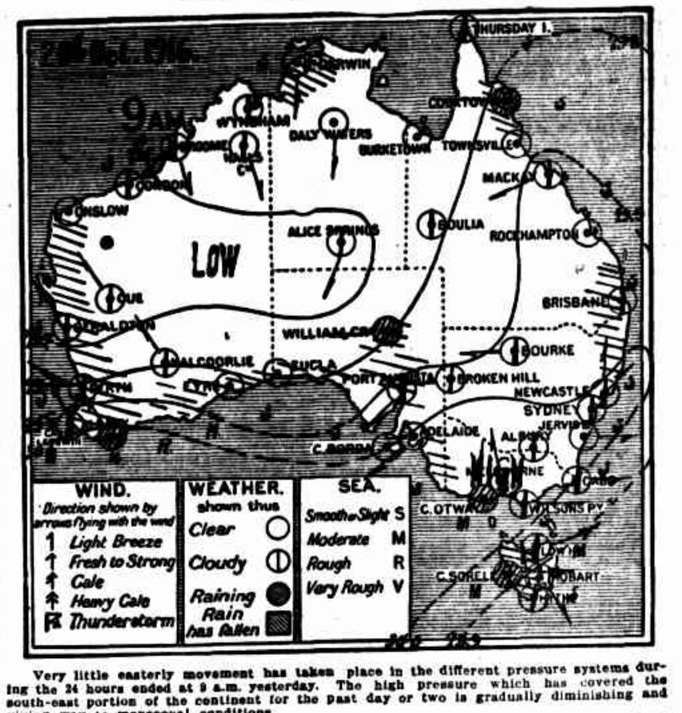
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



Very little easterly movement has taken place in the different pressure systems during the 24 hours ended at 9 a.m. yesterday. The high pressure which has covered the south-east portion of the continent for the past day or two is gradually diminishing and giving way to monsoonal conditions.

The tropical disturbance which has been causing the heavy rain on our North Coast has now shifted to the north-east, and is at present between Brisbane and Norfolk Island.

The whole of the continent, with the exception of the south-east quadrant, is under monsoonal control, and we may therefore expect warm and sultry weather generally, with northerly winds, and later rain over the greater part of the State.

THE SAILERS STERLING.

The 4-m. bqtne. E. R. Sterling and the 3-m. sch. Ethel M. Sterling (ex J. M. Wetherwax) are about to leave Newcastle for Galice (Chili) and Callao (Peru) respectively. An interesting circumstance is that the former vessel will be commanded by Captain E. R. Sterling, a very well-known mariner, whilst the newly-named schooner will be in charge of his son, Captain Ray Sterling, who is 22 years of age, the youngest skipper sailing under the American flag. The vessels will later visit the Pacific Coast, and the E. R. Sterling has a lumber engagement for a return voyage to Sydney. It is possible that the schooner will be similarly placed.

E. AND A. STEAMERS.

The steamer Eastern sailed from Hongkong on October 12, en route from Kobe and Moji to Sydney and Melbourne, via Queensland ports. She is due at Sydney on October 30.

The St. Albans left Thursday Island on October 9, bound for Manila, Hongkong, Moji, and Kobe. She will sail from Kobe on November 1 for Sydney and Melbourne, via Moji, Hongkong, and Queensland ports.

A JAPANESE OFFER.

A good deal of curiosity has been expressed recently (writes "Fairplay" of August 31) as to the identity of the British owner who was reported to have offered the Australian Government half a dozen 11,000-ton deadweight steamers. After making numerous inquiries I now find that the reports published were incorrect, in as far as the vessels offered were Japanese steamers, while the price demanded was such as to place them quite outside practical politics. To pay between £350,000 and £450,000 for boats which could, before the war, have been bought for £100,000, is a proposition which might interest a Monte Cristo but would hardly appeal to a business Government.

DEATH OF MR. J. PERCY HUNT.

Mr. J. Percy Hunt, who was general manager for the firm of Messrs. Washington H. Soul, Pattinson and Co., died yesterday afternoon, at his residence, Baroonda, Douglas-street, Randwick, after a short illness. Mr. Hunt was well known in Sydney business circles. He was also identified with the Congregational Church. The deceased, who was 45 years of age, leaves a widow and seven children. He was a brother of Mr. Atlee Hunt, present Federal Secretary for External Affairs.

SECRET DISEASES.

NEED FOR EDUCATION.

Professor D. A. Welsh, in the course of a lecture before the delegates to the Y.M.C.A. Convention last night on the social question and post-war problems, said the inquiries of commissions in England and Australia had left no doubt as to the calamitous effects of venereal disease on the human race. They voiced a protest from outraged motherhood, from innocent children, and from those yet unborn. There must be no shrinking from the work of overcoming the evil, said the Professor. It must be recognised that there was nothing degrading in a knowledge of the facts of sex. Candour and openness in connection with the primary facts of life would never offend decent men and women, or even children. Perverted sense of delicacy often degenerated into prudery and intolerance, and the only way to overcome it was by education. Ignorance was excusable, but there was no excuse for indifference, and there must be a closer co-operation between religious bodies and medical and educative authorities if the conspiracy of silence was to be overcome.

WAR CONDITIONS IN BRITAIN.

AUSTRALIAN DELEGATES RETURN.

THE BOYS IN THE TRENCHES.

Nine members of the Australian Parliamentary party that has been visiting Europe returned by the Makura yesterday. The party formed portion of the Dominion's delegation, which consisted of 32 members, Canada and Australia sending 10 each. The Australians were: Messrs. David Watkins, of Newcastle (chairman), R. B. Orchard (of Sydney), A. C. Palmer (Victoria), J. Thomas (Broken Hill), P. M. Glynn (South Australia), R. J. Burchell (Western Australia), A. J. Hampson (Victoria), and Senators Barker (Victoria), de Largie (Western Australia), and Keating (Tasmania). Senator Keating is returning via Suez. The party arrived in England on July 6.

Mr. Watkins, who acted as chairman and secretary, stated that they had had a busy and valuable trip. "We went," he said, "to learn something of the British war organisation. We heard from Sir William Robertson a full statement of the position of the Allies at the outbreak of the war and the position to-day, after which we were taken and shown all the munition works in the various parts of England. We were astonished at the organisation. Acres of new buildings have been erected, and thousands of machines installed.

"One thing that struck us particularly was the way the women had stepped into the breach. They were working among engineers who accepted the position, feeling that they were only working under these conditions for the war, and till that was over must do all they could to help towards victory."

Mr. Watkins said the party afterwards went to the front, and were received in France by the President and by the Premier (M. Briand). On the French front they saw the damage that had been done to the buildings at Senlis by the Germans, and from there were conducted to that portion of the front under General Humbert. French soldiers about to relieve others in the trenches appeared cheerful and confident. On the British front the party saw some Australians who had just been in action. "The name that the Australians have got as a fighting unit has not been given just to please Australia," said Mr. Watkins, "but has been thoroughly earned. There is no better fighting force in the field. They have done everything that has been asked of them from time to time. Everywhere we found the spirit of cheerfulness, and they are all imbued with the one idea, that they are there to win the war."

"On returning via Boulogne, we made inquiries as to where the Australian wounded were taken, and the general who had charge of our party informed us that many were sent straight through to London. We had four hours to wait for our boat at Boulogne, and it was only when we were back in England that we learned that there were two hospitals in Boulogne containing wounded Australians, whom we would have liked to visit. I mention this incident lest it should be thought our party neglected an opportunity of looking up some of the lads who were wounded. Individual members took every opportunity of visiting the hospitals in England. It is, however, a very difficult thing to find any particular soldier, for Australians are being looked after in 2000 hospitals in various parts of England."

In England shipbuilding yards were visited, members being astonished at the activity shown. One firm was finishing a boat per month. Battleships were in course of construction, which will have greater speed, heavier guns, and stronger armour than any existing warship. The battle cruiser squadron of the Grand Fleet was visited, and the party met both Admiral Beatty and Admiral Jellicoe. Experience such as flying and going down in submarines fell to the lot of certain individuals, the members ballotting for the honour. Senator De Largie and Mr. Glynn flew in aeroplanes, Senator Barker went down in a submarine, and Mr. Palmer ascended in a captive balloon close to the battle front.

In London the party had several informal conferences with members of the British Parliament, the subjects discussed being Constitutional reform, immigration, India and the Empire, trade within the Empire after the war, and the future of the army and navy. The party went through Canada on their way back. Members highly appreciated the whole-hearted way in which the British authorities took them into their confidence, and felt that the trip had been a most valuable one.

A WAR OF SHELLS.

Senator Barker said the experience of a lifetime had been crowded into one short trip. He had the privilege of being the one from the Australian group to go into the firing line, and was within about 250 yards of the German trenches. He had the experience of firing a French 75 at the Germans, and was given the case of the shell as a souvenir. "This is a war of shells," he said; "in one small portion of the line they were firing for 24 hours, and used 60,000 shells. They speak nowadays not of firing so many shells, but so many tons of shells."

THE CAMPS.

Mr. Orchard said that while in England he was particularly interested in the arrangements at the various camps and the hospitals. "As far as camps are concerned," he said, "we in Australia have a great deal to learn. The great camp at Salisbury Plain is a tremendous affair. Camp life is made as attractive as possible, and there is the minimum amount of waste as far as the feeding of the troops is concerned. I have come back strongly convinced that to keep troops for a lengthy period in Australia is unwise, and economically unsound. We found that men who had been in training in Australia for four or five months were practically only at the stage that is reached in the second month at Salisbury Plains. Conditions of warfare are continually changing, and in England the instruction can be adapted at once. It would be possible, of course, to send instructors out here, but the opinion expressed by the military heads is that only elementary training is necessary in Australia."

As regards the hospitals, Mr. Orchard said the men spoke most highly of the manner in which their needs were attended to. The British aristocracy were keeping open doors for the men who had reached convalescence. More Australian nurses, however, were wanted in the various hospitals, as it meant a great deal to a wounded man if he was looked after by someone from his homeland. This in no way reflected on the English nurses, of whom everyone spoke most highly, but was a matter of sentiment.

D.S.O.

Mr. J. Fitzmaurice, principal of Abbotsholme College, Killara, has received a cable stating that his first cousin, the Rev. William Herbert Fitzmaurice, M.A., has been awarded the D.S.O. for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. He assisted the medical officer in tending the wounded under heavy fire, regardless of his own safety. He remained for 24 hours after the battalion had been withdrawn, and assisted to rescue the wounded who were lying out. He is a brother of Sir Maurice Fitzmaurice, the eminent engineer.

SWEDISH POLITICS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your esteemed paper of the 19th instant, under the above heading, there is a resume of differences between Great Britain and Sweden, and in this connection I beg to mention:—

(1) That the detention in Sweden of the parcel mails from Great Britain to Russia was the outcome of a similar action on the part of the British Government with regard to similar mails from America to Sweden.

(2) Regarding Sweden's refusal to accept the conditions imposed by Great Britain on Anglo-Swedish trade, this, I presume, refers principally to incorrect statements in certain papers to the effect that the Swedish Government had forbidden Swedish merchants to give guarantees that goods imported from the United Kingdom should not be re-exported to the enemies of Great Britain. On the contrary, the Swedish Trade Law of April 17 last sanctions the following complete guarantee:—

"We hereby declare that if license is granted. . . . for. . . . bought from. . . . weight. . . . value. . . . . neither this consignment nor any part thereof, nor any goods manufactured therefrom, shall be exported in any form or under any pretext to any country now at war with Great Britain.

"Further, that I/we will not resell the goods or any goods manufactured therefrom without satisfying myself/ourselves that they will not be exported to any country at war with Great Britain.

"I/we recognise that any infringement of this guarantee will involve the refusal of further licenses."

I am, etc.,
VON GOES,
Oct. 20. Consul-in-Chief for Sweden.

NEW CAMP HALL.

OPENED BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

The new Presbyterian Soldiers' Institute, at the military camp, Liverpool, was opened yesterday by the Governor-General, who said that the work of the different chaplains had helped to make Liverpool a far different camp to what it was in January last. The co-operation of the churches in Australia was admirable. It was one of the blessings of Australia that the churches had co-operated so well, and without friction. This war was a war against Christianity, and the churches were in the right place.

The Moderator-General said that the churches throughout the Empire had been foremost in encouraging the spirit of sacrifice at the call of King and country.

The Rev. Thomas Morgan said that every appeal the Church had made on behalf of the soldiers had met with a generous and ready response. Not a penny had been asked for from the soldiers themselves.

Colonel Miller, district inspector of the A.I.F. in the Second Military District, and as representative of General Ramaciotti, acknowledged the excellent services which had been rendered by the Church at the camp. As a result of the chaplaincy work there was a greater response to the military training, which was of most vital importance at the present time. Those who contributed to the erection, equipment, and maintenance of such a building were doing a great deal for the Empire.

The main hall of the new building is 60 feet by 38, and has seating accommodation for 600. It has been built on laminated principles, having no posts to obstruct the view from any section. A main feature is that the sides slide back on rollers in such a way as to allow the 10 feet wide encompassing verandahs to be used for additional seating accommodation. At the close of the formal opening the soldiers were entertained with refreshments and music.

ELECTROLYTIC ZINC.

TASMANIAN SCHEME.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is announced by the directors of Amalgamated Zinc (De Bavays, Ltd.), in their half-yearly report that the Electrolytic Zinc Company of Australasia Proprietary, Ltd., has completed an agreement with the Hydro-electric Department of Tasmania for the supply from the Great Lake scheme of up to an equivalent of 50,000 horse-power at £2 per horse-power a year for the production of electrolytic zinc. The first unit of the plant will have a capacity of between 10 and 11 tons of electrolytic zinc a day, and will call for 4000-h.p.; the cost of which will be £3 10s per horse-power a year; but will be reduced to £2 when the increased quantity is taken. The directors state that whilst they have definite assurances from their technical advisers as to the commercial soundness of the undertaking, they have felt it desirable to demonstrate the success of the investigations made before proceeding with the erection of the larger installation.

The Electrolytic Zinc Company is a separate organisation established by the Amalgamated Zinc Company to deal with the production of electrolytic zinc, with a capital of £1,000,000, in £1 shares.

AT THE FRONT.

LIEUT. T. M. SCOTT.

A private cable was received in Sydney yesterday, announcing that Thomas Maxwell Scott, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Scott, of Woollahra, had been gazetted on the field in France captain of the Royal Flying Corps, and had also been awarded the Military Cross for bravery. Captain Scott is a native of Sydney, and was educated at the Sydney Grammar School. He was a prominent athlete, and was long-distance champion of the school during his year, and was also a prominent player in the first fifteen of the school football team. At the conclusion of his education he entered his father's office in this city to adopt the profession of architecture, but on April 13, 1915, young Scott embarked for England to pass his examinations and to obtain his commission as lieutenant in the Royal Flying Corps, which he succeeded in doing, and on December 23 of last year he was sent to France with the corps, and he has been there ever since. A few weeks ago news was received that he had been promoted to first-lieutenant. His brother Kenneth is also in France, and is attached to the First Division of the Australian Artillery.

DRIVER WARD.

Driver G. Ward, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ward, of Warrego, Artarmon, has been congratulated by Major-General Sir H. V. Cox on his gallantry and devotion to duty on August 11, 1916, in assisting to bring up and deliver heavy trench mortar shells by tramway, the line being continually broken by shell fire.

SECOND-LIEUTENANT COLE.

Second-Lieut. Cole was also congratulated by General Cox for his gallantry in carrying wounded men to safety, and for his energetic and determined conduct on August 14.

TEACHERS' GUILD.

The annual meeting of the Teachers' Guild of New South Wales, which, after general business had been transacted, took the form of a social evening, was held in the Allora Rooms, Pitt-street, last night. Mrs. Garvin (Girls' High School) presided. The report of the hon. secretary, Miss Leplastrier, disclosed a membership roll at the close of the year of 163.

The Rev. C. J. Prescott moved that the guild appoint a deputation to wait upon the Minister for Education for the purpose of asking him to call a conference to consider the changes in secondary education rendered necessary or desirable by the war.

It was explained that in England preparations were already being made to meet the new education situation that would be created by the war.

Mr. A. H. S. Lucas proposed an amendment for the matter be referred to the council.

Mr. Prescott accepted the amendment, which was carried.

CONSCRIPTION.

A VOICE FROM THE TRENCHES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have received a letter from one of my mates at the front, an extract from which reads:—"While fighting over here for our King and dear old Australia, we are often buoyed up with the memory of the send-off we got in Sydney, many women and girls (unknown to us personally) shaking us by the hand and wishing us 'God speed and a safe return.' . . . I saw by an English journal the other day where a number of women are opposed to conscription. How is their wish for a 'safe return' to be consummated if they do not send us the necessary reinforcements? Are we to perish for the want of help from our mates? Those women and girls who cheered us when we left will surely not do anything to prevent us returning to them, which we cannot do if we don't get help." I fail to see how any woman who has a son, brother, husband, or lover at the front can vote "No," unless they don't want their boys to return. Vote "Yes," and your boy will soon return and you (the women of Australia) will be the means of bringing your loved ones back to you sooner, and they will be able again to clasp your hand and thank you for the help you gave them by voting "Yes."

I am, etc.,
ALFRED J. C. M'GRATH.
40 Market-street, city.

ORCHARD LABOUR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—While fully recognising that we must obtain men somewhere to maintain our fighting strength at the front, I would strongly appeal to magistrates in farming and fruit-growing districts to use a wise discretion in regard to the exemption of an only remaining son on a farm or orchard, who is supporting his parents (aged, of course), and also helping in the best possible way to support the community. It is really the long experience and knowledge of the land that makes his place hard to fill. Such cases as this (I presume there are not very many) should, I think, receive favourable consideration, in preference to only sons, who are not now, or never have, supported their parents, and are not even living with them. The Hills districts in Central Cumberland have come forward splendidly in supplying men under the voluntary system, so that a wise discretion in the direction indicated would save a very serious state of things in this district.

I am, etc., A. DAVIS.
Castle Hill, Oct. 20.

A cartoon stuck on the walls of Cologne, representing King George with a bag of gold, President Poincare with a sack of grain, King Albert with a fat pig, and the German Emperor with an empty jam pot, has given great annoyance to the local authorities, who have offered a reward of £50 for the discovery of the author.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

Racegoers are catered for in the metropolitan district this afternoon, with horse-racing at Warwick Farm, and pony and galloway racing at Kensington under the management of the Rosebery Racing Club; the Newcastle Jockey Club holds its meeting in aid of the local charities on the Broadmeadow course, and the Goulburn Racing Club holds its spring reunion. The spring meeting of the Victoria Amateur Turf Club will be brought to a close at Caulfield; the Western Australian Turf Club holds its anniversary meeting at Perth; at Adelaide a reunion in aid of the Repatriation of Soldiers' Fund will take place; and the Albion Park Jockey Club will provide an afternoon's sport at Brisbane.

The programme for the November meeting of the Rosehill Racing Club on the 4th prox. demands the attention of owners and trainers on Monday next, for at 4 p.m. nominations close for the six events, the prize money for which aggregates 700 sovs.

Racing will be resumed on the suburban tracks this afternoon, when the Warwick Farm October Meeting promises a pleasant outing for metropolitan sporting folk. The transit arrangements include special trains leaving the Central Railway Station at 11.15 a.m. (horses), 11.53 a.m., 12.6, 12.20, 12.40, 12.51, 12.56 and 1.8 p.m. (passengers). The 11.53 a.m., 12.51, and 1.8 p.m. stop to pick up passengers at Strathfield; the 12.6 p.m. stops at Granville, and the 12.56 p.m. stops at Granville and Fairfield. The track is reported excellent going, and the sport commences at 2.10 p.m., with the Maiden Handicap, in which Court Favourite, Snow King, and Bangalore may occupy the places; Sweet Malt, Barraconda, and Bay Rum may get home as named in the Liverpool Mile; the places in the Juvenile Handicap may go to Earlstine, Reel On, and Koorda; Royal Parade, Medley, and Dollar Dictator may pass the judge, in order, for the Warwick Farm Handicap; Knight o' Reel, Bonnie Chance, and Pretty Mary may divide the honours in the Farm Stakes; and Applique, Carino, and Orsaka may claim the attention of the judge at the close of the Pace Welter.

The Menangle Park Racing Club holds its next fixture on the 31st inst., and for the six events on the card, 220 sovs. prize money has been provided. Entries will be received up to 4 p.m. on Monday next by the secretary, Mr. Edwin Woodbury.

The Newcastle Jockey Club holds its charities meeting on the Broadmeadows Racecourse this afternoon, and the programme for the occasion promises large fields and interesting sport. Metropolitan visitors can reach the scene of action in good time by the trains leaving the Central Railway Station at 6.40, 8.15, 8.35, and 9.20 a.m.

Owing to the continued occupation of the Rosebery racecourse by the military authorities, the Rosebery pony and galloway fixture for this afternoon will be held on the Kensington racecourse, to which special trams run at short intervals from Circular Quay and the Railway-square loop. The track is good going, and the general arrangements up to the regular standard. The number of entries necessitates several events being run in divisions, and, consequently, the sport commences at 1 p.m. The results may be anticipated as under:—Maiden Handicap: First division, Ivy Geranium or Lady Zillah; second division, Related or Larry Field; third division, Miss Brew or Phillip's Chance. Flying Handicap: First division, Cerise Colours or Loud Report; second division, Lord Rouvray or Creolin. Fourteen-one Handicap: Courtfield, Careymoore, Portfield. Encourage Stakes: First Division, Zonam or Miss Ariki; second division, Flying Wilga or Devatine. Rosebery Handicap: First division, Postelite o Wombah; second division, Mirzan or Lord Castlereagh. Fourteen-two Handicap: Bobadil Maid, Bonnie Prudence, Plantrosa. Approved Stakes: Bob Steel, Sally, Brussa.

J.E.G. (Erskineville).—The starting price of Kooya in the Emo Hurdle, at Caulfield, was 5 to 1 against.

Our Melbourne correspondent wires that the horse most talked about for the Caulfield Cup is Torbane, who is a slightly better favourite than his stable-mate, Lavendo; Shepherd King and Polycrates are also commanding a good deal of attention; and of the others the chances of Sasanof, Bee, and Cetigne are mostly discussed.

P.F.H. (Mudgee).—Orry Smith started at 8 to 1 for the Macquarie Handicap at the Wellington Jockey Club's meeting.

Recently that successful New Zealand jockey, B. Deeley, received an offer to ride Kilboy in the V.R.C. Derby, and intimated his acceptance of it. He was to leave New Zealand yesterday, but during the afternoon cabled to a friend in Sydney stating that he had decided to turn the offer down and to remain in the Dominion for the spring meeting.

Messrs. Wm. Inglis and Son report having sold privately to J. Morgan, the Mascot trainer, the racehorse Dungannon, by Warroo from Dunure.

LATEST SCRATCHINGS.

The following scratchings were notified yesterday:—

WILLIAMSTOWN SPRING MEETING.

Williamstown Cup: Garlin, Karanaud King, Treadwell.

VICTORIA AMATEUR TURF CLUB.

SPRING MEETING.

THIRD (CUP) DAY.

The spring reunion of the Victoria Amateur Turf Club will be brought to a close at Caulfield this afternoon, and a very interesting programme, which includes the race for the Cup should furnish high-class sport. The events on the card will be started as under:—Oby Hurdle, 1.30; Gwyn Nursery, 2.30; Caulfield Cup, 3.15; Wyuna Steeplechase, 3.55; and Windsor Handicap, 5.10 p.m.

The battle for the Oby Hurdle, with which proceedings open, should be fought out among Kooya, Home Rule, Coronatus, and Bundong, and the numbers may be hoisted for Coronatus, Kooya, and Home Rule.

Interesting contest is foreshadowed for the Gwyn Nursery, in which Thrice, Franzac, Erastus, Percolator, and Hay Lass should play prominent parts, and the judge may declare for Percolator, Franzac, and Hay Lass.

The retirement of Garlin, Uncle Sam, and Andelosia from the Caulfield Cup leaves 25 eligibles, and should all start the field will be nine more than took part in last year's race, won by imported Lavendo, under the handy impost of 7st 2lb. The son of Chaucer is now top-weight, with 9st 4lb, to which he is fully entitled, and recent public form indicates that he will have to be reckoned with on this occasion. His owners are also represented in the race by imported Torbane, who has also displayed good form by winning the Coongy Handicap with 4lb more than his Cup weight in the saddle, and with such a well-performed pair to represent them, Messrs. A. and G. Tye should have a good look in for the stake. Cetigne has his full complement in 9st 2lb, but he is in good trim, and may be trusted to run well. Amata is not attractive, nor are the prospects of Wallalo, Green Cap, Aides, and Blague; but Polycrates, with a couple of pounds less than he carried into second place in the Metropolitan, must be very dangerous towards the end of the trip. Bee should have a fair chance under 8st 2lb, and, with 7st 7lb, Wolaroi has not been overburdened. Shepherd King next strikes the eye as having a fair chance, and, of the others, Sasanof and Rael Locin seem most attractive. The race appears pretty open, and the finish may be fought out among Lavendo, Cetigne, Polycrates, Bee, Shepherd King, Torbane, and Sasanof; and Lavendo or Torbane may win, with Polycrates and Sasanof in the minor situations, unless Cetigne intervenes.

New York, Westaway, Louvre, and Rendrock may have most to say in the settlement of the Wyuna Steeplechase, and the places may go to Louvre, Rendrock, and New York.

Merimee, Reval, Headwind, Ettefred, and Linass should bear the brunt of the battle in the Windsor Handicap; and Merimee, Headwind, and Linass may pass the post in order.

The meeting winds up with the Moora Welter, in which Lord Bobadil, Pistolier, Gold Painting, and Vibratory seem to have the best prospects, and the judge may decide for Vibratory, Pistolier, and Gold Painting.

The programme is appended:—

Oby Hurdle Race, 2m 1f and 64yds.—Obi, 11st 9lb; Kooya, 11st 9lb; Wondergraph, 11st 2lb; Muster Regal, 11st 1lb; Home Rule, 10st 11lb; Ballista, 10st 11lb; Elsbon, 10st 9lb; Rosspeal, 10st 7lb; Parral, 10st 6lb; Diavolo, 10st 5lb; [illegible], 10st 4lb; Coronatus, 10st 5lb; Hobgoblin, 10st 4lb; Cordelier, 10st 3lb; Macnaughty, 9st 11lb; Bundong, 9st 11lb; Pink Lady, 9st 8lb; Rivenrock, 9st 7lb; Sir Prim, 9st 5lb; Ramoth, 9st 4lb; Galong, 9st 3lb; Aimo, 9st 3lb; Rippling Avon, 9st; Miss Marcia, 9st; King's Cheer, 9st.

The B Class race is to be known as the Cox Handicap. The winning boat will receive a trophy donated by Corporal C. Cox, who is shortly leaving for the front.

BOXING.

A heavyweight contest between Tom McMahon and Jim Tracey will be the principal attraction at the Stadium to-night, and they will take their corners at 8.30. The preliminaries will commence at 7.45, the first will be between Eddie McLean and Private Grant, and the second pair will be Roy Smith and Billy Ross.

BILLIARDS.

F. LINDRUM, JUNR., v GRAY.

The match of 16,000 up between Fred Lindrum, junior, and George Gray, was continued at Messrs. Heiron and Smith's Tournament Hall, George-street, yesterday. When play ceased the scores stood:—Gray (in play), 6619; Lindrum, 6510.

AUSTRAL STRING QUARTET.

The third concert of the seventh season of the Austral String Quartet reached the height of its interest last night in the Tschaikowsky "Trio for Violin, 'Cello, and Piano, in A Minor" (op. 50), for, although earlier in the evening some beautiful old Italian music had been heard, its effect was remote, as compared with the genial personal near-at-hand sympathy of this Russian composition of our own day. The work was elegiac in character, being inscribed "to the memory of a great artist," a reference to Nicholas Rubinstein, Tschaikowsky's great friend and adviser. This sad loss he regarded as a malign stroke of that fate which Gorki describes in one of his tales as "over our life line the fisherman is over the river. It throws to our vanity a bait with a hook. And man greedily swallows the bait, and is drawn out upon the bank. And he beats himself against the earth for a little while—and then lies still."

Messrs. Cyril Monk, Carl Gotch, and F. Carlton Fay performed the music with reciprocal feeling for the task in hand, and the result was entirely delightful. Where the strings took each other up in phrases that were exchanged repeatedly before coming into the possession of the pianist, the final ensemble of harmony was enchanting. Yet this ensemble, which sounded so smooth and simple, formed a masterly example of Tschaikowsky's skill in the combination of the melodic phrases, and the flowing smoothness of the effect was due to the skill of the players. The first movement entered upon a new phase with the fortissimo solo for pianoforte, and the following ensemble was inspired by an exultation which communicated itself to the listener. There was also the "Theme, with Variations," and the Finale, when efforts of the artists were deservedly applauded.

Good work also was done by Mr. Monk in the Tartini "Concerto in D Minor," and by Mr. Gotch in Marcello's "Sonata for 'Cello," the honours of which were shared with Mr. Fay. The pianist played Schumann's familiar "Symphonic Studies for Piano," a heavy, solid German classic, which is becoming rusty with time, and will some day be relegated to the class-room. Mr. Walter Thorman ably accompanied the Tartini Concerto.

NORTH COAST BREAD.

The Federal Prices Board has fixed the following prices at which bread may be sold in a large number of North Coast towns:—When purchased at shops or bakehouses, and paid for within seven days, 1lb loaf 2½d, 2lb loaf 4d; when delivered and paid for within seven days, 1lb loaf 3d, 2lb loaf 4½d. The places to which the new prices apply are mentioned in an advertisement.

Norway has decided to prohibit the general export of fish. Licenses will be granted for export, but the quantities of fish exported will be regulated by the quantities of materials, such as coal, petrol, oil, and tools, which the Norwegian fishing boats receive in return.

AMUSEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"To-night's the Night," of which there will be a matinee on Wednesday next, continues to prosper at Her Majesty's Theatre, the sources of popularity being the innumerable songs and dances, gay costumes, and the vivacious efforts of Misses Brunton, Fane, Eaton, Bradley, and Morrison, Messrs. Workman, Fisher, Greig, Maguire, Plunket, and Frith, with various specialty artists.

CRITERION THEATRE.

As soon as the last week of "Romance" was announced that comedy of sentiment and emotion drew crowded houses again, and the run is being somewhat extended on that account. Madge Fabian will bid farewell to Australia on Friday week, so that these opportunities of seeing this clever actress in association with Frank Harvey and Sidney Stirling should be eagerly embraced.

"DAMAGED GOODS."

The next production at the Criterion Theatre will be "Damaged Goods," a social problem play from the French of Brieux, which will be produced on November 4, with Stephen E. Scanlon as the doctor, Lewis Willoughby as George Dupont, Sidney Stirling as Deputy Loches, and Gertrude Boswell as the Nurse. On Nov. 2 there will be an invitation matinee to the learned professions and Ms.L.A.

THEATRE ROYAL.

Beaumont Smith's drama, "While the Billy Boils," which happily embodies much of the spirit and many of the leading characters in Henry Lawson's Australian stories and verses, is now entering upon the closing week of its successful season. There will be a matinee to-day, with the farewell on Friday next, and the company will then leave for Melbourne, where the play will form the Cup attraction at the King's Theatre.

PALACE THEATRE.

Allen Doone has been fortunate in the result of his flying visit to New York earlier in the year, for "Happy Go Lucky O'Shea" is delighting large audiences at the Palace Theatre with the romance of the war story of the old Napoleonic days, and the love scenes with Edna Keeley are charmingly played. The Irish tenor is successful with such entirely new songs as "The Kilkenny Cats" and "The Night Bird's Cooing."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"Faust" will be staged at 2 p.m. to-day, under the Ben J. Fuller direction, at the Grand Opera House, with "Lucia" at night. The ninth week will give "Carmen" on Monday, "Cavalleria" and "Pagliacci" on Tuesday, "Lucia" for Wednesday's matinee, "Ernani" (first time) at night, "Trovatore" on Thursday, "Boheme" on Friday, "Favorita" next Saturday's matinee, and "Il Barbiere" at night.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

This afternoon and evening, at the Tivoli Theatre, the Follies will vary their bright new entertainment, which shows Vera Pearce as Omar Khayyam's youthful grandson, very smart and engaging, with a bevy of choral maidens, as a society woman entangled in lively colloquy with Walter Weems and Al Prince, and as an early Victorian curiosity urging the claims of another little drink with Jack Cannot and George Welch.

RED DANDIES, GARDEN THEATRE.

The Dandies at the Garden Theatre gave their first change of programme last evening, when every item was enthusiastically received. Mr. Claude Dampier, besides character sketches, was also associated with Miss Irene Vere in duets at the piano. Misses Marcelline Boulais, Evelyn Ward, Messrs. Oliver Peacock, Harry Borradale, John Welby, Reg. Hawthorne, and Miss Rima Young (at the piano) assisted with success.

PAUL DUFAULT'S FAREWELL SEASON.

This evening M. Paul Dufault, whose brief return to this country has greatly enhanced the interest of the musical year, will open his farewell season at the Town Hall, where his concerts under the Frederic Shipman direction will take place on Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday next. The Franco-Canadian tenor's choice of songs to-night will include "Celeste Aida," "Peace Triumphal," "Le Baiser," "The Birth of Spring," and other favourite numbers and novelties. Miss Pauline Bindley in beautiful songs, Miss Florence Scapini as pianist, and Mr. Harold Whittle as pianist will assist. The plans are at Paling's.

Their Excellencies the Governor-General and Lady Helen Munro Ferguson will attend the Paul Dufault concert at the Town Hall to-night.

THE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA.

An attractive programme will be presented at the final concert of the Symphony Orchestra's present season this afternoon in the Town Hall. Mr. Slapoffski will conduct his large body of professional players in Beethoven's "Leonore" overture, No. 3, the Symphony in G minor by Kalinnikoff, and Stanford's "First Irish Rhapsody." Miss Lottie Hyam will play Weber's "Concertstuck" with orchestra, and Mr. A. W. Arlon will be heard in the "Swedish Concerto" for flute. Miss Vera Bedford will sing "Oh, My Heart is Weary."

GRACE STAFFORD'S WAR RECITAL.

This evening at St. James's Hall, in aid of the 55th Battalion Comforts Fund, the Grace Stafford Strollers will perform "Penelope." The cast of Maugham's bright comedy will include Messrs. Meadmore, Manchester, Mattell, McAnemy, Madden, Misses Stephens, Mackenzie, Hingston, Lane, and Stafford ("Penelope"). The plan is at Paling's.

SOCIETY OF MAGICIANS.

The Australian Society of Magicians will present their annual "Wonder Night" by the M's at the Repertory Theatre this evening, when an attractive programme will include some thirty artists in music and novel surprises. Soldiers' parties can be arranged, and special concession tickets may be obtained at Paling's.

MISS DEGOTARDI'S PUPILS.

The pupils of Miss Daisy Degotardi gave an invitation recital at St. James's Hall on Thursday, before a large audience. Miss Mildred Woodley gave Rachmaninoff's best-known prelude, Miss Woodley's second effort, Liza Lehmann's quaint fragment, "In the Owl's Turret," furnished a far better performance, and the "atmosphere" of the item seemed well preserved. Among other fairly advanced pupils Miss Gwen De Dear gave Liszt's 11th Rhapsody, and a Czerny study. Miss Degotardi, assisted by Mr. Vern Barnett, gave her own Rhapsody in F minor, at the close of which there was considerable applause. The assisting artists included Messrs. H. Thurloe Farmer, Harry Thomas, G. Vern Barnett, and Farnsworth Hall. Other pupils whose names appeared on the programme included Sylvia and Gracie Kessler, Lovie Lawler, Bessie Storey, Bessie M'Donald, Enid Bow, Hessie and Dorothy Lewis, Mabel Newbery, and Master Sid Hayman.

MR. ILLINGWORTH'S RECITAL.

On Monday evening next Mr. Nelson Illingworth will give his final song recital of the 1916 season, when the programme will include the great song cycle, Schubert's "The Winter Journey." This cycle comprises 24 songs. The recital will be preceded by a short lecture on Schubert and his work by Mr. Verbrugghen. The plan is at Nicholson's.

"WITH OUR BOYS AT THE FRONT."

A lecture will be delivered by Mr. J. J. Virgo, now field secretary for the British National Council, Y.M.C.A., in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next, at 8 o'clock. En route to Australia Mr. Virgo visited the Grand Fleet and the boys at the front, and he has a thrilling story to relate. There will be a musical programme by Miss Carrie Lanceley and M. Albert Goossens, which will also include items by the Engineers' Military Band. Admission is free, but the plan is at the Y.M.C.A., Pitt-street, and seats are being rapidly reserved.

NURSE CAVELL MEMORIAL CONCERT.

At the Town Hall on Thursday, November 2, being unavoidably postponed to that date, the Nurse Cavell memorial concert, of which Mrs. Watson Holdship and Mr. William Johnston are hon. secretaries, and Mme. Verbrugghen hon. organiser of the music, will attract a large audience. Mr. Andrew Black will reappear. The famous baritone will sing twice. The Verbrugghen String Quartette will be a special attraction, as also the Vieuxtemps solo by Mr. Henri Verbrugghen. The Madrigal Society, under W. Arundel Orchard, will contribute three numbers, including the beautiful Hebridean "Death Croon." Mme. Verbrugghen will introduce three new British folk songs; Mr. Joseph Bradley will be heard as a solo pianist; Mr. James Messeas will play choice 'cello pieces. The plan is at Paling's.

MELBA SCHOLARSHIP.

Mr. Oswald Anderson, who has returned from a visit to Melbourne, gives the final results as follows:—Winner of the Melba scholarship, Miss Leach (Adelaide); winner of second exhibition scholarship, Miss Muir (Melbourne); honourable mention, Miss Barlow (Sydney), Miss Hammond (Sydney), Miss Scott (Melbourne), Miss Ireland (Sydney). Miss Leach is a possessor of a remarkably good voice, full and rich, with an extensive range, going from the lower F to G in alt. Madam Melba anticipates big results from the young singer.

CONSERVATORIUM OF MUSIC.

Owing to its enthusiastic reception last Wednesday, and to the generally expressed desire, the Beethoven Quartet, No. 12, op. 127 (Posthumous) will be repeated next Wednesday, at the director's seventeenth public lecture-concert.

The third concert of the series of director's choral and orchestral concerts will be held on Saturday, November 4, at 3 p.m. Plans for both concerts are at Paling's.

REPERTORY THEATRE.

On Thursday evening, November 2, the Walter Bentley Players will give a condensed version of "The Taming of the Shrew," with Walter Bentley as Petruchio and Elsie Prince as Katharine. A powerful sketch entitled "The Strike," or "Sabotage and its Results," will be included in the programme. The plan is at Anderson's.

GLEBE RESCUE HOME RECITAL.

Mr. Harry Thomas will give a humorous and dramatic recital in St. Aidan's Hall, Johnston-street, Annandale, Thursday evening next, at 8 o'clock. The proceeds will be in aid of the Church of England Rescue Home, Glebe Point.

PYMBLE CECILIA LADIES' CHOIR.

An entertainment at which Miss Ada Baker conducted the Pymble Cecilia Ladies' Choir, at the Chatswood Town Hall, on September 9 last, realised £60 6s 11d. After paying expenses (£10 2s 11d) the sum of £50 4s was handed over to the Pymble branch of the War Chest.

MISS GWYN SMITH'S RECITAL.

Miss Gwyn Smith will give a humorous and dramatic recital in St. James's Hall on Wednesday evening next, assisted by several of her best pupils, including Misses Meg Carroll, Florence Robinson, Doreen Asprey, Miss Eileen Mullen, Ella M'Kenzie, and Mr. Warwick M'Kenzie will be the assisting artists. The plan is at Paling's.

"THE SENTIMENTAL BLOKE."

Messrs. J. and N. Tait announce that Mr. Lawrence Campbell (now completely recovered) will resume his recitals on Mr. C. J. Dennis's "The Sentimental Bloke" in the St. James's Hall on Saturday, November 4. Mr. Campbell has just returned from Melbourne, where he gave a successful season of nine performances of Mr. Dennis's popular book. The plans will open at Nicholson's on Monday, October 30.

MR. PHILIP WILSON'S RECITAL.

At the Conservatorium Hall on Monday, November 6, an Art Song Recital will be given by Mr. J. Philip Wilson. Assisting artists will be Mr. Frank Hutchens, Mr. Cyril Monk, and Miss Doris Easson (accompanist). The plan will open at Paling's, on October 30.

MR. FRANK HUTCHENS' RECITAL.

At the Conservatorium Hall on Monday, November 20, Mr. Frank Hutchens will give his final pianoforte recital of his season, when he will play the "Waldstein Sonata," Glazounoff's brilliant "Sonata," and other pieces. Mr. Nelson Illingworth will sing. Plan opens at Paling's on Monday.

UNION PICTURE THEATRES.

At the Crystal Palace, commencing Monday, the week will be devoted to "The Wolf Woman," featuring Louise Glade in an Oriental realistic story, with the comedy film "The Pawnbroker," showing Charles Chaplin in business as "some loan shark;" and the English and Australian topical gazettes. At the Lyric Theatre, Monday to Wednesday, the serial drama "The Iron Claw" will bring in two fresh episodes, and the British war picture "The Big Push" will be shown. This feature will run through the whole week. At the Empress Theatre "The Big Push" will also run through next week, with "The Feathered Nest" for the first three days, and the comedy piece "His Dukeship Mr. Jack" for the second part of the week.

THE STRAND.

"The Pretty Sister of Jose" is the title of Marguerite Clark's latest photo-drama. It is a dramatisation of Frances Hodgson Burnett's picturesque romance of old Spain, and will be screened at the Strand, Pitt-street, and the Majestic, Hyde Park, all next week. In the role of the dainty Spanish belle of a thousand moods and whims Miss Clark attains one of the artistic successes of her screen career. The title role has been so devised as to exhibit to the fullest extent the many capabilities of the magnetic little star.

WEST'S OLYMPIA.

The children's matinee will commence at 2.30 to-day as usual at West's Olympia, in Oxford-street, with films for children. To-night will mark the final screening of a programme consisting of the Triangle 5-reel drama "The Thoroughbred," featuring Frank Keenan as the fine old Colonel, the second series of the "Iron Claw," entitled "The House of Unhappiness," and the Triangle comedy, "The Waiters' Ball." In addition the latest Australian Gazette is also on the programme. On Monday a Bessie Barriscale film entitled "Home" is to be shown.

AUSTRALIAN PICTURE PALACE.

THE PALLADIUM.

The Palladium continues to draw a merry throng of dancers, and will be open as usual to-day.

KEMP'S BUCKJUMPING SHOW.

Kemp's Buckjumping Show, which is occupying Wirth's, Ltd., new Hippodrome, continues to attract amusement seekers. The performers include:—Chester, the talking horse; Miss Kemp, the champion horsewoman; Record, the champion outlaw; Hector Saddler, the high-jumping horses, Professor Kemp, Tipperary, the clown pony, and others.

COUNTRY PRESS CONFERENCE.

The executive of the N.S.W. Country Press Association has resolved to adopt a scheme of technical education as suggested by a joint committee of the Typographical Association and that of the country press for apprentices and others; also to see the Premier in opposition to clause 2 of the proposed Amended Defamation Bill now before Parliament, it being held that to prosecute a newspaper proprietor summarily for publishing an item held by a country J.P. to be abusive or insulting without affording the right to plead truth, justification, or public interest was a retrograde step.

CONGREGATIONAL UNION.

The fifty-first annual session of the Congregational Union of New South Wales will begin on Monday evening, in the Pitt-street Church, when the Rev. Percival Watson will preach. The business session will commence on Tuesday morning. The conference will extend over a week, ending on Tuesday, October 31.

A Russian decree liberates from military service the members of the editorial staffs of Russian newspapers on the ground that their work in "organising the whole country for the vigorous prosecution of the war" is of great national importance.

AUSTRALIA'S PERIL.

Statements are being published challenging my "anti-conscriptionist" attitude, because of my efforts to raise the new 50,000 volunteer army for the "Spring offensive" that was to end the war. My answer is as follows:—
(1) In May I submitted by memorandum to the Government urgent reasons why the manhood of Australia should be trained for Home Defence.
(2) On June 21 the Federal Cabinet unanimously decided to do so. (See Melbourne "Argus," 22/6/'16.)
(3) On July 27 Senator Pearce made a public announcement in accordance with Nos. 1 and 2, which was reported in Melbourne "Age," 28/7/'16, under the following headings: "DEFENCE OF AUSTRALIA," "FUTURE WARS," "SENATOR PEARCE'S WARNING," "NEED FOR PREPAREDNESS," "GENERAL STAFF TO BE FORMED," "A SCHEME OF ORGANISATION."
(4) Mr. Hughes returned about a week later. No reasons have been given for abandoning the arrangements made as per 2 and 3.
(5) So far only three Ministers, Messrs. Hughes, Pearce, and Webster, have spoken in favour of deporting Australia's manhood. Six Ministers, Messrs. Higgs, Jensen, Russell, O'Malley, Gardiner, and Tudor are known to be opposed to it.
(6) The most ample evidence in support of the above is given at my meetings, but not reported.
J. H. CATTS, Macdonell House, Sydney.

ACCOUNTANCY.
ACCOUNTANCY.
Never was there such a great and persistent demand for trained men capable of taking charge of an office.
It is the duty of every young office man who cannot take up military duties to qualify himself, and thus give his best services where it is badly wanted.
Business must be kept going to provide the funds—and competent men are required to supervise the office and costing systems.
Every man who qualifies makes his services a hundred per cent more valuable, and incidentally secures a high grade position and salary.
The value of our teaching is well known throughout Australia, and "H. and R." trained Accountants and Bookkeepers always win the best places.
You cannot do better than to enrol for our Complete Course in Accountancy, and qualify under our guidance as quickly as possible.

A VERY SERIOUS PROBLEM.
IS YOUR BILLET BETTER NOW than it was last year?
Are you progressing, standing still, or sliding back? Will you be in a better position next year? It means everything to you to be able to answer these questions satisfactorily.
IF YOU ARE A SENSIBLE MAN, you must admit that you can't get a better position unless you are worth it. In other words, you will have to gain more knowledge before you can hope to gain more money.
WHY NOT GAIN MORE KNOWLEDGE, and earn more money? Perhaps the only difficulty you have is in deciding upon the subjects that you should study, and the College that is to instruct you. If you are in search of helpful information upon this matter, you are one of the men for whom we prepared our special illustrated book, "HOW TO CHOOSE A CAREER."
We naturally believe our College to be the best—our many years' success at Public competitive exams., and the eloquent testimony of our thousands of successful students, should make YOU feel that you will be safe to entrust YOUR preparation for a better position to
